Palm Beach

Dear Buster

Mama says I may return to New York at once and that I may come to visit you at Brown hurst-on-Creek. Palm Beach is all right for society folks but it is a frightful bore to children, for children are natural and cant see any fun in being dressed up all the time and sitting about with pin heads and gossips. Mrs Grundy is here and people are trying to out dress and snub each other as a regular pastime. Mama plays bridge, golf and hob. Do you play hob? It is the new game. Every one goes mobileing and belongs to the time wasters club. I will wire you when I expect to arrive and you can meet me. I just love a farm and you.

Lovingly Mary Jane.

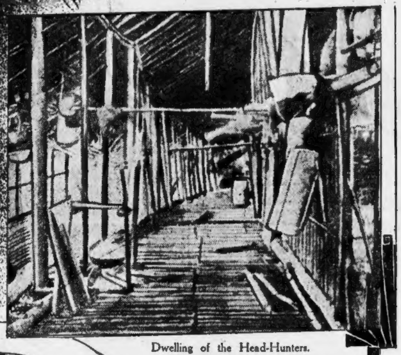
MY WEDDING TRIP AMONG THE HEAD HUNTERS

How a Brave Little Bride Dared to Spend Her Honeymoon Among the Savage Tribes of Borneo, Although They Had Never Before Seen a White Woman.

Out for a Day's Hunting.



Dwelling of the Head-Hunters.

IMAGINE, if you can, the misgivings of an exceedingly refined and well-bred young society woman whirled away from London immediately after her wedding to an English army officer and carried off to the dense wilds of Borneo to spend her honeymoon among the head-hunters.

Head-hunters are so called because they make a practice of decorating their homes with the heads of their victims, men, women and even children. The more heads one of these fierce tribesmen show, the more he is entitled to respectful consideration in his community.

Mrs. Dorothy Cator, the young bride referred to in the first paragraph, learned all this and a great many other interesting things about the head-hunters while spending her honeymoon among them. She was the very first white woman these people had ever seen, and, instead of wishing to add her head to their collection, they treated her with a respect closely akin to veneration.

Instead of being anxious to escape from such surroundings, Mrs. Cator actually spent two years among the head-hunters, eating their food, learning their language and customs. She has decided that for a wedding trip it was the most novel and delightful one imaginable.

Mrs. Cator has just returned from Borneo, and has completed an instructive account of her adventures under the title, "Everyday Life Among the Head-hunters," which is being published in book form by Longmans, Green & Co., New York and London. Some of the most interesting portions of Mrs. Cator's wonderful honeymoon book are printed on this page to-day.

By Dorothy Cator.

A FEW years ago Borneo was believed to have a brilliant future before it, and Dick was supposed to have done very well for himself when he went out there as a Government representative. He did not at once find diamond mines outside his door, which was disappointing, but at the expiration of three years he returned home "on urgent private business" to fetch me.

We were married in London, and left England the same day for Borneo. Although it was to be our wedding trip, I must confess, with all respect to Dick, it was the most miserable day of my life. I had heard many remarkable accounts of the head-hunters of Borneo, and as Dick assured me that I was to be the first white woman ever to set foot in their country, I had misgivings from the very commencement of our honeymoon.

The most interesting part of our life in Borneo was spent right up in the interior, in the country of the head hunters. Our way lay up the great Kinabatangan River, and the dugout native boat we used had a nasty way of tilting half over, which, in a river full of crocodiles thirsting for your blood, was not a particularly pleasant prospect.

One experience we had while going up the river nearly cost me my life. We had rapids to row through, some of which were anything but easy, and in one place we suddenly swamped. The Dyaks, our guides and rowers, kept their heads and, almost before I realized what had happened, hauled me up on a rock which was sticking out of the water near by. We were all, of course, soaked through, but the men wore too little clothing for that to make much difference. The whole thing was over so quickly that my husband and his men had no idea we had capsized until we stopped later in the day and told them of my first adventure in Borneo.

One night we came to a place in the river where the sandy banks made bathing very inviting. As the people told us no crocodiles ever came up that far, in we dived. We were having a splendid swim when my husband saw a telltale ripple on the smooth surface of the river near by. He began to shout and splash with all his might as he swam toward me, and he dragged me ashore just as the ugly snout and gaping jaws of a huge crocodile ap-pin the river not two feet from where I been.

native settlement where we were to our honeymoon consisted of three each village, with all its different living for safety in one very long the chief of which we were taken. like a very long shed, as it was upon piles ten or twelve feet from ground, and had no walls, only a floor split bamboos laid an inch or two very convenient for dislodging the and for throwing down any odds and you might want to get rid of. This had a very high palm leaf roof, which and right down below the floor, and so, you were underneath, entirely hid of there being one.

en we among the Murats we were welcomed with great courtesy by the chief and given the further end of his village, or rather house, to live and sleep in; and as we stood at the top looking down, a sea of faces met my eyes—men, women and children gazing with bulging eyes on the first white woman they had ever seen.

They had heard of white men, and some few of them had seen them, and they certainly were extraordinary enough; but a white woman! words evidently failed them, as their wide-open mouths and vacant faces testified. Except from our own voices not a sound broke the dead silence with which those hundreds of eyes watched our every movement. From then until the day we left we had absolutely no privacy. Their various works fortunately called them away sometimes, but they were determined to lose nothing, and I was never without an audience.

A Strange Lodging House.

I was a constant source of excitement to them, and one day when I was sitting in the house a very old woman could no longer bear the suspense of not knowing whether white people felt the same as black, so she summoned up all her courage and bore down on me. The other head-hunters were delighted with her pluck, and thrilled to know the result of her investigation. She came nearer and nearer in a creepy, squirming way, as if she was treading on hot coals, and when she was quite close she suddenly put out a skinny finger and touched my hand, and then drew back very quickly as if I had burned her. I laughed, and my audience all joined in, delighted.

My Husband in Our Bush Drawing Room.

Mrs. Dorothy Cator.

We went to bed about 9 o'clock, our heads on our pillows and loaded revolvers under our pillows, but we never saw any sign of unfriendliness. If there had been, they had us entirely at their mercy, and we should have been dead and buried some weeks before any one could even have suspected there was anything wrong.

At night we all slept in one serried row, packed like sardines, the whole way down this hugely long house. I slept at the top then my husband, then all the other men quite close up to us, only divided by a mosquito curtain and a shallow step, and our only means of going in and out was by more or less swarming a very thin, nearly perpendicular, trunk of a tree with notches cut in it. This was stuck up at the extreme end of the house, right away from us, and I shall never forget it, as I was very ill once up there, and the picking my way in a half-fainting condition at night over all those sleeping men whenever I wanted to get into the air and the swarming backward and forward at the other end, is still almost like a nightmare to me.

Head-Hunters' Grand Ball.

This all living together, in civilized countries, would mean endless rows, but all the time we were living with these head-hunters we were struck with their gentleness and the extraordinary peacefulness of their home life. Countries outside the pale of civilization certainly teach us a great deal. In their home life love and contentment reign. They are still unenlightened enough to be moral. All the time I was there I never heard one ungentle word in the whole house, nor saw a cross look among the children or grown-ups.

After we had lived with the head-hunters for some time and had got to be very friendly with them we gave a ball. The preparations were very simple, as, except pengasi—a strong native spirit made of rice—we had nothing to get ready but bananas, rice, sweet potatoes and plenty of coarse tobacco.

The day came, but our guests, who had been invited to appear at 9 o'clock at night, began to arrive from all parts of the country at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. They came swarming up the hill and into the room where I was resting exactly six hours before we expected or wanted them. My husband got rid of them and we had peace until the hour for the ball. I wore a white dressing gown and my husband something equally ball-like.

Our guests came rushing in, none of them saying, "How'd you do;" they just squatted down all around and began to chew betel-nut and stare at us. They offered me some, and of course I accepted, and we chewed solemnly opposite each other till I found an opportunity to throw mine away without hurting their feelings. I think the sight of a white woman formed an epoch in their lives from which everything before or after would date.

To vary the monotony we told one of our Dyak policemen that the people might dance, but they didn't seem the least interested when he explained to them what we had said. They neither spoke nor moved and for a long time their eyes were fixed on me. We were glad when they asked us to come and start the pengasi drinking. It was in a huge stone jar and our glasses were joints of large bamboo. It was very good, and the more you drank the grander you were supposed to feel.

But still no dancing! We were wondering what on earth to do next, when an old man, without uttering a sound, suddenly got up and began pacing slowly around in a circle; then another man joined him, and another, till there were one hundred or more men following each other in grave silence. Then the women joined in, one at a time, too, but the moment the first woman arrived they turned around, and starting a weird chant, took each other's arms, forming a great ring—a ring they never broke, except to let a single person in or out, until 6 o'clock the next morning. Their dance was a kind of see-saw goose step backward and forward, and those looking on, as well as the dancers themselves, accompanied the monotonous swing of their bodies with a long drawn-out, wailing funeral dirge, broken occasionally by a flourishing cry from some woman; but the men never varied their drone the whole night through. My husband and I joined them for a few minutes, which pleased them greatly.

After a few hours we were so wearied and our guests seemed so thoroughly satisfied that we made the Dyaks responsible and went to bed. I can't say that we slept much, and when we came back at 5 o'clock in the morning, the same dance and the same droning were still going on, but I never saw such a wreck of a feast. At about 6:30 o'clock the dance broke up and our guests departed helter-skelter, but three or four of the whole company thinking it necessary to say good-by.

Heads as Decorations.

I don't want to stand up for head-hunters. It isn't nice. We civilized nations call it murder, and it is murder.

If a gathering of the tribes is needed to make war, a stick of wood, with as many knots as days to elapse before the rising is sent around to all the head men; and, on the other hand, if peace is proclaimed, a piece of rattan, similarly knotted, is sent.

They take the nails as well as the heads of their enemies as war trophies, and beautify their houses with them.

One day I was groping my way along one of their houses, which was very dark, when I knocked against a lot of heads of men and women all hanging up together. It wasn't at all nice. But there is nothing revolting in their head-hunting. They fight fairly. It is their chance of winning renown and showing what they are made of. The only low part of it is that a woman's head, owing to her longer hair, is prized even higher than that of a man's. The whole thing is a thrilling game to them, full of excitement and danger. There is nothing unfair in their warfare; both sides are doing the same, and man after man wins his spurs in feats of pluck and daring.

They all gave a war dance one night for our benefit. Lit up by torches, it was most weird and realistic. You could see by every movement of their bodies and every thrust of their spears that they were in imagination gloating over a fallen foe. It was their usual song of triumph after a fight, and I am afraid it must have made them yearn to be on the warpath again.

They had food twice in the day, in the middle of the morning and at sunset. The first time I saw it arrive I was dreadfully startled, as suddenly, when we were all very quiet, there was the most awful rush and scramble from every corner of the house, and I discovered two women had just arrived from the kitchen with enormous calabashes full of sweet potatoes and tapioca root, and every man at the same moment sprang at the dish and grabbed a root. They were really just like a pack of ravenous dogs after a bone, though there was plenty for every one, and the moment the rush was over they retired at once to their different corners as friendly and quiet as ever.

The Dyaks, who, with the Sikhs, form the fighting force of Borneo, are a splendid race, strong, well built, with bright, intelligent faces. Held by an iron hand, they are very valuable, but the sight of blood intoxicates them, and when they are unrestrained they are worse than wild beasts.

Their one weapon is a long, sheathed knife, the handle of which is often most beautifully carved, and then decorated with the hair of their victims. They show these scalps with the greatest pride, especially to the girls they hope to make their wives, as, unless they have some proof of their valor, the chances are that they are unceremoniously refused. Just as looking at some fox's brush reminds us of a specially good day's hunting and we run with pleasure over the different incidents of the day, they, looking at their scalps, recall with joy every detail of their fighting and—in the case of women—butchery, thrilling while it lasted, but far too quickly over. They feel no remorse, only longing for another opportunity of so distinguishing themselves.

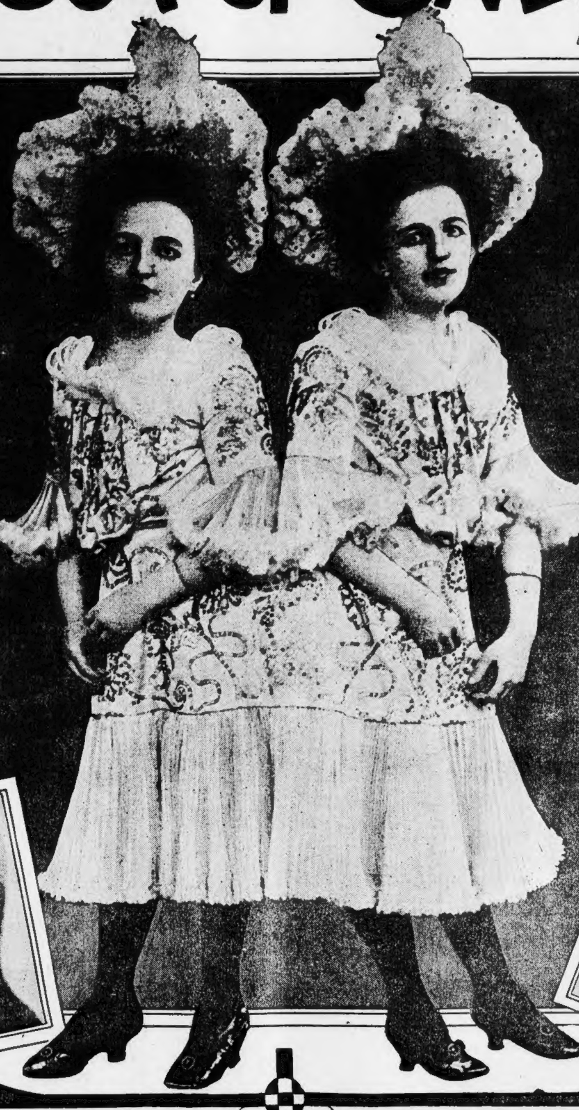
TWO PERSONS MADE OUT OF ONE.

Rosa and Josefa at the Age of Three Years.

Dr. Doyen's Operation Upon the Hindoo Twin Girls, Doodica and Radica, Who Soon Died of Tuberculosis.



Miss Rosa.

Miss Josefa.

The Very Remarkable Surgical Operation Which Has Made Two Separate Beings of the "Bohemian Twins" and Enabled Them to Think and Act Apart.

THE triumphs of surgery multiply. At what tremendous achievement will they stop? The average layman would say that to make two complete human beings out of one is a record impossible to beat.

That record has been made. The news has just come from Vienna that Professor Otakar Kukula, of the University of Prague, has successfully severed the bone and tissue and arterial link which had bound together the famous "Bohemian Twins" since their birth, more than twenty-six years ago.

That these "twins" were really one person, with two heads, four legs and two pairs of arms, was proved by tests made by scientists in nearly every large city in Europe, which showed that the brains in each head had the same thoughts, and that sensations in one pair of limbs were instantly realised by the opposite brain.

That now, since the operation which divided them, they are two complete human beings is shown by their entire mental and physical independence of each other.

Only twice before has a similar operation been attempted, and in each case the weaker side of the dual being was sacrificed. It was as though a limb had been amputated, except that the severed member retained life longer than in the case of ordinary amputations.

Bound Together Even in Death.

In the case of the "Twins," Rosa and Josefa Blazek, the surgeon's task was rendered somewhat less hazardous by the fact that the attachment was at the hips and involved no important organs. In all other cases operated on the attachment was near the waist line, and to sever it meant also to sever, not only large arteries, but certain vital organs which were common to both sides of the dual body.

When the famous Siamese twins, Eng and Chang, died in 1874, Dr. W. H. Pancoast, of Philadelphia, who performed the autopsy, said that an operation to separate the two in life would have been impossible, on account of the combination of the tissues of the liver through the connecting band.

Yet Eng and Chang, despite this physical bond, were two complete beings, all their functions being individual. One could be ill without the other suffering in health. Both married and raised large families. They thoroughly investigated the chances of recovery from a separating operation, for their temperaments clashed and they frequently quarrelled. But the verdict was invariably that they must go to the grave as they had come into the world—together.

So when Chang died from the effect of a paralytic stroke Eng sank into a stupor from which he never awakened.

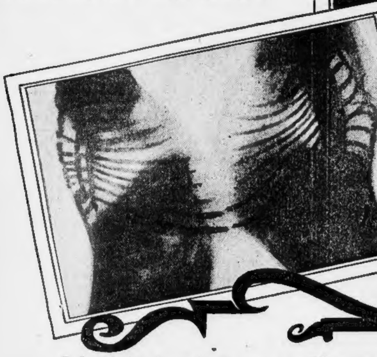
Six years ago the surgical world was much interested in the effort made to separate the "Brazilian Twins," who were two perfectly formed children except for the thick ligament which connected them at the seventh ribs. They were joined at the chests. The X-ray showed that the lungs and liver were united through the ligament.

The inconvenience of this close bondage was so great, and the children were otherwise so perfect, that a separating operation was decided upon. This was performed by Dr. Chapot-Prevost, of Paris, France, at Rio Janeiro. Maria died from pleurisy seven days after the operation, being unable to withstand the injury done to the lungs. Rosalina made a good recovery, and accompanied the surgeon back to Paris.

The failure of this first operation of the kind to preserve both lives caused surgeons generally to form the opinion that dual beings so joined together at birth were out of the reach of surgical aid.

Nevertheless, two years later a great controversy in the surgical world was created by the publicity given by Dr. Doyen, at his Paris hospital, of his operation to separate the "Hindoo Twins," two little girls born in India, and connected at the chest in much the same manner as were the "Brazilian Twins."

It was a public operation, with the accompaniment of newspaper men and cameras—and this is what caused the professional uproar. Dr. Doyen defended his course by the statement that the extraordinary importance and interest of the operation warranted the fullest publicity in detail.



Radiograph of the Curious Joint Formation of the "Hindoo Twins."

The Case of Radica and Doodica.

The "Hindoo Twins" were mere children, two little girls, Radica and Doodica. For several years they were exhibited throughout Europe. There was a flexible bony connection at the breasts and below it a juncture of part of the digestive tract. The connection of the organs was so intimate that both could survive upon nourishment taken by either one. Medicine given to one affected both alike.

After the operation Dr. Doyen said:

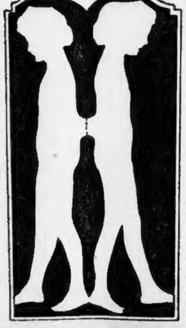
"The operation is a complete success. It was doubly hazardous on account of the state of health of the twins, both being attacked with tuberculosis. Dangerous as it was, it was certain death to both if the operation had not been performed, for Radica, the most afflicted of the two, was sapping the life of her more robust sister. Separation was a heroic remedy, and I am able to say that direct complications resulting from the operation are not to be feared. The thing we are now trying to do is to cure them of tuberculosis."

But this proved impossible in the case of poor little Radica, who soon died. There were hopes of curing Doodica, who lingered for several weeks, when she, too, succumbed—not to the operation, but to the disease. The operation lasted only twenty minutes, and was so skillful that very little blood was lost.

When the separated twins recovered from the effects of the ether they were astonished to find themselves at different sides of the same wide bed, with their dolls on the pillows between them. Then the pain felt at the point of the operation caused them to realize the wonderful thing that had happened.

Before the weaker one died the wounds were nearly healed, and both were able to take and assimilate solid food. Barring the disease from which both suffered, they lived long enough to prove that they might have lived independent lives, like normal children.

But they had been born and their first years spent in the moderate climate of India. Possibly if they had never left that climate, and the operation had been performed there, they might be alive and happy to-day.



The Dotted Line in the Diagram Shows Where the Separation of Rosa and Josefa Was Made.

Didn't Know if They Were "One" or "Two."

As has been said, the "Bohemian Twins" were more fortunate. For several years they have been exhibited in European cities, and have proved the most interesting pair thus connected with which men of science and the public have become acquainted. A little more than a year ago they were interviewed in London by a correspondent of this newspaper, who found them not only intelligent but healthy and spirited girls—though whether to consider themselves "one" or "two" they professed themselves unable to decide. In his description the interviewer said:

"The two heads were well shaped and finely poised on graceful shoulders. The two faces were decidedly pretty and beamed with intelligence. From four or five inches below the armpits one gown fell in graceful lines to the trim ankles of four nimble little feet.

"Despite the two smiling faces, the two pairs of arms and the four little feet in their pretty slippers, I found it impossible to consider her as 'twins.' I felt myself to be in the presence of one individual, marvellously endowed with a double set of limbs and a double mental equipment, manifesting itself in two sets of most expressive features.

"It was quite plain that the head on the right was the dominating one, but without the vivacity of the other. The feet on the left, too, were plainly the more agile ones. They were perpetually dancing off across the room, compelling the others to follow. But it was amazing—the perfect physical accord between them all. The four feet moved about as gracefully as two could have done."

This was all the more wonderful because the rigid ligament which attached the right hip of Rosa to the left hip of Josefa bound them together in such a way that the backs of the two pairs of shoulders formed very nearly a right angle. They could bump the backs of their heads together, but it was impossible for them to look into each other's eyes.

Yet They Could Climb Trees.

Yet so absolutely one were they in thought and feeling that they were able to run about, to dance, and even to climb trees—the latter a favorite amusement of theirs.

"With our one body and our two pairs of arms and legs," said Rosa, "we can climb trees like a monkey. That is what we were doing when the Duke of Bavaria called to see us. His Grace was delighted, and gave us a lot of money and jewels."

In the course of their exhibition of themselves before medical men it was repeatedly demonstrated that there was really but one nervous organization between them. The two brains were quite individual, but a pin prick anywhere on the body of Rosa carried its impression of pain to the brain of Josefa, and vice versa.

Rosa was always a light eater, while Josefa's appetite was robust. Their tastes in the matter of [illegible] were dissimilar. Yet Rosa emphatically declared th[illegible]ted in nightmares which came to Josefa owing [illegible]ty indulgence in late suppers.

Now comes the romantic incident in their lives, which finally reconciled them to the hazard of an operation to sever the close physical bond between them. A hint of this possibility was given in the interview above referred to. Rosa said:

"You must not think that because it seems necessary for us to be always side by side we do not receive attentions individually from interesting young men. When Josefa's sweetheart comes a-courting I really regret for her sake and his that [illegible] so closely attached to each other. Usually I pretend to read a book, but when he steals a kiss I can't help jumping a little."

What better evidence than this could there be that Rosa and Josefa were really "one"?

There is as yet no news from Vienna announcing the engagement to marry of either Rosa or Josefa, as a result of the successful operation separating them. But such news is to be expected, for both, even in their connected state, were robust, graceful and really attractive girls. Happily released from their physical bondage to each other, there is every reason why they should welcome a sweeter tie.

Doodica and Radica After the Operation.

So it is probable that they went to the operating table with this happy prospect in view—marrying the men they had learned to love and becoming wives, and perhaps mothers, like normally born girls.

A Romance of Surgery.

The operation was witnessed by a congress of the most noted surgeons in Europe. Although purely men of science, they were not insensible to the romantic element involved. They seem to have agreed with Professor Kukula that an operation to separate Rosa and Josefa Blazek had few of the hazards apparent in the cases of the "Brazilian Twins" and the "Hindoo Twins." Both halves of this dual being were evidently sound. The lungs and all other important organs showed no signs of disease. Rosa and Josefa apppeared to be in robust health and in excellent spirits.

Besides, the X-ray failed to show in the attaching ligament any tissue except that of cartilage, muscle and skin. The ligament was a large one—larger than that in other cases noted. Undoubtedly it contained large arteries and veins. But the absence of any connection of vital organs made the operation seem not much more difficult and hazardous than the amputation of a limb. So it was resolved upon.

The reports from Vienna give no details further than that the operation was a success, and that both girls are making an uninterrupted recovery.

In thus becoming two instead of one Rosa and Josefa Blazek sacrifice a large income derived from their public exhibitions. But they can well afford this sacrifice, as the whole Blazek family are now in comfortable circumstances.

Moreover, in the happy consummation of their romance as normal young wives they will have a new interest in life, which up to less than a year ago they must have believed would always be beyond their reach.

The next news about the "Bohemian Twins" probably will be of a double marriage, but separate honeymoons.

Now Palm Beach and All the Pleasure Gardens of Florida Are in Full Glory, and It's Southward, Ho! to Sun Kissed Summerland

IT is the great ballroom of the Hotel Royal Poinciana, the largest hotel in the world, after dinner. The great gardens are thronged, and everybody is in full evening dress, for decolletage for the women and the conventional evening garb for men is absolutely de rigueur at the Poinciana and the Breakers, its twin huge hostelry. The guests are from every quarter of America—from New York, from Chicago, the "400" of Mrs. Astor, the elect of the Golden Coast—all politely jostle one another in the dazzling gathering, for dazzling it veritably is. The women are gowned de luxe, in the extreme of the mode, and the most famous jewels of the country flash from neck and shoulders. The electric lights gleam in the polished surfaces. The vast verandas repeat the picture of the jewelled, brilliant dancers. It is full, glorious Southern moonlight. The odor of flowers is almost voluptuous. The seductive ripple of women's voices intensifies the joy of the senses. The band plays "Le Desir." Such is the scene, and such the picture to almost intoxicate a lover of beauty on his first venture into this midwinter Summerland. For lovers of the world, and all its pleasures and vanities and pastimes, Palm Beach for the Winter solstice is their playground. Fashion, in its restless itinerary of amusement, has selected Palm Beach for one of its annual halting places.

It has been decreed the mode among the very elite of what we call society, in between Newport and town and the country and the continent to drop down to Palm Beach and be seen. It follows, as the dark the day, that the other women not quite so socially established flock after them to see. As a result there is in this human family gathered under two roofs more aggregated wealth than in any one spot on earth. And to cater to the manifold fancies of this varied plutocratic band of pleasure seekers, every attraction that nature has not offered, man has hastened to supply with unstinted millions. And so it has come about that Palm Beach is truly an earthly paradise.

Suppose it the next day after your "Arabian Nights" dream of the evening before and you had wandered out into the hotel garden for afternoon tea. There is more music, and more perfume and more visions of fair women under the palms and the oleanders and much cheerful gossip and confusion of tongues.

"Oh, so glad to see you, Gladys. When did you get in?" one catches in an interlude of music in a girl's voice. "Oh, just now, Edith, on the 'Palm Limited.' It's just divine. Pullman, drawing room, sleeping cars, library car, all the latest papers and magazines, bathroom and barber shop, fresh fruits and sweets, everything de luxe, flew like lightning. St. Augustine from New York in twenty-seven hours"——

"Heavens, Glad, you chatter like a wound-up railway guide. Oh, say"——

"The links are simply superb, Jack. I've played thirty-six holes and I'm dead fagged"——

"Had a glorious duck in the salt swimming pool"——

"You say it's freezing in New York. I'll bet you this new Panama"——

"Now, dear Mrs. Avoir du Pois, you know there isn't a horse in the place. Why don't you try one of those wheeler chairs? They're just too delightful. A colored man in livery propels you wherever you want to go, and there are those cute jinrikshas, too, those two-wheeled carts, don't you know, with two shafts in front and a nigger in between. He'll run with you or trot, just as you fancy. It's really great"——

"It's simply entrancing to wheel about here anywhere. The roads are perfection. But for a really fascinating spin wait till moonlight. Join one of our moonlight bicycle parties and you enjoy a sensation"——

"Oh, come now, Ted, a pompano twenty-one pounds. That's a little too much"——

"Played every course down the coast from St. Augustine"——

"The game was pretty high now, I tell you. No, the club is just outside the Flagler precincts. It's a 'quiet little game,' you know. There's no Osborne here. The cuisine is perfect. Yes, to-night, all right"——

"What exquisite laces. Yes, another cup, please. No sugar"——

"There's Colonel Seward Webb there, in white flannels. Married Vanderbilt's daughter, dontcherknow. Just in from Miami on his motor car. He's so distinguished looking"——

"'Bucking the tiger?' Oh, no, that's Alfred Vanderbilt, not 'Reggie.' 'Reggie's' the one with the thick Vanderbilt lips"——

"'Pon honor, the gamiest kingfish that ever sported in Floridian waters. Honest. If you don't believe me ask the coon"——

"We just floated on the lake all the afternoon, and we're going again this evening when the moon floods the palms"——

"Stayed in the surf an hour. The most delicious langour"——

"A hundred-pound tarpon seized the tackle and made for the open sea"——

"Oh, it's a hunter's paradise. No, the deer are still abundant in the everglades and the wild turkey still flies. There's no end of small birds; their name is legion. Yes, bears and panther are getting scarce. Get your guide and we'll"——

These little afternoon tit bits of conversation give the keynote to the manner of life spent in society's Winter playground. All day long there is something going on. There is the finest bathing to be dreamed of in surf and in swimming pool; there is delightful sailing on Lake Worth and fishing everywhere. The golf links are superb and the roads most enticing for riding, driving, wheeling or footing it. Hunting allures the tourist Nimrod, and for mighty hunters there is plenty of prey. There is tea in the afternoon with music under the trees, dinner with evening dress imperative, dancing, always dancing, under moonlight or electric, and a little game with a delicious little supper at the club for a nightcap. It is life a la mode, full of swing, full of life, full of the joy of living.

Ormond is another delectable spot in our southern garden of enchantment—and a particular spot of attraction this very week, when the great automobile races take place on one of the finest speedways in the whole world for motoring, Ormond's superb, famous, almost solid beach—the creation of Nature herself, not Mr. Flagler, her rival. It is for this, the greatest series of races ever held in the history of this absorbing sport, that Alfred Vanderbilt has just had built his new metal monster, baptized Richard-Sartori, after its creator and its Jehu, which is 250-horsepower, has a theoretical speed of over 150 miles an hour and tips the scale at something much over 2,000 pounds.

Ormond, with many new improvements during its past sleeping season—for fashion only dallies with the delights of the State of Flowers from New Year's to the Spring showers of April—is more attractive than ever. Man seems ever accentuating the beauties which are its own birthright. The vast shell beach has long been noted as the finest strand on the whole east coast of Florida.

From St. Augustine to Miami—from the very oldest city in the New World to the most modern; from Mr. Flagler, the oil millionaire's princely Ponce, in the old Spanish city to the "Magic City," as it has been called because it sprung up almost in a night at the wave of Mr. Flagler's wand—the east coast of Florida has become a succession of fairylands and playgrounds—Daytona, Ormond, Palm Beach, and so on—for the world which amuses itself. When one is all chills and gooseflesh in the North down there in Mr. Flagler's pauses for pleasure all is warmth and perfume; the joy of the sun in the daytime and the mystic glory of moonbeams at night, with alleys of cocoanut palms to saunter in and the tropical odors of orange blossoms to breathe in and the luscious fruits of this land of flowers to tempt the tongue. It is in its melancholy of the North just now that—

What HENRY JAMES Saw and Heard in NEW YORK

Illustrated by F. Opper, after Reading Mr. James' Article on "New York Revisited."

BY HENRY JAMES.

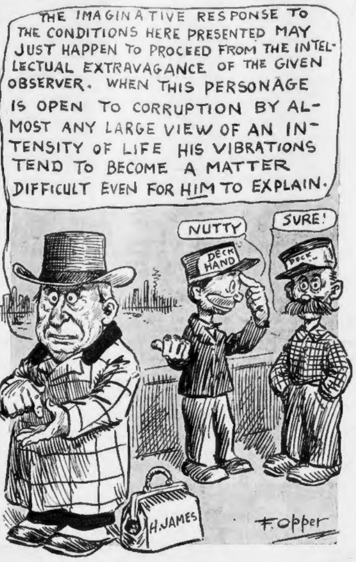
NOTE TO THE EDITOR: This is the best I can do to illustrate this passage. F. OPPER.

THE single impression or particular vision most answering to the greatness of the subject would have been, I think, a certain hour of large circumnavigation that I found prescribed in the fulness of the Spring, as the almost immediate crown of a return from the Far West. I had arrived at one of the transpontine stations of the Pennsylvania Railroad; the question was of proceeding to Boston, for the occasion, without pushing through the terrible town—why "terrible," to my sense, in many ways, I shall presently explain—and the easy and agreeable attainment of this great advantage was to embark on one of the mightiest (as appears to me) of train-bearing barges and, descending the western waters, pass round the bottom of the city and remount the other current to Harlem; all without "losing touch" of the Pullman that had brought me from Washington. This absence of the need of losing touch, this breadth of effect, as to the whole process involved in the prompt floating of the huge concatenated cars not only without arrest or confusion, but as for positive prodigal beguilement of the artless traveller, had doubtless much to say to the ensuing state of mind, the happily excited and amused view of the great face of New York. The extent, the ease, the energy, the quantity and number, all notes scattered about as if, in the whole business and in the splendid light, nature and science were joyously romping together, might have been taking on again, for their symbol, some collective presence of great circling and plunging, hovering and perching sea-birds, white-winged images of the spirit, of the restless freedom of the bay. The bay had always, on other opportunities, seemed to blow its immense character straight into one's face—coming "at" you, so to speak, bearing down on you, with the full force of a thousand prows of steamers seen exactly on the line of their longitudinal axis; but I had never before been so conscious of its boundless cool assurance, or seemed to see its genius so grandly at play. This was presumably indeed because I had never before enjoyed the remarkable adventure of taking in so much of the vast, bristling promontory from the water, of ascending the East River, in especial, to its upper diminishing expanses.

"This sense of a baffled curiosity, an intellectual adventure forever renounced, was surely enough a state of feeling, and indeed in presence of the different half hours, as memory presents them, at which I gave myself up to both the thrill of Wall Street (by which I mean that of the whole wide edge of the whirlpool) and the too accepted, too irredeemable ignorance, I am at a loss to see what intensity of response was wanting."



THE IMAGINATIVE RESPONSE TO THE CONDITIONS HERE PRESENTED MAY JUST HAPPEN TO PROCEED FROM THE INTELLECTUAL EXTRAVAGANCE OF THE GIVEN OBSERVER. WHEN THIS PERSONAGE IS OPEN TO CORRUPTION BY ALMOST ANY LARGE VIEW OF AN INTENSITY OF LIFE HIS VIBRATIONS TEND TO BECOME A MATTER DIFFICULT EVEN FOR HIM TO EXPLAIN.

Something of the air of the occasion and of the mood of the moment caused the whole picture to speak with its largest suggestion; which suggestion is irresistible when once it is sounded clear. It is all, absolutely, an expression of things lately and currently done, done on a large impersonal stage and on the basis of inordinate gain—it is not an expression of any other matters whatever; and yet the sense of the scene (which had at several previous junctures, as well, put forth to my imagination its power), was commanding and thrilling, was in certain lights almost charming. So it befell, exactly, that an element of mystery and wonder entered into the impression—the interest of trying to make out, in the absence of features of the sort usually supposed indispensable, the reason of the beauty and the joy. It is indubitably a "great" bay, a great harbor, but no one item of the romantic, or even of the picturesque, as commonly understood, contributes to its effect. The shores are low and for the most part depressingly furnished and prosaically peopled; the islands, though numerous, have not a grace to exhibit, and one thinks of the other, the real flowers of geography in this order, of Naples, of Cape Town, of Sydney, of Seattle, of San Francisco, of Rio, asking how, if they justify a reputation, New York should seem to justify one. Then, after all, we remember that there are reputations and reputations; we remember above all that the imaginative response to the conditions here presented may just happen to proceed from the intellectual extravagance of the given observer. When this personage is open to corruption by almost any large view of an intensity of life, his vibrations tend to become a matter difficult even for him to explain. He may have to confess that the group of evident facts fails to account by itself for the complacency of his appreciation. Therefore it is that I find myself rather backward with a perceived sanction, of an at all proportionate kind, for the fine exhilaration with which, in this free wayfaring relation to them, the wide waters of New York inspire me. There is the beauty of light and air, the great scale of space, and, seen far away to the west, the open gates of the Hudson, majestic in their degree, even at a distance, and announcing still nobler things. But the real appeal, unmistakably, is in that note of vehemence in the local life of which I have spoken, for it is the appeal of a particular type of dauntless power.

"But there would be too much to say just here were this incurable eccentric to let himself go."

The aspect the power wears then is indescribable; it is the power of the most extravagant of cities, rejoicing as with the voice of the morning, in its might, its fortune, its unsurpassable conditions, and imparting to every object and element, to the motion and expression of every floating, hurrying, panting thing, to the throb of ferries and tugs, to the plash of waves and the play of the winds and the glint of lights and the shrill of whistles and the quality and authority of breeze-born cries—all, practically, a diffused, wasted clamor of detonations—something of its sharp, free accent and, above all, of its sovereign sense of being "backed' and able to back. The universal applied passion struck me as shining unprecedentedly out of the composition; in the bigness and bravery and insolence, especially, of everything that rushed and shrieked, in the air as of a great intricate frenzied dance, half merry, half desperate, or at least half defiant, performed on the huge watery floor. This appearance of the bold lacing-together, across the waters, of the scattered members of the monstrous organism—lacing as by the ceaseless play of an enormous system of steam-shuttles or electric bobbins (I scarce know what to call them), commensurate in form with their infinite work—does perhaps more than anything else to give the pitch of the vision of energy. One has the sense that the monster grows and grows, flinging abroad its loose limbs even as some unmannered young giant at his "larks," and that the binding stitches must forever fly further and faster and draw harder; the future complexity of the web, all under the sky and over the sea, becoming thus that of some colossal set of clockworks, some steel-souled machine-room of brandished arms and hammering fists and opening and closing jaws.

This sense of a baffled curiosity, an intellectual adventure forever renounced, was surely enough a state of feeling, and indeed in presence of the different half-hours, as memory presents them, at which I gave myself up both to the thrill of Wall Street (by which I mean that of the whole wide edge of the whirlpool), and the too accepted, too irredeemable ignorance, I am at a loss to see what intensity of response was wanting. The imagination might have responded more if there had been a slightly less settled inability to understand what every one, what any one, was really doing; but the picture, as it comes back to me, is, for all this foolish subjective poverty, so crowded with its features that I rejoice, I confess, in not having more of them to handle. No open apprehension, even if it be as open as a public vehicle plying for hire, can carry more than a certain amount of life of a kind; and there was nothing at play in the outer air, at least, of the scene, during these glimpses, that didn't scramble for admission into mine very much as I had seen the mob seeking entrance to an up-town or down-town electric car fight for life at one of the apertures. If it had been the final function of the bay to make one feel one's age, so assuredly, the mouth of Wall Street proclaimed it, for one's private ear, distinctly enough; the breath of existence being taken, wherever one turned, as that of youth on the run and with the prize of the race in sight, and the new landmarks crushing the old quite as violent children stamp on snails and caterpillars.

"Some such close and sweet and whole national consciousness as that of the Switzer and the Scot."

The hour I first recall was a morning of Winter drizzle and mist, of dense fog in the bay, one of the strangest sights of which I was on my way to enjoy; and I had stopped in the heart of the business quarter to pick up a friend who was to be my companion. The weather, such as it was, worked wonders, for the upper reaches of the buildings, round which it drifted and hung very much as about the flanks and summits of emergent mountain masses—for, to be just all round, there was some evidence of their having a message for the eyes. Let me parenthesize, once for all, that there are other glimpses of this message, up and down the city frequently to be caught; lights and shades of Winter and Summer air, of the literally "finished" afternoon in particular, when refinement of modelling descends from the skies and lends the white towers, all new and crude and commercial and over-windowed as they are, a fleeting distinction. The morning I speak of offered me my first chance of seeing one of them from the inside—which was an opportunity I sought again, repeatedly, in respect to others; and I became conscious of the force with which this vision of their prodigious working, and of the multitudinous life, as if each were a swarming city in itself, that they are capable of housing, may beget, on the part of the free observer, in other words of the restless analyst the impulse to describe and present the facts and express the sense of them. Each of these huge constructed and compressed communities, throbbing through its myriad arteries and pores, with a single passion, even as a complicated watch throbs with the one purpose of telling you the hour and the minute, testified overwhelmingly to the character of New York—and the passion of the restless analyst, on his side, is for the extraction of character. But there would be too much to say, just here, were this incurable eccentric to let himself go; the impression in question, fed by however brief an experience, kept overflowing the cup and spreading in a wide waste of speculation.

A Visit to Ellis Island.

The impression of Ellis Island, in fine, would be—a chapter throughout that so many of my impressions would be—a chapter by itself; and with a particular page for recognition of the degree in which the liberal hospitality of the eminent Commissioner of this wonderful service, to whom I had been introduced, helped to make the interest of the whole watched drama poignant and unforgettable. It is a drama that goes on, without a pause, day by day and year by year, this visible act of ingurgitation on the part of our body politic and social, and constituting really an appeal to amazement beyond that of any sword-swallowing or fire-swallowing of the circus. The wonder that one couldn't keep down was the thought that these two or three hours of one's own chance vision of the business were but as a tick or two of the mighty clock, the clock that never, never stops—least of all when it strikes, for a sign of so much winding-up, some louder hour of our national fate than usual.

"Just as one tumbles back into the street in appalled reaction from them."

The after-sense of that acute experience, however, I myself found, was by no means to be brushed away; I felt it grow and grow, on the contrary, wherever I turned: other impressions might come and go, but this affirmed claim of the alien, however immeasurably alien, to share in one's supreme relation was everywhere the fixed element, the reminder not to be dodged. One's supreme relation, as one had always put it, was one's relation to one's country—a conception made up so largely of one's countrymen and one's countrywomen. Thus it was as if, all the while, with such a fond tradition of what these products predominantly were, the idea of the country itself underwent something of that profane overhauling through which it appears to suffer the indignity of change. Is not our instinct in this matter, in general, essentially the safe one—that of keeping the idea simple and strong and continuous, so that it shall be perfectly sound? To touch it overmuch, to pull it about, is to put it in peril of weakening; yet on this free assault upon it, this readjustment of it in their monstrous, presumptuous interest, the aliens, in New York, seemed perpetually to insist. The combination there of their quantity and their quality—that loud primary stage of alienism which New York most offers to sight—operates, for the native, as their note of settled possession, something they have nobody to thank for; so that unsettled possession is what we, on our side, seem reduced to—the implication of which, in its turn, is that to recover confidence and regain lost ground, we, not they, must make the surrender and accept the orientation. We must go, in other words, more than half-way to meet them; which is all the difference, for us, between possession and dispossession. This sense of dispossession, to be brief about it, haunted me so, I was to feel, in the New York streets and in the packed trajectiles to which one clingingly appeals from the streets, just as one tumbles back into the streets in appalled reaction from them, that the art of beguiling or duping it became an art to be cultivated—though the fond alternative vision was never long to be obscured, the imagination, exasperated to envy, of the ideal, in the order in question; of the luxury of some such close and sweet and whole national consciousness as that of the Switzer and the Scot

NEWEST, FUNNIEST SPORT OF ALL!

How to Play the Fashionab

FIRST it was croquet, then it was lawn tennis, and next it was golf—now it is the gymkhana!

Just who started the gymkhana games, or where, nobody knows. But one thing is very certain: the gymkhana is the fashionable sport of the fashionable world at this moment. For three or four years it has been spreading over Europe, and more than a year ago it made its appearance in America—Newport, Lenox and Long Island.

Now, gymkhana games are wonderfully attractive for three good reasons: they are boisterously funny, every man, woman and child can take part and there is really no end to the possible novelty and variety. All this cannot be said of any other outdoor sport. And, furthermore, the games are adaptable to Summer and Winter. Indeed, the gymkhana flourishes in the hot sun of Monte Carlo and in midwinter on the ice in Norway.

The gymkhana came to Europe and America from India, where the frivolous, straying far from the Nirvana, beloved of Theosophists, made of it a fad, a new sort of sporting meet, where everything went, from animals to automobiles, from bicycles to oranges.

To explain what a gymkhana race is, there is, perhaps, no better way than to describe a few which have recently amused the fashionable world in various places. In France the gymkhana has reached its highest popularity. It is there the favorite sport of the nobility. A notable one was organized the other day by the Duchesse de Rohan Chabot.

If you hadn't known just what might be expected at a gymkhana and had come suddenly upon this racetrack at Compiegne you might have thought these noble lords and ladies had suddenly gone quite mad.

There they were, decked out in most gorgeous array, a vision of plumed hats, brilliant gowns and rich furs, trying to line up. It was difficult, for each fair contestant was encumbered by an animal at the end of ribbon reins. A great and brilliant audience on platforms and in tents applauded their efforts.

Cackling, growling, baaing, roaring, snarling, grunting, squealing, they resisted and rebelled. Every sort of living animal was eligible, except the ordinary every day ones—horses, cats, mules, etc. The drivers were all women, and the rules exacted that they must drive, not pull, their animals. At the elbow of each competitor was a male assistant to help prod the animal on to victory.

Queer Animals, Fowls and Bugs.

Among those present were a gorgeous Japanese goose; a brilliant green grasshopper strapped in a golden harness; a baby warthog, intensely hideous, with unshapely head and projecting teeth; an ant bear, toothless and hairy; a forty pound turkey; a tortoise, a bantam rooster, a black goat, a skittish kangaroo, a chattering monkey, a sedate lion, a tame leopard, and even an Egyptian scarabaeus.

"Now then, now!" cried the starter, after the tortoise had been slowly driven ahead of the line, being given an advantage of some twenty feet start, while the jumping kangaroo, the sleek leopard, the monkey, the bantam rooster were variously handicapped.

Suddenly there was a great scampering and huddling, accompanied by a succession of shrill little "Ahs!" and "Ohs!" They didn't come from the animals, but from the fair owners of the animals. These clutched their skirts as though they were about to scamper off the field. Their male companions tried to reassure them, while the Duchesse de Grammont, famed as one of the most courageous women in Paris, calmly pushed her way into line, driving before her a tiny competitor.

It was a mouse.

"Oh, you mean thing to scare us so!" cried the Duchesse de Lucinge Faucigny, holding fearlessly her young lion.

"Don't you bring him near me!" screamed the Duchesse de Rohan Chabot, grabbing her warthog with a firm hand.

Now They're Off!

The wee little mouse, exquisitely beribboned, ran here and there, scattering before him all these noble ladies like so many sheep.

For some minutes consternation reigned supreme. The animals seemed to be all mixed up in a heterogeneous mass of velvets and satins and froufrou.

"Ladies! Ladies! I assure you I have the mouse firmly attached. He is tame; tame as a kitten," cried the Duchesse de Grammont.

At last calm was restored. Once more there was a great effort to get into line. The noble companions of these great ladies exerted themselves to the utmost to help start the animals in the right direction. Just a quarter of a mile away was the goal, marked by a pole fluttering with ribbons. The victor would be the one who reached it first.

"Now then, now then, mesdames et messieurs, make ready! Now go!"

Half the animals made a dash for liberty. The Duchesse de la Rochefaucauld's goose fluttered its wings, hissing ominously and pulling his mistress around in the wrong direction. The Baroness de Berckheim's tortoise blinked his eyes upon the noisy crowd, then with infinite dignity he withdrew into his shell and refused to budge an inch. The Baroness and her assistant, the Compte de Beauregard, did their utmost. He prodded, she supplicated. "Not fair!" shouted someone as she grabbed the tortoise in her arms and started to run with it.

"Bravo for the Duchesse de Luynes! Bravo!" Her ant bear was slowly forging ahead with his long nose close to the ground. Behind him feathers were flying desperately, the air was full of cock-a-doodle-doos, the turkey and the rooster had closed in.

The spectators recognized in the various animals their different friends. They named them. Sardou, Monsieur Loubet, Sarah Bernhardt, etc. Laughing exuberantly, they picked out resemblances.

"Bravo! Bravo!" The ant bear and the warthog were making steadily for the goal. Behind them, breathless, exultant, came the Duchess de Rohan Chabot and the Duchesse de Luynes. Bets ran high. The animals were nicknamed, Freycinet after the Minister of Foreign Affairs; Bernhardt, after the great actress; Jaures, after the Socialist, etc., etc.

The spectators rose in their seats, cheering and applauding.

The bear was ahead, decidedly ahead, in fact, just the length of his nose, which by actual measurement was nine inches long. It was enough. By the length of his nose he won and his owner, the Duchess de Luynes, triumphant over his ugly body, was the proud recipient of a splendid silver trophy, a loving cup engraved to represent a menagerie of animals.

This race at Compiegne is one of the most famous gymkhanas, but not perhaps the most unique nor the most interesting in spite of its long roll of nobility. At Grindelwald in Switzerland, just south of Berne, they celebrated recently an ice gymkhana.

A Gymkhana on Ice.

It was all planned one day and executed the next. All around the pond was standing room only, while a couple of dozen star skaters held the centre. The whole of Grindelwald, natives and tourists, turned out to see the sport. It began with what was called the wheelbarrow race. The wheelbarrows were, of course, human beings, men who didn't mind skating on their hands. Each human barrow had a skate blade in either hand, while his legs were held by a comrade on skates, who rushed him with all his might up the ice to the finishing line, where victory went to the fleetest.

It was "rough house" indeed, and after it the men took a rest, while the ladies went to work to solve a problem. They were seated in a ring and each was handed by a learned Cambridge professor a sealed envelope containing the knotty problem.

"Now!" shouted the Professor. Each contestant opened her envelope, knitted her brows and as quickly as she could jumped to her skates, for the one who arrived with a correct solution first at the winning post was the victor.

This was very restful, but not for long. Gymkhana competitions do not stand for rest. They are as strenuous as youth, enthusiasm and energy can make them. To enter into a gymkhana contest all three of these qualities are necessary. Watch a potato race on ice and see if you don't think so.

At the start it looked calm and dignified enough. Arm in arm they made the start, an army of skaters, with glowing cheeks and snapping eyes, the women in brilliant colored skirts and close-fitting hats, the men in caps and leggings. A floating, graceful mass they seemed till suddenly there was a wild scramble indicating they had reached the potato patch. There the winner, still linked with one arm to a comrade, must pick up a potato on a spoon and carry it safely to the goal.

This may sound easy if you have never tried it, but potatoes on ice roll off at a touch. You should have seen them rolling this way and that way and any way but into the spoon. However, some one did arrive at last, which proves that it can be done.

The potato race was exciting, but not more so than the shovel race. The women seated themselves on the shovels first, each one propelled across the race course by her partner at lightning speed. At the turning post, presto! a quick change was made. The woman grasped the handle and pushed her shovelful of man with all her strength back again across the ice. Of course in that race the lightweights had the advantage.

That strenuous day on the ice ended with what is known in Grindelwald as the umbrella and cigarette race.

"Choose partners! Get your umbrellas! Light your cigarettes!"

It was very pretty, very nonchalant. All they had to do was to skate to the winning post, the women carrying umbrellas open and the men keeping alight their cigarettes.

khana games and races are in vogue. If there isn't any ice they take place on unslippery ground. They have their setting on race tracks, in automobiles, in green fields, on the backs of horses, anywhere and everywhere where energy and invention are to be found.

At Lenox, most exclusive of America's Summer resorts, the fad has grown and spread till last Summer it became quite the thing for fashionable women to be seen leading at the end of a line of variegated ribbons geese of various sizes and tints fat geese, lean geese, turbulent geese, black geese, white geese, gray geese. There was to be a goose gymkhana.

In the distance there was a flag at the end of a pole fluttering in the breeze, a brilliant flag that said victory to each owner of a goose. The game was at Tanglewood, and it was under the auspices of the famous Berkshire Hunt Club. A gold bangle was the trophy for the fair goose owner who first reached the winning post.

Miss Corey, Mrs. Arthur Comstock, Miss Cutting, Miss Helen Alexander, Miss Averill, Miss Rodman—all belles of Lenox—admonished their pets. They had adorned them in harnesses of brilliant ribbons that contrasted gayly with their Summer gowns.

"Squawk! Quack! Whiss! Whoo! Wh-r-r shoo!"

The air was full of such sounds as each woman tried to guide her goose. Like human beings they wanted to go anyhow but straight. Feathers to the right, feathers to the left.

"Hurrah! Three cheers for the gray goose."

Back of him was Miss Alexander, with flaming cheeks and dancing eyes. "Rah for Miss Alexander!" In the midst of a rain of gray feathers she and her goose fled over the winning line.

Novel Gymkhanas on Long Island.

Gymkhana has followed gymkhana all through America. On Long Island, at Easthampton, they did the shirt race, the egg and spoon race, the bottle race, the valise race. The very tiniest girls have had gymkhanas with hoops all beribboned, and the very swellest have had gymkhanas on horseback.

The shirt race needs, to do it properly, a horse, a man, a woman and a shirt. The man is required to ride, shirt in hand, to a certain point where a woman is stationed to wait for him. Before the race begins his shirt is divested of one button. The woman, armed with a needle and thread and a button, awaits his arrival. As quickly as she can she sews on the button, he puts on the shirt and rides back to the starting point. The seamstress in this race is as important as the rider.

The real event of the Cedarhurst, L. I., gymkhana was the valise race. It gave so much chance for ingenuity and fun. The contestants were told to go to a certain point where they would each find a valise marked with his name. The contents, of course, were a great and tenderly cherished secret, but each valise had been carefully packed by a committee on arrangements. As quickly as possible each competitor opened his valise, donned the contents and returned to the starting point.

What shouts greeted their appearance! They were clowns, and brigands, chefs and gondoliers, and circus riders in short [illegible] carried trumpets and guns and drums. To be victorious it was necessary for each man to fit himself completely into the role that his costume suggested. At a moment's notice he had to become a French chef, or an Italian gondolier or a parrot, as the case might require. This valise race was the great fete of the last Long Island season.

A field was strewn with bottles, laid out much as one might lay out a croquet field. The bottles formed an alley, a lane through which teams of blindfolded [illegible] were to be driven by men. The object of the race was to knock down as few bottles as possible on the way to the winning post.

With Eggs and Spoons.

The successful team should be sensitive and responsive to the slightest touch of the reins in the hands of their driver. The successful driver should guide firmly and cleverly, never for a moment allowing his attention to be distracted by the cheering crowds that always line a gymkhana race course.

One of the most exciting of races is always the egg-and-spoon race. No end of fun always comes of this race, which is usually [illegible] by women only. Each one is armed with a tablespoon and an egg.

When the starter cries "Now" each spoon receives an egg, which each young woman tries to balance on her way to the winning post. She has to run if she wants to win and she has to arrive with the egg in the spoon.

Perhaps the most up-to-date gymkhana of all was the automobile race that took place in the Bois de Boulogne in Paris in the early fall. Everyone who was anybody turned out for it, and only those who were skilled automobilists were admitted as competitors.

Pig sticking was the first number on the programme. The Comtesse Marmonti, exquisite in a gown of veiling, sheer and resembling the fine clouds of heaven in its tint, took the first turn at him. He was made of Canton flannel and he had eyes of big black beads, but he was none the less a good mark for the Comtesse's aim. Her automobile, guided by her husband, who is a famous chauffeur, ran at the scheduled rate of thirty miles an hour. At a certain point midway upon the course the pig was on all fours awaiting attack. The noble Comtesse stood erect and fearless in the automobile as she approached her victim. In one hand she carried a long pointed spear.

She leaned far out of the machine and plunged—and missed. The animal had bowled over and lay sprawling with his canton flannel paws upheld to heaven, but the noble comtesse had failed to pierce him in his sawdust ribs. It is not an easy feat in an automobile going at thirty miles an hour.

Pig-Sticking in Racing Autos.

One after the other came the machines, each one containing a master chauffeur and a fair lady spearer. The Princess de Lucinge Faucigny, Madame Yturbe, accentuating her Spanish beauty in a gown of red and a hat buried under brilliant poppies; the Princess M[illegible], in a gown of billowy white, followed one another in quick succession. [illegible] one after [illegible] at the staring pig sank back exhausted.

It seemed as though all were going to fail when the exquisite golden-haired Comtesse de Beauregard dashed up. White, fat, imperturbable, the pig awaited her. Equally imperturbable, she fixed him with her violet eyes. The automobile whizzed up, swerved sidewise, a few [illegible] screams pierced the air, then the [illegible] steadied itself. Some one cried, "[illegible]! Careful!" The Comtesse, at a [illegible] moment, poised her long spear carefully, leaned far out of the automobile and sank it deftly, properly, victoriously. There was a gush of sawdust, a great volley of cheers, and the noble Comtesse bowed gracefully right and left.

She was the heroine of that long-to-be-remembered gymkhana, for not only did she win the pig-sticking race, but she followed it by scoring also in the even more difficult ring one. In this race some dozens of shiny rings are suspended in the air. The competitors are required to catch as many as possible of them upon a slim pole, seated in a car that is travelling at the rate of forty miles an hour.

No matter how devoted her chauffeur may be to the fair competitor, there must be no slowing down. The Comte de Beauregard manipulated the machine for his wife; the stuffed pig on his side with his sawdust wound bore testimony to her prowess; victory made her confident.

The Comtesse sat erect in her automobile. Firmly she raised her slender pole of white.

It seemed to take but a second for the dash, and then it was seen as the machine slowed down that the Comtesse waved victoriously five gilded rings, more than any of the other competitors.

This time the cheers were doubled. This time the judge himself came down off his stand. A jewelled bracelet was the prize for the Comtesse's feat. It marked the supreme moment of her automobile career, [illegible] with the smile for which she is [illegible].

Picking Up Parasols at High Speed.

After that followed a victory for the Comte de [illegible], who showed how one might balance an automobile perfectly on a swaying portable bridge that spanned a [illegible]. It was admirably done. The crowd watched breathlessly and applauded vigorously, while the ladies steadied their nerves for the great parasol race.

The prize, an exquisite ivory-handled, point lace parasol, lay on the track, handle up. One of the competitors to be victorious merely had to lean out of her machine as it travelled at a speed of twenty miles an hour and grasp it. If she could accomplish this the parasol belonged to her.

Fifty fashionable women entered this race. As they passed the coveted parasol they leaned far out of the whizzing machines with undisguised eagerness. It made the race all the more exciting as they became more ardent. Failure, however, followed failure. One after the other they seemed just at the point then whiz—whirr—they grasped the empty air.

The Comtesse Marmonti seemed to be calmly smiling as her machine dashed up. It was admirably guided by her husband. He whispered "Now." She arose gracefully, slowly, as though she were going to step from her automobile. She leaned over and the parasol was hers. She held it over her head and smiled up into its pink dome, radiant.

A game of tenpins followed this. In their automobiles the various competitors had to bowl over as many as possible. The motors [illegible] to the right to the left. The one who knocked over the most was the victor. It was M. Yturbe, who, at the risk of being bowled over himself, knocked down thirty in five minutes.

Dummy pedestrians were next bowled over, but unfortunately they flew to pieces so quickly and so easily that the sport was tame. At the next automobile gymkhana these dummies are to be stronger, built to resist longer, and there is to be a contest to see who can send them flying farthest.

HOW-TO-GUARD-AGAINST CATCHING-COLD

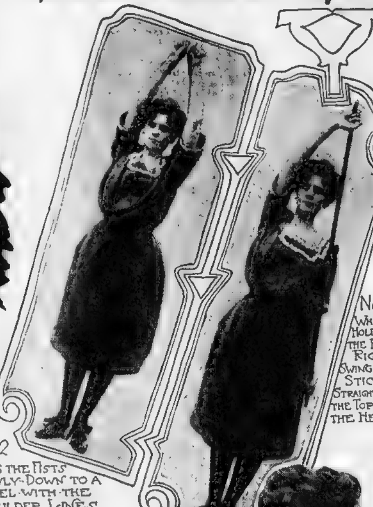
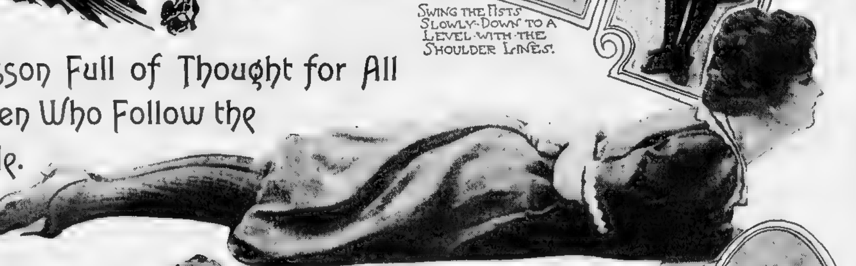
A Lesson Full of Thought for All Women Who Follow the Mode.

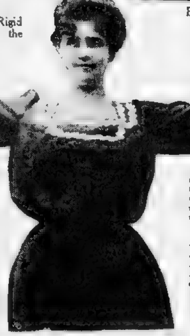


No. 2 SWING THE FISTS SLOWLY DOWN TO A LEVEL WITH THE SHOULDER LINES.

No. 6 WHILE HOLDING THE BODY RIGID, SWING THE STICK STRAIGHT OVER THE TOP OF THE HEAD.



Exercise No. 7.—Raise the Head and Chest as High From the Floor as Possible Without Moving the Rest of the Body.



Exercise No. 1.—Swing the Rigid Arms Up to the Level of the Shoulders.

Exercise No. 4—Describe Semi-Circles With Points of the Elbows, While Holding This Position.

If there was ever a season when women must value a good healthy pair of lungs and a strong chest it is this present Winter, with its prevailing styles of "lingerie" waists, lace yokes and filmy gowns, the cobwebs sometimes, and it behooves every woman at once without waste of a moment to keep herself in shape to wear these dainty materials without taking cold every time she puts them on.

During the day she goes about in the ordinary shirt waist made, perhaps, of some of the many pretty French flannels, and closely woven materials now shown in the shops for Winter wear, and in the evening dons a dainty lace waist and runs a chance of taking a cold which very often develops into pneumonia, bronchial trouble, or any one of the numerous ills which flesh is heir to, just from that simple little bit of a cold.

She does not consider anything further than that she must wear what "Dame Fashion" decrees, and never thinks of what the results may be, or indeed what fatal results might accrue from just those same fascinating, gauzy confections.

The wise woman will look about for some means of guarding against these chances taken when wearing her evening costumes, and will find that there is a very simple and natural method of strengthening her throat and chest by daily exercise and cold water.

She knows, too, that the filmy laces are bound to expose every hollow and line in her neck and chest, as well as to expose them to the drafts that exist nearly everywhere in Winter.

Before donning her open-work gowns let her bare herself to the waist line and have ready a basin full of clear cold water (with a liberal handful of salt in it) and dash it quickly over her chest, throat and arms, after which she quickly rubs herself off with a coarse Turkish towel until the flesh is a glowing red.

During the rubbing let her assume the correct standing position, with heels together, toes two inches apart, shoulders drawn back and head well raised.

Now let her grip the towel firmly (with hands about the width of her chest apart) and fling it over the top of her head, down across the tops of her shoulders, at which point she will pull it back and forth, in a see-saw motion, for twenty five times, taking full deep breaths, inhaling through the nose counting seven, then holding for four counts, and exhaling through the mouth while counting six. Then let her puff her neck and arms with some good toilet powder, and she is ready to dress.

Let her go through the same cold water bath upon rising and retiring and she will at once find that while she has been guarding against colds she has been developing a splendid high chest and rounding out her figure or perchance a flat bust, and at the same time has made her flesh hard and firm and has taken the lines out of the throat, which are prone to form from constantly carrying the head drooping forward.

Select a few of the following exercises and practise them faithfully, adhering to the above advice night and morning, and the extremes in dress need hold no terror whatever for you.

Exercise No. 1.

Stand erect, with head up, shoulders drawn backward and downward, arms full length at the sides, heels together, abdomen drawn in and the body slightly curved at the waist line. Now clench the fists and make the arms rigid. Inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts swing the rigid arms out at the sides, straight up, until they reach the level of the shoulders, at which point reverse and drop them slowly back to their original position at the sides. At this point exhale through the mouth while counting six. Inhale again immediately and raise them again as before. Repeat the exercise seven times the first morning and increase daily as the strength grows.

Exercise No. 2.

Assume correct standing position as described in exercise No. 1. This time hold the rigid arms on a level with the shoulders (full length) at the start, instead of down at the sides. Now inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts raise the arms (still rigid) straight up, until the fists touch in midair, and the arms are close by the sides of the face. Now reverse the movement and pass them slowly down to their original position, which is on a level with the shoulders. At this point expel every bit of air from the lungs while counting six. Inhale again immediately and repeat the exercise as before.

This perhaps sounds very simple, but is indeed very difficult to do at first, for it tires the patient almost upon the very first raising of the arms, and she is inclined to drop them down from over the top of the head from exhaustion, and this is the very thing that she must avoid, if she wants quick results.

This will be found a most excellent exercise for women of fashion, as it at once expands the lower part of the lungs, under the shoulder blades, and brings into play muscles across the top of the shoulder lines and in the base of the neck.

The patient must bear in mind that the muscles must be held tense from the start to the finish during these exercises, for this is necessary in order to get the real benefit from them. It may only be done five times to start with and increased daily as she gently breaks in the sleeping muscles.

Exercise No. 3.

Stand erect as described in exercise No. 1. Reach around the back and grip the hands firmly at their fullest reach. Now inhale through the nose, counting seven and while holding the breath for four counts, raise the clasped hands straight upward and backward as far as possible (keeping the head well up), pumping them up and down. Now relax and drop back to their original position, and rest a moment before trying it a second time.

It will draw every line away from the neck and throat, at the same time squaring up and broadening the shoulders. This exercise may be done three times to start with, and particular care must be given the breathing in order to get the best results from the exercise.

Exercise No. 4.

Stand erect as described in exercise No. 1, this time with fists laid directly in front of the shoulders, palms turning forward. Now inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts, raise the points of the elbows upward and backward (keeping them as near to the body as possible), then downward, and upward in front of the body, forming a cradle rocker, or semi-circle with the points of the elbows; the larger the semi-circles the better it is for the neck and chest. At this point relax and exhale through the nose, counting six.

This exercise may only be done four or five times to start with and increased one count daily. It may cause a little soreness from bringing into play the unused muscles, but pay no attention to that; persevere and the results will be swift and sure.

Exercise No. 5.

Stand erect as in exercise No. 1. Grip the extreme ends of a cane or umbrella firmly. Now raise the arms high over the head in midair and take a full, deep breath while counting seven. Now while holding the breath for four counts pull hard with the hands, as though endeavoring to pull the stick apart in the centre, pulling the left hand over to the left side, until the arm is stretched at its fullest length down at the left side of the body; while the right hand is bent over the head in mid air. At this point exhale through the mouth every particle of air from the lungs, and inhale again immediately, counting seven, alternating the pulling with the right side, having described a complete semi-circle over the head with the stick. Now relax and come back to the original position with the stick forming a horizontal line over the top of the head while exhaling through the mouth to the count of six. This exercise may be done only five or six times to start with and increased each morning as in others.

Exercise No. 6.

Assume the same position as in Exercise No. 5, this time gripping the cane the width of the chest apart, arms stretched rigidly downward at their fullest length in front of the body. Inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts slowly raise the stick straight outward and upward over the top of the head and as far back as possible; then with a downward sweep of the elbows lower the stick until it rests upon the upper part of the shoulders back of the neck. At this point relax and exhale through the mouth to count of six. Inhale again immediately and while holding the breath for four counts raise the stick firmly over the head with an upward and forward movement, then over and downward, until the hands reach the original position in front of the body. Now relax, and exhale through the mouth to the count of six.

This exercise may be done five or six times to start with and increased daily until twenty counts have been reached.

Exercise No. 7.

Lie full length upon the floor, face downward, with arms folded across the small of the back. Inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts, raise the head and chest up from the floor as high as possible without moving any other part of the body. Now relax and drop gently back to the floor and rest a moment before trying it again. This exercise may only be done four or five times to start with and increased daily as in others. It will be found a splendid exercise for giving poise to the head and shoulders.

Exercise No. 8.

Assume a correct standing position, this time gripping the shoulders firmly on the points, pulling them outward and downward. Inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts bring the body to a full squat on the heels and rise again to the upright position before expelling every particle of air from the lungs through the mouth. Inhale again immediately and repeat this exercise but three or four times the first morning and increase daily. It will be difficult to do at first, but with faithful practice the patient will soon gain absolute control of her body without effort.

Exercise No. 9.

Stand erect and clasp the hands firmly at the back opposite the nape of the neck. Inhale very deeply, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts, see-saw the hands from right to left, pulling as hard and as far in each direction as possible. Now relax the pulling and exhale slowly through the mouth while counting six. Inhale again immediately and pull in the opposite direction, alternating from left to right ten times in each way. The patient must be very careful to keep the body rigid and hold herself firm from the waist line up, keeping the shoulders well back, in order to get the best results from this exercise.

Exercise No. 10.

Lie on the floor face downward. Now reach back with the hands, catching the tips of the toes, and by means of the muscles in the legs pull up the shoulders, forming a cradle rocker of the body. Inhale and exhale correctly while rocking the body gently back and forth. Do not hold long enough to exhaust every bit of strength at first, but try to rock back and forth just once while holding the breath, then relax and drop gently back to the floor and after a moment's rest try it again.

Exercise No. 11.

Stand erect as described in exercise No. 1. Pass the hands back of the body, crossing them in the back, until the forearms rest across each other, reaching their fullest length. In this position inhale very deeply through the nose, and while holding the breath for four counts, endeavor to bend the body backward from the waist line as far as possible and hold it steady as long as possible. Now relax and rise gently to the original erect position while exhaling through the mouth to count six.

The patient must be careful not to hold too long, thereby overtaxing her strength and strain herself, but must count slowly while holding the body back and rise as soon as she feels her strength becoming exhausted. This exercise may only be done three times to start with and may not be increased until after the first week, at which time she will have gained strength and power of endurance sufficient to enable her to take one or two more, and perhaps be able to hold the position while counting eight to ten.

Exercise No. 12.

Assume correct standing position as described in exercise No. 1. Then place the palms of the hands firmly together at the back, with arms extended their full length. Inhale, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts turn the tips of the fingers inward (toward the body) and upward, straight up the spinal column as far as possible, at which point relax and bring them down again to their original position without having taken the hands apart, while exhaling through the mouth to count of six.

This may sound very simple, but not one woman out of a hundred can turn her hands inward without changing the expression of her face denoting stiff muscles in the hands and wrists, and it will be eight or ten days at least before the patient will be able to pass up the spinal column even half way. And quite some practice will be required before one can reach her collar without letting go her hands, which must not be, for it is in this point that she gets the real good out of the exercise. Pay no attention to a stiffness in the forearms, which will wear away in a few days, and has only been caused by the waking up of muscles that are seldom if ever used.

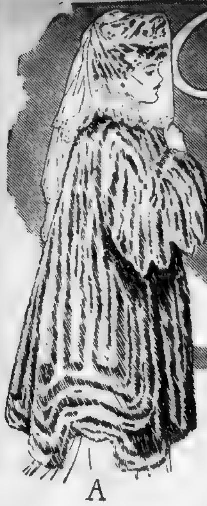
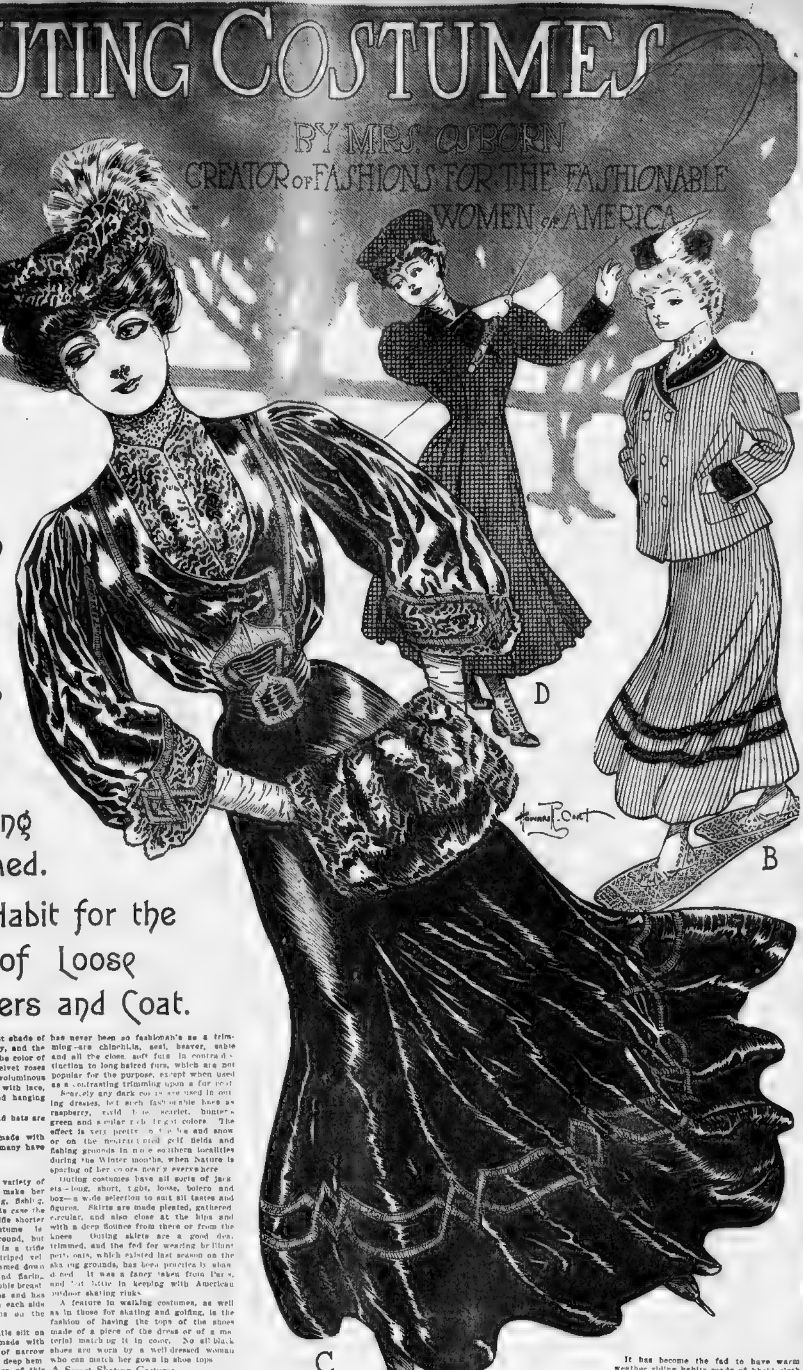
OUTING COSTUMES

BY MRS. OSBORN

CREATOR OF FASHIONS FOR THE FASHIONABLE WOMEN OF AMERICA





Fur Cloaks to Match Outing Costumes.

Outing Dresses Now Made with All Sorts of Coats and with Pleated, Plain and Gathered Skirts, All Being More or Less Trimmed.

The Smartest Riding Habit for the Country Consists of Loose Trousers and Coat.

NOWADAYS every one indulges in outdoor recreation of some kind. It is the exception to find a woman who does not skate, snowshoe, ride, walk, automobile, fish, golf or amuse herself out of doors in such way as the climate and weather permit in the place where she lives.

This fad for outdoor sports has caused a revolution in the smart woman's wardrobe. She no longer puts on her simplest and shortest dress to skate, fish or snowshoe in; she has a costume for every sport, and the extravagance of this fad is nowhere so strongly shown as in automobiling.

Not long since one big fur cloak was considered sufficient for a woman's carriage outfit. Now she has as many as half a dozen expensive fur coats and cloaks for each automobile costume that she appears in. While some women possess more, the average fair automobilist owns from three to six long wraps of the skins of the sable, leopard, tiger, calf, beaver, monkey, seal, fox and mink. In fact, all skins are used for auto coats, but these are the favorites. Fur overboots and fur-lined and trimmed gauntlets are provided for long trips.

Figure A is an example of a very smart auto cloak with a veil and hat to match. It is of sable, with the stripes in the skin arranged to form a sort of Greek trimming design around the lower portion of the sides. It fits loosely at the top and has very wide skirts.

The sides of the wrap are cut upward in a square at the bottom, giving a rather smart outline to the wrap. It has wide sleeves, with the stripes of the skins running crosswise and ending in deep scallops on the outer side. The fronts are made with a rounding shape from the neck, which has no collar. The wrap is lined with heavy brocade in the palest shade of brown, about the shade of putty, and the turban hat is of rough felt, in the color of the coat, with reddish-orange velvet roses to one side the front and a voluminous drapery of brown veil, bordered with lace, flowing over and around it and hanging loose behind.

Muffs always match wraps, and hats are often made of the same fur.

Many automobile coats are made with big rolling collars, but just as many have no collars at all.

Fashionable Outing Furs.

A woman who cannot afford a variety of gowns for outdoor wear may make her skating costume do for walking, fishing, snowshoeing and skating. In this case the costume would need to be a trifle shorter than the present walking costume is. Skirts now just escape the ground, but the dress shown in Figure B is a trifle shorter than that. It is of striped velveteen, with a circular skirt, seamed down the front, fitted at the top and flaring around the bottom. A loose double breasted box coat reaches to the hips and has two rows of big bone buttons on each side the front, with smaller buttons on the pocket flaps.

The back of the coat has a little slit on each side the bottom and is made with loose coat sleeves. Two rows of narrow fur bands trim the skirt above a deep hem.

Suitable materials for costumes of this sort are tweed, corduroy, serge, velveteen, velvet and cloth. With this choice of smart materials the purse of any woman may be satisfied. The sort of furs most popular for trimming purposes—and fur has never been so fashionable as a trimming—are chinchilla, seal, beaver, sable and all the close, soft furs in contradistinction to long haired furs, which are not popular for the purpose, except when used as a contrasting trimming upon a fur coat.

Scarcely any dark colors are used in outing dresses, but such fashionable hues as raspberry, vivid blue, scarlet, hunter's green and similar rich bright colors. The effect is very pretty on the ice and snow or on the neutral tinted golf fields and fishing grounds in more southern localities during the Winter months, when Nature is sparing of her colors nearly everywhere.

Outing costumes have all sorts of jackets—long, short, tight, loose, bolero and box—a wide selection to suit all tastes and figures. Skirts are made pleated, gathered, circular, and also close at the hips and with a deep flounce from there or from the knees. Outing skirts are a good deal trimmed, and the fad for wearing brilliant petticoats, which existed last season on the skating grounds, has been practically abandoned. It was a fancy taken from Paris, and but little in keeping with American outdoor skating rinks.

A feature in walking costumes, as well as in those for skating and golfing, is the fashion of having the tops of the shoes made of a piece of the dress or of a material matching it in color. No all black shoes are worn by a well dressed woman who can match her gown in shoe tops.

A Smart Skating Costume.

Figure C illustrates a very smart skating dress. It would be suitable for other outdoor pastimes and is in a style that may be made up in any of the usual materials for such garments. This costume is of raspberry red velvet—a rich, warm, but quiet shade, and it is particularly pretty, trimmed with chinchilla fur. The collar, vest and backs of the big cuffs are of chinchilla. The front is a curved piece with satin-piped folds outlining the outer side. In each side the front panel portion is inserted a wing-shaped piece of tucked satin of the color of the gown, its glossy surface affording a charming contrast to that of the material of the gown. Tucked satin is inset across the bottom of the front, outlined in a shaped velvet fold, piped with satin and decorated in a scroll design. A buckle effect is outlined with piped folds upon a tucked belt of satin. The jacket panel fastens on the left side of the front. The underarm seams are decorated with tucked satin, framed and trimmed with satin-piped velvet folds. Somewhat full gathered sleeves are embellished with a design carried out in velvet folds upon tucked pieces of satin. The velvet and satin cuff is appliqued upon one of chinchilla, which runs high up the back. The sleeve may be slashed in points above it, with satin piping and facing in the points. The side seams in the front and back are piped with satin and the centre of the back is outlined with piped folds that pass over the belt in an outward curve and come together in a small coattail inset with tucked satin and finished with dangles of satin.

The coat is lined with satin of the color of the dress, and a hat of chinchilla with a rose on one side the front completes the costume.

The New Fishing Redingote.

A smart single garment is shown in figure D, which is suitable for nearly all outdoor pastimes, and is particularly good for fishing purposes where an up-to-date angler wears a pair of high rubber hip boots and is ready to go in the stream after trout. This fishing dress is a redingote, made to fit the figure, and is of dark green cloth reaching to the ankles. Tucks take the place of seams to insure a fit. These are stitched down from below the bust to below the hips, narrowing at the waist line and giving a very slender appearance to the waist. This has its set insured by means of rows and rows of stitching, so that the cloth cannot pull.

A wide panel effect, from the neck to the hem, is arranged down the front, and this is tucked on each side down the outer edge. A row of green braid buttons is sewed on each side the front to the hip line, and the coat lapels and collar are of fur. A panel the full length of the back is narrower at the waist line than in the front panel, and wider at the hem. The sleeves are pleated to the armhole and are tucked in narrow pleats from the cuff to the elbow. Such a garment may be made in any length and is smart looking and practical.

Practically every woman in the North skates, and all over the country riding is indulged in by both little and big women. Children are taught to ride and to skate as soon as they are able to enjoy either sport, and they wear much the same costumes as grown up people do in these exercises.

Many women ride in divided skirts nowadays, and others in loose trousers, long boots and a rather loose coat reaching to the hips. For riding in the country I think the trousers and loose coats are the smartest things possible, and one often sees these at Hempstead and Aiken, where riding is more indulged in than, perhaps, anywhere else. For the park, however, I advocate the old fashioned skirt with either a loose or fitted riding jacket and the usual mannish hat.

It has become the fad to have warm weather riding habits made of khaki cloth in the color worn by our soldiers, and children as well as grown women wear these very smart habits. It is something of a reach forward to say that khaki coats are also smart for rowing and sailing and fishing costumes in warm weather, and have quite a nautical look made up with the number of pockets admissible in a fishing jacket.

Fishing jackets are mostly loose and well supplied with pockets. One wants plenty of room for the arms when fishing, and tight clothes are both a mistake and discomfort.

For this pastime and for general outdoor wear under all sorts of weather conditions an English hat has made its way into favor. It is of stitched material—usually a piece of the costume and is made and stitched so that the hat sheds rain, and so that the brim may be turned up coquettishly in the back or turned down all around as a protection to the hair against wet or dust. It isn't as ugly as other sorts of outdoor headgear that we know of, and the figure in D is shown wearing one.

For general outdoor wear, wherever practicable, large figured lace veils are used to keep the face warm and protect the skin from the ravages of wind and dust.

How to Make the New Parasol Work Basket.

NO one has even imagined that there was much affinity between a parasol and an overgrown desk file, but there is, and a combination of the two makes an article at once very useful and distinctly ornamental.

The wise woman, when she makes a parasol work basket or lace basket, first lines the small parasol with China silk and binds it with ribbon to make it strong. A frill of ribbon is added to the upper edge and then the parasol is ready for its foundation and furniture. A desk file with a good, wide bottom, heavy enough to make an excellent support for the ferrule of the parasol. Any suitable support of about the same size and shape serves the purpose.

The support is covered with wadding and lambs wool, and then a pretty cover is put on it with a dainty bow and a very useful pincushion is effected. When one doesn't want a cushion on the floor the base of the stand is merely covered with silk and trimmed with a bow. Another bow is sewed to the ribbon binding of the parasol ferrule where it meets the cover and a larger bow to the top of the handle.

The inner sides of the parasol are fitted up with different sizes of pockets, made of pieces of silk shirred at the top and arranged with drawing strings, and needle books, emery, scissors, bodkin holders, pincushions and button bags and wax are all ranged around the upper sides of the parasol. There is plenty of room in the bottom for sewing materials, especially when the novel basket remains open. When it is closed it may be tucked away in a very small space and yet never look anything but pretty and attractive.

To fix a parasol up for a baby's use the pockets along the inner side should be lined with oiled silk, for the soap box and bathing articles, but no lining is required for the little powder puff pocket, brush and stocking bag and the larger pockets intended for baby's suit of underwear. Cushions for pins and safety pins are necessary, and one small needlebook, with thread and thimble, for, in these days of scientific baby nursing, the nurse always sews up the backs of the little garments so that buttons and safety pins cannot mar nor hurt the tender back of the little one.

Washing by Gravity

Pay Me Out Of What It Saves You

You've never seen a Washer like this! Because it has only been invented a short time ago.

It is as far ahead of ordinary washers as a horse would be ahead of a cow in a race.

And it leaves the Washboard so far behind that it's lost from sight in the distance.

We've sold thousands and thousands of Washers after putting each one of them out on a month's trial test.

Think of that for a test of goodness.

We call the machine shown in the picture our 1900 "Gravity" Washer.

You know, "Gravity" is what makes a stone roll down hill.

And our new Washer is called the "Gravity" because it almost works itself by practically the same principle as the stone rolling down hill.

You throw the clothes into a tub of soapy water, start off the machine, and the Gravity does nearly all the rest.

I don't mean that it washes all the dirty clothes without a little help from you—mind that!

You must throw the clothes into the tub by hand, and start off the machine working, by hand and keep it going by hand while it drives the soapy water to and fro through the clothes.

Then you must (in about six minutes after the Gravity has been washing) stop the tub, and run the washed clothes through the Wringer, by hand.

So you see it isn't all play. There's some work left for the Woman.

But she can wash a tub full of very dirty clothes with this new "Gravity Washer" in less than Six minutes, by the clock.

And she can wash them with her Head—her Brains—instead of with her hands, because, she can make the Machine do nearly all the work. She hasn't got to bend over a steaming tub of suds with the "Gravity Washer," nor work one of those back-breaking threshing-machines they call "Washers" in the hardware stores.

The "Gravity Washer" won't tear the finest piece of lace—it won't break a button—nor it won't wear the thinnest white clothes.

Because, all the washing is done by driving soapy water through the threads of the dirty clothes.

And this is done chiefly by Gravity—by the same thing that makes a stone roll down hill.

And this Washer is sold so it must pay for itself.

Now, I want to send one of these "Gravity Washers" to any person I believe to be honest, for a month's free trial, so they can prove what I say to be true.

I don't want a penny from you for the month's use of it, remember, unless you decide to keep it after that.

But, if you find it will save you its whole cost, you may pay me after each washing 50c a week for it, or $2.00 a month, out of what it saves you, till the machine is fully paid for.

And, you needn't decide whether you'll keep the Washer or not till after you've tested it a full Month—free of charge.

I will pay the freight myself both ways—and I don't ask a penny of security from you.

If you feel you can do without the "Gravity Washer" after you've used it a month, I will take it back from you, without a penny from you for its use, or a growl from me.

Now, How could I make anything out of that kind of deal if our new "Gravity Washer" wouldn't really do all I say it will?

Write me to-day if you want this "Gravity Washer on a month's free trial. Address plainly: R. F. Bieber, Treas. 1900 Washer Co., 618 Henry St., Binghamton, N. Y., or 355 Yonge St., Toronto, Can.

A POWERFUL STRANGE FORCE.

That Would Do Away with the Mails, Telegraphy and Drugs

Would Be But Little More Startling Than the Marvellous Things Done by People Who Have Tried This Wonderful System.

How Prominent Men and Women Use It to Influence the Minds of Others—Heal Themselves and Others of Chronic Diseases, Nervous Disorders and Habits as If by Magic—Any One Can Do It—Distance No Barrier—One Person's Control Over Another Now Fully Explained.

How Every Man, Woman and Child in the World Can Have "The Secrets of Magnetic Force, Health and Power" Absolutely Free.

Professor F. T. McIntyre, a well-to-do scientist of this city, has created a sensation in the hypnotic world. Through [illegible] down in the realms of nature's mysteries he has discovered a delicate but powerful system that seems destined to revolutionize the theories of the most noted authorities on Mind Force. Some people look upon him as a man possessing a strange power, for he has told them how to influence people far and near and to heal themselves and others of their ills as if by magic. He tells them how to project their thoughts, develop a powerful [illegible] and build up the mechanism of the body and brain. Doctors and magnetists who have tested the workings of his new discovery admit that it surpasses anything in the history of psychic power.

In explaining the method Professor McIntyre says: "I am convinced that everybody can accomplish the things I have done if they understand the system. It would be a grand thing if every man, woman and child in this country learned the use of this wonderful system. There should be no more disease, immorality, drunkenness, despondency, separations, poverty or failures in life. I have sent free illustrated pamphlets to people in many parts of the world, which explain the principles of my new discovery, and I find they can do the same wonderful things I have done, and for which some persons think I possess a special power. I have sent these printed pamphlets out without any charge whatever, as I am anxious to have every one try the wonders of this new discovery. The letters received from persons who tried it are the same. Many are loud in their exclamations of surprise and thanks, and say they never dreamed such things possible. I receive many fine presents and enjoy working for the uplifting of mankind and science. The kind letters received from grateful hearts more than pay for the interest I take. I will send a copy of my free book to every person who writes me without any charge whatever."

Professor McIntyre has a basketful of letters from people in many parts of the world. They are, indeed, startling. Mr. James Kubal, a prominent business man of Chicago, writes the following:

"I never dreamed such things possible. If I had only known of this sooner. This system has made a different man of me. I shall give up business and make more [illegible] the use of this system than I [illegible]. It has brought back my sight. I [illegible] glasses, and work without them, too. [illegible] my backwardness and I can [illegible] customers in fine shape. I did not [illegible] full of the magnetism. I [illegible] wonderful."

Mr. Eugene D[illegible], Baton Rouge, La., writes: "Having tried [illegible] I unhesitatingly pronounce it [illegible] claim for it."

Rev. E. G. King, pastor of Christian Church, Upper Lake, Cal., writes: "I cannot recommend your system too highly [illegible] I am willing to answer any inquiries [illegible]."

Dr. H. A. [illegible], Wheatly, Ontario, Canada, writes: "I [illegible] investigated the methods and [illegible] of Professor McIntyre, and can say that the system is scientific and surpasses anything in the line of therapeutics that has come to my notice."

Fred S. Brett, Apartado 265, Guadalajara, Mexico, writes: "I have done wonderful things in influencing people with this system. Have had over 80 persons under my control, and compelled them to do startling things. I advise everybody to try it. This system is truly marvellous."

This free book is full of startling explanations and pictures, showing that any one can master, in a short time, the power to control and sway the minds of others. It describes the strange phenomena of Psychic and Hypnotic Influence, Mystic Healing, Psycho and Suggestive Therapeutics, Personal Magnetism, and a condensed, simple system of reading the characters of others though thousands of miles away. It gives you the key to the development of the inner or dormant forces of concentration, force of character, will power, memory, determination, ambition, enthusiasm, inspiration, continuity of thought and the ability to throw off the evil effects of disease and [illegible].

It is indeed one of the most amazingly interesting books of the age, beaming with interest from cover to cover, and all who receive free copies of it can be thankful. It points out the road to financial and social success, [illegible] astonishing facts that have been overlooked by the public for many years.

If you wish a free copy of this wonderful book write a postal or letter to Professor F. T. McIntyre, Dept. 1157, No. 12[illegible] West [illegible] street, New York, N. Y. Any one who writes will receive it. No one will be disappointed. It is sent by mail, postage paid, absolutely free.

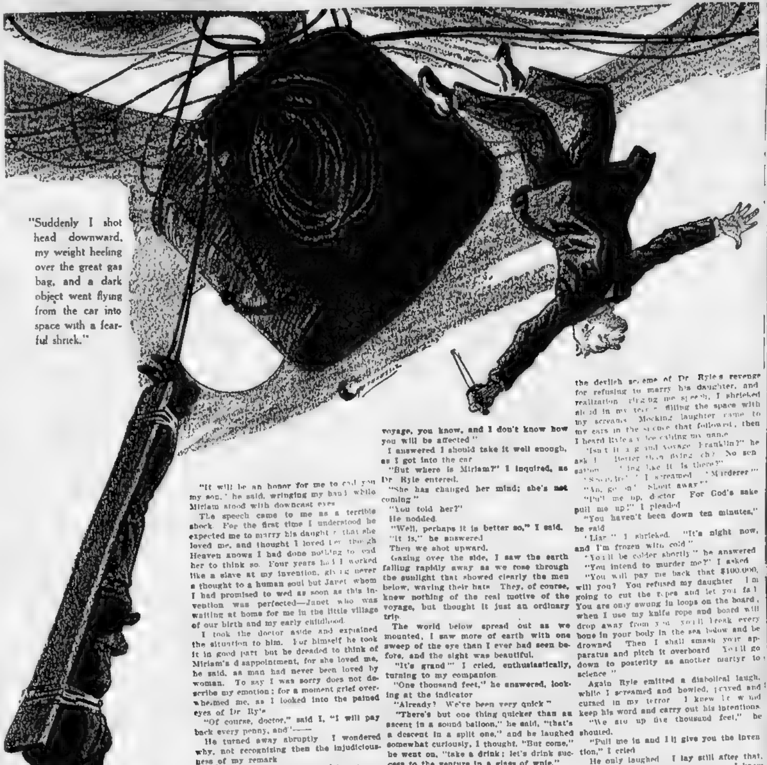
A TRAGEDY ABOVE THE CLOUDS



"Suddenly I shot head downward, my weight heeling over the great gas bag, and a dark object went flying from the car into space with a fearful shriek."

SLEEP was out of the question. For three days and nights I had not closed my eyes. I was in a fever of excitement, such only as a man on the verge of a great, a revolutionizing discovery can ever experience. On the verge, did I say? Nay, more, I was certain of success, sure I had solved the great problem which had baffled mankind for centuries. In a week my name would ring in the four quarters of the earth, my fame would be world wide; I should be acclaimed and feted, and mine would be as much wealth as I cared to demand.

I held in my grasp the secret of aerial navigation. Oh, no; not in the form of a steerable balloon nor a dirigible airship. Yesterday's impossibility of a man flying, taking flight through the air like a bird, was to-day not only possible, but an accomplished fact. What Maxim had seriously told me would never be done I had done—I had flown!

Dr. Joseph Ryle, my good patron—my good patron then—had witnessed my flight; so had his daughter Miriam and they had been as overjoyed, as enthusiastic as myself, especially Miriam. I remember how she took my hands in hers and covered them with kisses, and how Dr. Ryle laughed with mad delight at the thought of the sensation my discovery would cause in the world.

And for myself—well, my feelings defy expression. I was glad I had not wasted the $100,000 he had placed at my disposal, sorry that he would get no credit for his share in the great discovery.

"It will be an honor for me to call you my son," he said, wringing my hand while Miriam stood with downcast eyes.

The speech came to me as a terrible shock. For the first time I understood he expected me to marry his daughter, that she loved me, and thought I loved her, though Heaven knows I had done nothing to lead her to think so. Four years had I worked like a slave at my invention, giving never a thought to a human soul but Janet whom I had promised to wed as soon as this invention was perfected—Janet who was waiting at home for me in the little village of our birth and my early childhood.

I took the doctor aside and explained the situation to him. For himself he took it in good part but he dreaded to think of Miriam's disappointment, for she loved me, he said, as man had never been loved by woman. To say I was sorry does not describe my emotion; for a moment grief overwhelmed me, as I looked into the pained eyes of Dr. Ryle.

"Of course, doctor," said I, "I will pay back every penny, and"——

He turned away abruptly. I wondered why, not recognizing then the injudiciousness of my remark.

Ten minutes later he returned to me.

"The balloon will be quite ready in twenty minutes," he said cheerfully. "Wont you come and take some refreshments ere we start?"

I laughed at so mundane an idea as eating and drinking.

Then Miriam entered the laboratory and pressed me to give a thought to my body.

"Father tells me you have touched no food for two days," she said, laying a hand on my arm. "You will come and take something?" and she looked up pleadingly.

But I could not. As Dr. Ryle said, the inventor's fever consumed me body and soul.

"It will be time enough when I return," I assured them, and I did not wonder then that they should remark to each other, "When he returns!"

I looked contemptuously on the balloon as its great, round, ugly body expanded under the inflowing gas. Soon there would be no need for such a hideous monster, for such terribly lengthy preparations when man wished to take an aerial flight. And it was I who had brought this thing to pass. My breast swelled with pride.

We were taking a voyage in that balloon—the doctor and Miriam and I—to prove to the full my invention. At an altitude of 2,000 feet I was to fit on my apparatus and soar into space. We wanted no one to witness the flight but ourselves; time enough to announce the discovery when I alighted on earth.

The box containing the apparatus I carried out from the workshop myself and deposited in the car.

"What's that?" I asked of a man at my side, indicating a large wicker basket which had already been placed in the car.

Dr. Ryle answered me.

"Just a few provisions," he said, "some spirits and wine. This is your first balloon voyage, you know, and I don't know how you will be affected."

I answered I should take it well enough, as I got into the car.

"But where is Miriam?" I inquired, as Dr. Ryle entered.

"She has changed her mind; she's not coming."

"You told her?"

He nodded.

"Well, perhaps it is better so," I said.

"It is," he answered.

Then we shot upward.

Gazing over the side, I saw the earth falling rapidly away as we rose through the sunlight that showed clearly the men below, waving their hats. They, of course, knew nothing of the real motive of the voyage, but thought it just an ordinary trip.

The world below spread out as we mounted, I saw more of earth with one sweep of the eye than I ever had seen before, and the sight was beautiful.

"It's grand!" I cried, enthusiastically, turning to my companion.

"One thousand feet," he answered, looking at the indicator.

"Already? We've been very quick."

"There's but one thing quicker than an ascent in a sound balloon," he said, "that's a descent in a split one," and he laughed somewhat curiously, I thought. "But come," he went on, "take a drink; let's drink success to the venture in a glass of wine."

"No necessity," I replied. "It is a success." But I took the glass he handed me and sat down, noticing the provision basket was already opened.

Dr. Ryle filled another glass and raised it. "Good health and good luck, Franklin!" he cried, his eyes gleaming.

"One moment," I said. "You are not angry with me, doctor?"

"What for?" he asked, as though he did not know.

"Miriam," I mentioned.

"No, not angry, only devilishly disappointed. Good luck!" and he drained his glass even as I swallowed the contents of mine.

He looked at me curiously.

"You're not afraid?"

I tried to speak, but a choking filled my throat, my head swam, my eyes grew dizzy, and I collapsed all of a heap on the bottom of the car.

When memory came to me again it was night. But though I was sailing through space I was not in the car. Ropes bound my hands to my sides and my feet together. I swayed gently to and fro, face downward.

Like a flash I realized my position. Lying on a narrow board, extending from my chest to my knees, I was suspended beneath the car of the balloon!

Dr. Ryle had played me false!

We had left the land and were sailing above the sea, for I saw the water stretched before me like a sheet of silver lit up by a brilliant moon. Far away I saw a dark object that must have been a ship.

My soul was filled with horror and dread, my tongue paralyzed; the only thought that held my brain was that I was doomed. Between myself and that smiling sea thousands of feet below was but a frail plank, to which I was securely lashed, suspended by ropes to the car overhead. I realized the devilish scheme of Dr. Ryle's revenge for refusing to marry his daughter, and realization stinging me to speech, I shrieked aloud in my terror, filling the space with my screams. Mocking laughter came to my ears in the silence that followed, then I heard Ryle's voice calling my name.

"Isn't it a grand voyage, Franklin?" he asked. "Better than flying, eh? No sensation like it, is there?"

"Scoundrel!" I screamed. "Murderer!"

"Ah, go on! Shout away!"

"Pull me up, doctor. For God's sake pull me up!" I pleaded.

"You haven't been down ten minutes," he said.

"Liar!" I shrieked. "It's night now, and I'm frozen with cold."

"You'll be colder shortly," he answered.

"You intend to murder me?" I asked.

"You will pay me back that $100,000, will you? You refused my daughter. I'm going to cut the ropes and let you fall. You are only swung in loops on the board; when I use my knife rope and board will drop away from you. You'll break every bone in your body in the sea below and be drowned. Then I shall smash your apparatus and pitch it overboard. You'll go down to posterity as another martyr to science."

Again Ryle emitted a diabolical laugh, while I screamed and howled, prayed and cursed in my terror. I knew he would keep his word and carry out his intentions.

"We are up five thousand feet," he shouted.

"Pull me in and I'll give you the invention," I cried.

He only laughed. I lay still after that, with a strange calmness upon me. I knew my fate was sealed; but, my first terror over, I determined to meet it like a man. Still, I cried as I thought of poor little Janet waiting for me at home, and that I should never see her again. The tears froze on my cheeks the cold was so bitter.

It was a long drop down there, I thought, looking at the sea below. I wondered how long I should be falling—if I should be unconscious or dead before I struck the water.

Then Ryle spoke again.

"Franklin."

"Yes."

"I thought perhaps you had fainted."

"I'm not afraid."

"I'm going to cut the rope at your head," he laughed.

I felt the knife sawing through the rope, and shivered. Suddenly I shot head downward, my weight heeling over the great gas bag, and a dark object went flying from the car into space with a frightful shriek. The unexpected had happened. Ryle had not counted on the tilting of the balloon and had been thrown out. He was dead by now; the fate he had designed for me had been his own!

They tell me now it was all madness that my flying apparatus was a failure and turned my brain; that I never went up in a balloon that I am still alive. But they keep me here in a room and watch me day and night. And they think I do not know they are lying to me, but I do, for often I see the face of Ryle peering at me, and I know he's dead. He has a sad look in his eyes. I think he is sorry now.

And, proof above all, my hair was black when I went up in that cursed balloon; when I pulled out a hair and looked at it the other day it was snowy white.

EDOUARD CHARLES

Why You Will Be Healthier If You Don't Eat Breakfast.

MANY people think that a man ought to take a good square meal when he awakes in the morning, after fasting for six or eight hours. If he went without food for that length of time during the daylight hours, declares a writer in Naturagraph, and did not then eat plentifully his relatives and friends would think that he had gone too long without sustenance, and that he would suffer accordingly.

The idea that it is really harmful to eat a heavy breakfast, or even to eat a breakfast at all, will be scouted by the majority. The kindly disposed persons will take you by the buttonhole and give you examples of the fallacy of such a doctrine.

They will take you back, figuratively, to the times of their ancestors, when the yeomen did real yeomen's work, and began the day with a meal the "squareness" of which would startle you.

Then to back up the argument, and show you that times have not actually changed, they will mention the hearty, healthy ploughman, who takes his first meal under a hedge and causes a whole red handkerchiefful to disappear.

There are certain facts, however, which these well-meaning friends lose sight of. The burly ancestor and the modern ploughman may both be classed as very hard workers in the field of manual labor, and this hearty breakfast was, and is, generally taken after an hour or two of muscular work.

It is highly probable, too, that the ploughman of to-day does not use up his muscular tissues so quickly as did his ancestors, whose tools and implements were less scientific.

Broadly speaking, man eats to repair waste and to produce the warmth and the motive force of which he has need, and as he does not accomplish the same amount of muscular toil as his forefathers, he does not require to eat as they did, especially at breakfast.

In the light of this assertion, it is not difficult to see that there are many wrong foods even for breakfast, to say the least.

To sit down to a breakfast of a steak of substantial proportions is the practice that leads to dyspepsia, particularly when the person who does so has mental rather than bodily labor to perform.

There is a fairly large proportion of albuminous matter in flesh foods and vegetable comestibles such as oatmeal, and this albumen is used to repair the muscular tissues worn away by work. Man should, therefore, eat only sufficient to repair the waste, and all he consumes in addition is deleterious.

Now, after a long night's rest, when the muscles have done no work for hours and even the heart has slowed down, it is obvious that man does not need much building up. He had dinner, or supper, the night before, and the waste has, in all likelihood, been repaired completely during the night.

Man loads his stomach just at the very time when it does not need food. During the nightly rest the waste has been repaired and the body is fresh and vigorous. When an engine has plenty of steam the fireman does not shovel more fuel on the blazing fire, yet that is what man does when he consumes his food—that is, the fuel that gives him the motive power needed for his work. He requires to wait till his energy is giving out before he adds fuel to the fire.

It is this unnecessary loading that makes people suffer from many of the complaints now prevalent. The Latin races know better, and their breakfast is usually a single cup of coffee with a small allowance of bread or something light. The only thing man should take is a glass of hot water (not too hot) to break his fast, and if he follows this plan and eats his first meal at midday he will be all the healthier.

Solutions to Last Week's Puzzles---By Sam Loyd.

THERE were five names of five pretty girls hidden in the quotations which appeared on the back page of the magazine section last Sunday. Many young puzzlists wrote to say that they had been able to find four of the names, but could not discover the fifth. The correct solution to the hidden names puzzle is as follows:

"Of such as wandering near her secret
bower,
M(olest her) ancient solitary reign."—Gray.
"Where olive leaves were twinkling in every wind that blew,
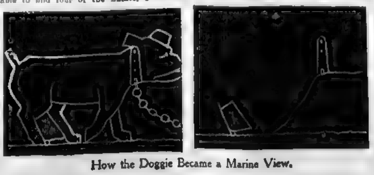
(There sat) beneath the pleasant shade
(a da)msel of Peru." Bryant.
"Slowly she raised her form of grace;
Her eyes (no ra)y conceptive flung."—Hogg.
"Stainless worth,
Such as the st(ernest a)ge of virtue saw."
—Bryant.



How the Doggie Became a Marine View.

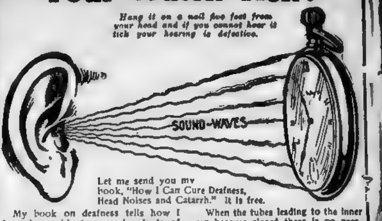
The parentheses indicate the five hidden names, Esther, Theresa, Ada, Nora and Ernesta.

The two accompanying illustrations show how the magic slate puzzle was solved by changing the bulldog's picture into a marine view simply by marking out all the unnecessary lines.

In Sam Loyd's mixed-up sign puzzle the solution was found by cutting the sign in two pieces behind the first letters T and A in the first and third lines. Then by turning the second half of the sign upside down the sign was made to read "This is an ex."

How Far Can You Hear Your Watch Tick?

Hang it on a nail five feet from your head and if you cannot hear it tick your hearing is defective.



Let me send you my book, "How I Can Cure Deafness, Head Noises and Catarrh." It is free.

My book on deafness tells how I have been able to cure hundreds of people with the Oneal Dissolvent Method; tells all about deafness and its causes and gives the history of my personal experience in curing myself of deafness.

Nearly all deafness and head noises are caused by Catarrh.

Little tubes leading from the back of the throat to the inner ear, and which admit the passage of air behind the ear drum, afford a fertile field for the catarrh germs which are everywhere in the air.

They set up an inflammation of the delicate Mucous Membrane, composing the lining of these tubes, causing the tissues to become swollen and congested, which partially closes the little tubes.

This produces the ringing, buzzing and roaring sounds commonly called "head noises," and which are sure warnings of deafness.

They often become so annoying as to produce insanity.

The ear drum is a delicate membrane like the head of a bass drum.

It is held tense by the equilibrium of air pressure from within and without.

When the sound waves strike it, it vibrates and thus telegraphs the sounds to the brain.

When the tubes leading to the inner ear become closed there is no pressure on the ear drum from within to counteract the pressure of 14 pounds to the square inch from without.

This causes the drum to sag inward and to thicken.

It can no longer vibrate, and thus the victim of catarrh becomes deaf.

The Oneal Dissolvent treatment cures deafness by removing the cause and restoring a healthy condition to the tissues.

Applied under my direction, it dissolves the congested and swollen condition, and opens up the tubes leading to the inner ear; the air pressure and restoration of healthy tissue cause the ear drum to regain its normal condition.

It again becomes tense and vibrant, responsive to the slightest sound—the hearing is restored.

In this way I cured myself.

In this way I have cured thousands of others since.

In this way I can cure you.

There is no treatment like it.

It is one sure way by which you can be cured.

Just write and tell me about your case and I will advise you what to do.

I will also send my book free of charge.

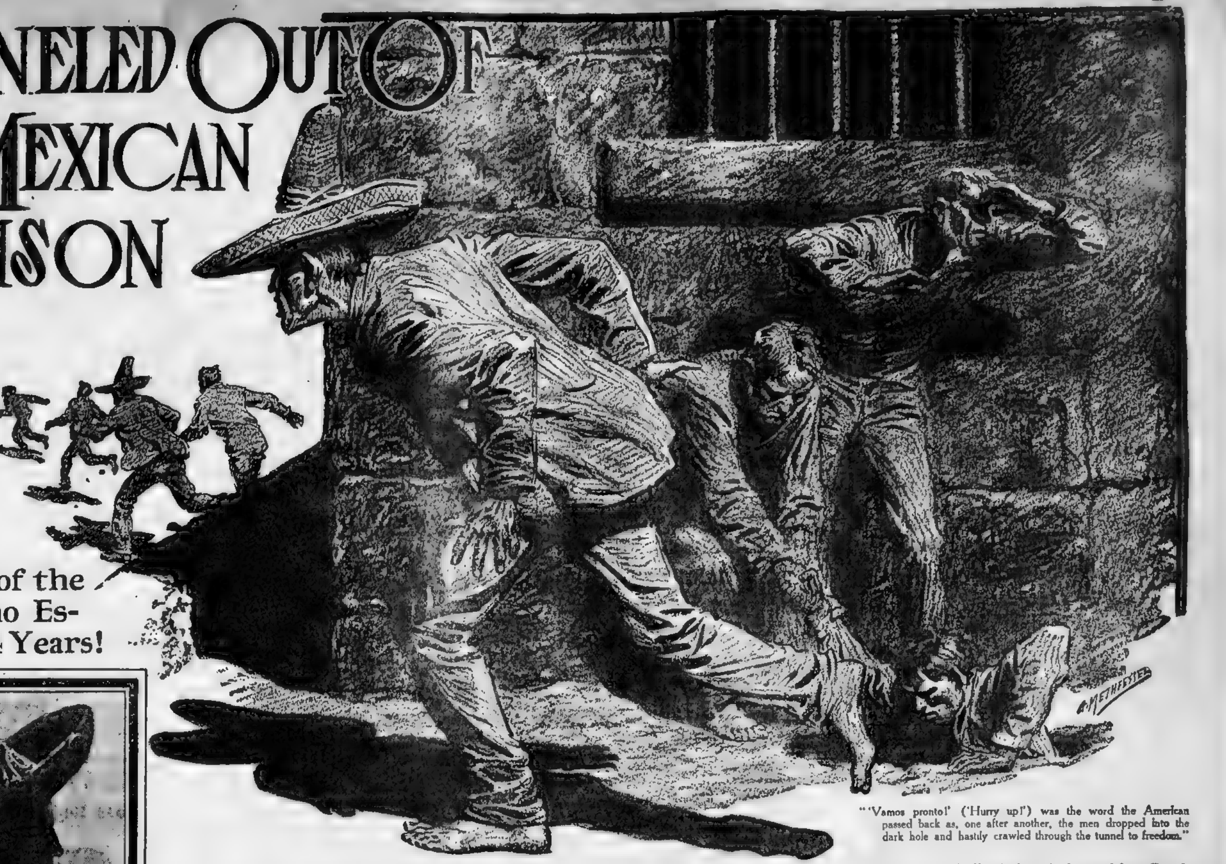
TUNNELED OUT OF A MEXICAN PRISON

And the Poor Warden Must Serve the Unexpired Terms of the Men Who Escaped---94 Years!



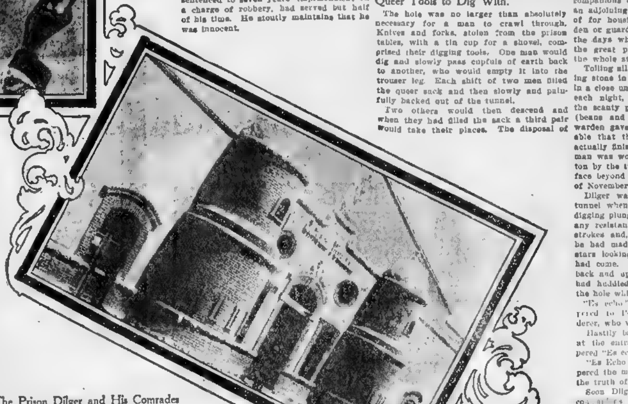
"'Vamos pronto!' ('Hurry up!') was the word the American passed back as, one after another, the men dropped into the dark hole and hastily crawled through the tunnel to freedom."

Dilger Disguised as a Mexican Gentleman in a Stolen Outfit.

BECAUSE a young American, R. L. Dilger, and seven native convicts escaped from the prison at Moctezuma, Mexico, by digging a tunnel under the walls, the carcelero, or warden, has been condemned to spend the remainder of his life in the very cell in which the eight men had been confined—several of them for years. This is one of the laws in Mexico which is rigidly enforced, and unless the warden recaptures the men who escaped from his custody, which is most improbable, he will be obliged to serve their unfinished terms which amount to ninety four years. This means life imprisonment.

Dilger, after his daring escape, quickly separated from the Mexicans. He made a bee line over the rugged Sierra Madre Mountains, through lofty snow covered gorges, across flood swept passes, dodged the mounted and foot rurales of Mexico by day and the equally dangerous ladrones, the highwaymen of that land, by night, and finally arrived at El Paso after several weeks of most unusual dangers and hardships. His only clothing during the most trying part of his flight was the light garb of a water carrier.

Dilger and his companions, who were all confined in one cell, started to dig the tunnel on the night of November 1. They took every care and precaution to carry on their work without detection, for several attempts to escape had been discovered previously. The leg of a pair of discarded pantaloons was made to serve as a bag in which the earth was conveyed from the tunnel, and while two men mounted guard the other six dug by relays during the night.



The Prison Dilger and His Comrades Tunneled Their Way Out Of.

For twenty-seven nights the men burrowed into the dark earth like human moles. Dilger was the director of the undertaking. He conceived every other and this the finally successful plan for escaping from the miseries of the prison at Moctezuma.

Four of his companions, Juan Martinez, Diego Herera, Jose Vasquez and Manuel Cobas, were serving out long terms for murder. Martinez had twenty-four years ahead of him when he escaped and the others fifteen years each. The others, Pedro Mendez, Mariano Panay and Jaime Perez, were being punished for theft. Mendez left an unfinished term amounting to six and one half years, Panay eight years and Perez seven years. Dilger, who had been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment on a charge of robbery, had served but half of his time. He stoutly maintains that he was innocent.

From the time that a few bricks were removed from a dark corner of the floor of the cell in which Dilger and the seven Mexican convicts were confined to begin digging on November 1 until the American crossed the border his life was in constant danger. The hardships of the imprisoned men as they painfully dug their way down five feet from the floor of their cell and then fifteen feet horizontally until they knew that they were beyond the walls of the prison, were as great as their dangers.

Queer Tools to Dig With.

The hole was no larger than absolutely necessary for a man to crawl through. Knives and forks, stolen from the prison tables, with a tin cup for a shovel, comprised their digging tools. One man would dig and slowly pass cupfuls of earth back to another, who would empty it into the trouser leg. Each shift of two men filled the queer sack and then slowly and painfully backed out of the tunnel.

Two others would then descend and when they had filled the sack a third pair would take their places. The disposal of the earth from the excavation was a matter of grave risk. Had the guards in the prison been alert and watchful the plan of escape would have failed. Dilger had his companions dump the sacks of earth into an adjoining cell which was not made use of for housing prisoners. Had the warden or guards looked into that cell during the days while the tunnel was being dug the great pile of earth would have told the whole story.

Toiling all day in the blazing sun, cracking stone in the prison corral and digging in a close unventilated tunnel several hours each night, and compelled to live upon the scanty portion of frijoles and tortillas (beans and thin corn cakes) which the warden gave each man, it seems remarkable that they were able to persist and actually finish the tunnel. As it was, every man was worn to little more than a skeleton by the time the tunnel pierced the surface beyond the prison walls on the night of November 27.

Dilger was driving the heading of the tunnel when the knife with which he was digging plunged forward, not meeting with any resistance. A few nervous, trembling strokes and, peering from the little hole he had made, the American could see the stars looking down upon him. The time had come. Quickly the word was passed back and up into the cell where the men had huddled around the dark opening of the hole which meant so much to them.

"Es echo!" ("It's done!") Dilger whispered to Pedro Mendez, the Yaqui murderer, who was filling the sack behind him.

Hastily backing out of the tunnel until at the entrance to the cell, Pedro whispered "Es echo!"

"Es Echo! Es Echo!" wonderingly whispered the men in the cell, scarce believing the truth of the statement.

Soon Dilger appeared and he told his companions that all was ready for their escape. A hurried consultation was held. Plans were quickly made and every man did what little had to be done in the way of preparation for leaving the hated prison. It was about 2 o'clock in the morning when Dilger led his little band into the tunnel.

"Vamos pronto!" ("hurry up!") was the word the American passed back as one after another the men dropped into the dark hole and hastily crawled through the tunnel to freedom.

Dilger scrambled out, assisted by Mendez. Giving Mendez his hand, the Yaqui was soon at the surface, and then Jose Vasquez, another Yaqui. While Mendez kept a sharp watch for fear of discovery, the others clambered to the surface and hurriedly and silently stole off in the direction of the Globo mine to the northward, the appointed place of rendezvous.

Here the party separated, as it was thought unwise for eight escaped convicts to try to make their way through the country together. The Mexicans decided to try their fortunes by going westward to the Gulf of California by way of Horcasitas and the Rio del Sonora.

Dilger Becomes a Water Carrier.

Dilger met a water carrier who was about to begin his day's work. It was not hard to strike up an acquaintance with the man, and in a short time a trade of the clothes worn by the American for an outfit of water carrier's clothing was arranged with 25 cents in the bargain, saved from the money he had secreted in the lining of his clothing three years ago when first he was imprisoned.

Forgetting that the water carrier might assist in his recapture, he strode along the road which grew more and more wild as his way led him toward the mountains but a few miles distant. The road was crooked as it followed the valleys. He sat down for a moment's rest and just then heard the galloping of what seemed to be a troop of horses. In a moment the thought of the mounted rurales flashed through his mind. None too quickly did he seek cover in the bushes at the roadside when a company of the Mexican police came rapidly along the very road where he had been walking but a minute before.

Dilger recognized Colonel Kosterlitzky, the commander of the company, as one of the most accomplished of Sonora's police officers. What alarmed him most was that right opposite where he was crouching in the bushes, afraid to move and hardly daring to breathe, the troop was suddenly halted and Kosterlitzky and his officers held a consultation. With a feeling of relief Dilger saw the officers draw away from the side of the road, heard the sharp order for reforming the ranks and the command to resume the chase.

That was the closest that Dilger came to the rurales for several days. He made his way to Arizepe, lodging at the ranches of hospitable Mexicans at night and begging food by day when near habitations, or digging roots from the ground and clubbing nuts from trees when he could get nothing else to eat.

In the mountains he nearly froze to death, clad as he was in the thin cotton trousers and loose coat of the water carrier.

After leaving Arizepe and walking in the direction of Oputo, he was obliged to cross a wide desert-like plateau. Here he came face to face with a company of unmounted rurales who were scouring the country for him. Their commander was not very smart, or Dilger was a very good pretender indeed, for he was seized and questioned rigidly about himself. Why they did not penetrate his disguise he does not try to explain. He was permitted to go free.

Becomes a Mexican Gentleman.

One night after dark he came to Pilares de Nacozari. He saw the bills offering a reward for his capture, and he kept a sharp lookout for officers of the law. Pretending to seek employment, he got a laborer to tell him something about the city and the chances for work. He inquired about the residents of the city, particularly the rich and where they lived. Leaving the man, he went to that part of Pilares, and, favored by the night, which was unusually dark, he slipped into the residence of a wealthy citizen and stole a complete suit of clothing. To his intense joy he found some small change in the pockets of the appropriated garments.

Under pretext of prospecting and looking for mining property for a French company, Dilger left the city and footed his way northward. With but little difficulty he reached Fronteras.

Resuming his tramp Dilger soon came in sight of the border. He says that he could hardly keep from running, but was afraid that if he did he would be shot down and recaptured just as he was about to gain his freedom. He crossed into the United States, and after a day's very hard walking through the Mule Mountains got to Bisbee on the Arizona & Southeastern Railroad. From here it was merely a matter of boarding freight trains, and in a few days' time Dilger arrived in El Paso satisfied that he was at last safe from pursuit.

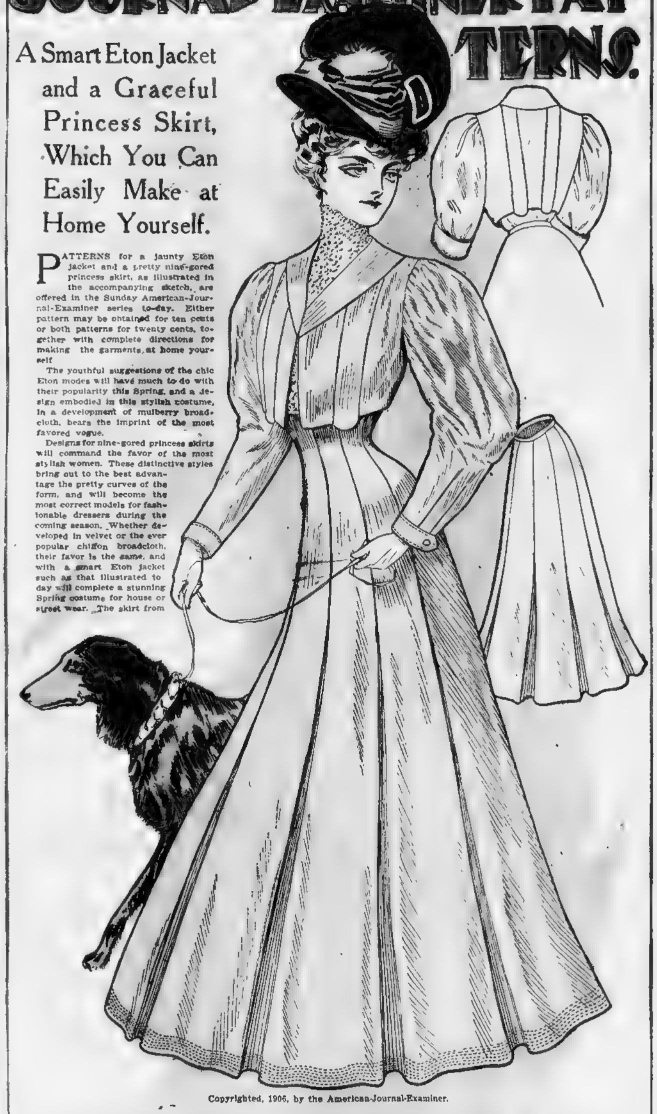
SUNDAY AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER PATTERNS.

A Smart Eton Jacket and a Graceful Princess Skirt, Which You Can Easily Make at Home Yourself.



Copyrighted, 1906, by the American-Journal-Examiner.

PATTERNS for a jaunty Eton jacket and a pretty nine-gored princess skirt, as illustrated in the accompanying sketch, are offered in the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner series to-day. Either pattern may be obtained for ten cents or both patterns for twenty cents, together with complete directions for making the garments at home yourself.

The youthful suggestions of the chic Eton modes will have much to do with their popularity this Spring, and a design embodied in this stylish costume, in a development of mulberry broadcloth, bears the imprint of the most favored vogue.

Designs for nine-gored princess skirts will command the favor of the most stylish women. These distinctive styles bring out to the best advantage the pretty curves of the form, and will become the most correct models for fashionable dressers during the coming season. Whether developed in velvet or the ever popular chiffon broadcloth, their favor is the same, and with a smart Eton jacket such as that illustrated to-day will complete a stunning Spring costume for house or street wear. The skirt from which the illustrated design was conceived was in a development of cherry broadcloth, and a tailor finish was supplied by machine stitching.

The Eton jacket sets smoothly across the back, where strappings add to the effect, and the front shows a similar conceit introduced in strappings. The sleeves are tucked above the nobby strap cuffs, and a shawl collar supplements an air of smartness to the neck. If preferred, the sleeves may be made to terminate at the elbow in the fashionable way and completed with flare cuffs, as illustrated.

For wear with a cloth nine-gored skirt of melon green, built on the princess lines, as that shown herewith, an Eton of this order of darker green velvet would be very chic. The collar should be of Irish crochet lace, and elbow cuffs to accord should be added.

Fashionable fabrics for reproductions are chiffon velvet, ladies' cloth, venetian, tailor suitings and English and Scotch fabrics.

The Eton jacket pattern, No. 219—1252, is cut in six sizes, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. To make it in the 36-inch size three yards of material 36 inches wide will be required.

The princess skirt is shaped symmetrically with nine gores, following the curves of the hips, and the fulness below falls into graceful box pleats as represented. If the bodice portion is not desired, the skirt may be completed at the top with the regulation band.

Old pink cloth having a lustrous, satiny surface is a charming choice, and makes a handsome complement for wear with a short coat of the same fabric.

Velvet, cheviot, serge, velveteen, satin de luxe, chiffon taffeta, moire and other fabrics of more or less body are in good taste.

The nine-gored princess skirt, No. 220—1273, is cut in five sizes, 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inches waist measure. For 26-inch size 7½ yards of material with nap, 27 inches wide are required.

Please remember in ordering either or both of these patterns that sizes other than those mentioned above cannot be furnished.

In ordering either the pattern for the Eton jacket, No. 219—1252, or for the nine-gored princess skirt, No. 220—1273, you simply fill in the proper blank, giving your name and post office address and size of pattern required, and mail, together with ten cents in money or stamps, to

THROUGHOUT life in this age of competition, struggles and dishonesty, you are bound to be cheated often.

BUT DON'T CHEAT YOURSELF.

Self-deception is responsible for more than three-quarters of the so-called "unexplained failures."

The picture which we publish to attract your attention does not, of course, represent the kind of cheating we have in mind when we say "DON'T CHEAT YOURSELF."

The artist shows the same man in two positions, playing against himself and cheating himself.

Although the thing is not done with cards, chips nd money in real life, it is done just the same. Are you quite sure YOU don't cheat yourself as this man in the picture is cheating his other self?

THE CLERK CHEATS HIMSELF.

You work in a store or elsewhere as a clerk. Your success really depends ABSOLUTELY UPON YOURSELF.

If you have not reached success nine-tenths of the blame at least is due to yourself.

Do you place nine-tenths or TEN-tenths of the blame on someone else?

If so, you cheat yourself and prevent your growth.

Don't imagine that you are kept down by somebody's jealousy or ill-will.

Don't imagine that you are kept down by lack of an employer's appreciation.

There ARE unappreciative employers, and there are disagreeable superiors. BUT THEY CAN'T KEEP YOU DOWN UNLESS YOU LET THEM, and help them.

Hard work—even if it doesn't seem to pay at first—will make you go ahead BECAUSE IT WILL MAKE YOU A BETTER AND A MORE USEFUL WORKER.

The man who gets ahead does so because he uses his energy IN WORK, not in thinking that he is ill-treated.

The writer deceives himself.

He imagines, when people don't read him, that he writes "above their heads," or that there is a conspiracy against him. There isn't any conspiracy against ANYBODY—in the big public which controls success and failure.

Occasionally the very great man writes for a world not yet born. But the average man who thinks that he is the victim of jealousy or of public stupidity is simply cheating himself in the usual way.

Don't accept failure as proof of superiority. Take it as proof OF FAILURE AND AS A NEEDED REBUKE.

Among all the writers the most to be pitied are those that gather in foolish little cliques, praise each other, deceive each other, AND CHEAT THEMSELVES.

If you talk to a man who doesn't listen, you realize that you don't INTEREST him.

If you write and the public doesn't read, you ought to know that you don't interest the public.

Go to writing in some other way or go to digging post-holes. Don't cheat yourself.

"Know Thyself."

This inscription on the Temple of Apollo at Delphi said, in other words, "Don't Cheat Thyself."

Young man and young woman, the most important thing that you can do is to KNOW yourself, ESPECIALLY TO KNOW AND ADMIT YOUR WEAKNESSES AND SHORTCOMINGS.

Through self-deception, misunderstanding of your own possibilities and limitations, you can keep yourself back indefinitely.

Just bar out from your vocabulary and your talk all the familiar self-cheating expressions such as:

"I am not appreciated."

"Everybody is down on me."

"Some people have wonderful luck."

"I wish I had had So-and-So's chance."

"It's better to be born lucky than rich," etc.

Make up your mind that in your own case you won't admit ANY excuse for failure.

Don't UNDERESTIMATE your own ability. There is some truth in the German saying, "Nur die Lumpen sind bescheiden," which means "Only blockheads are modest."

There is SOME truth in it, but it is not ALL truth by any means.

Many a fool is vain and self-deceptive. Many a man of great power is modest to the last degree.

If you CAN recognize your own powers, do so. It is well to know your STRENGTH as well as your Weakness.

But DON'T FOOL YOURSELF.

Don't make any weak excuses. If another man runs faster than you IT'S BECAUSE HE IS FASTER THAN YOU OR TRIES HARDER.

Nine young men out of ten in the game of life talk as they do in the game of billiards. If they are beaten it is the fault of the cue, or of the table, or of luck. Never their own.

When women don't know how to manage their housekeeping—it is usually the fault of the servants, the eternal servant girl problem. But the woman who knows how to treat servants well usually knows how to get them and to keep them. Don't cheat yourself even in such small matters as that.

We wish that we could have made this article more emphatic. It is weak and flabby. But it has a point, a suggestion of the very greatest value to everybody who wants to get on in the world.

Don't cheat yourself at any stage in your career. If you succeed a little, don't cheat yourself into the belief that you are already a great man—that is fatal.

And if you haven't succeeded at all, don't cheat yourself into thinking that it is someone else's fault.

Put the blame on your own shoulders—it is better to decide against yourself too much than too much in favor of yourself.

Play squarely with yourself and Fate will play squarely with you.

Mirandy on the Lovers' Catechism

By Dorothy Dix

"MA'Y JANE is in love," observed Mirandy reflectively, 'yassum, she sho' has got hit bad.

She goes 'round wid a far-away look in her eye, and she sets down befo' de kitchen stove, an' lets de bread burn in de oven, an' de cat drink de milk, an' de dog git de pork chops whilst she wonders how hit comes dat dat chuckle-headed, knock-kneed, lanky Sim Johnsing is so much handsomer, an' smarter an' nobler dan any odder man in de world.

'Yassum, dere ain't no trouble in tellin when a gal is in love. De signs of hit breaks out all over her like hit was de measles, an' Ma'y Jane suttinly am takin' hit hard. When anybody tells anything dat is sorter miraculous she waits ontell dey gits through, an' den she up an' says whut Sim says on de subject as ef dat do settle hit. Furder mo' she goes 'bout a-picking up de sigar stubs dat he drapped, an' tyin' dem up to de wall wid blue ribbon, an' de odder night she waked her pa up in de middle of de night to ax him ef he reckon dat Sim could a got lost, an' maybe froze to death a-gwine home—an' dat double-jointed nigger a-dyin' in de next block.

Ike, he was mighty mad at havin' his rest broken, an' I had my hands full a-commin' him down.

'Shoo,' I says, 'don't you worry 'bout Ma'y Jane. Of course hit does look lak she done los' her mind, but she'll find hit again arfter she gits married. She's des in love now, but she'll git over hit. I used to act dat ve'y same way 'bout you an' now des look at me.'

To which Ike respon' dat ef I did I had some cause to, but how any gal could see anything in dat slab-sided Sim Johnsing to make a fool of herself over, beat him, an' to dat I remarked sort of casual lak dat dem was de ve'y identical words dat my pa said 'bout him when he was a-courtin' me.

"An' wid dat Ike turn over in de bed, an' begin to snore lak he didn't hear me, an' we didn't argufy de question no mo'.

'I wasn't gwine to let on to Ike dat I 'greed wid him, caze hit sets a man up too much for his wife to always be a-chimin' in wid him 'bout ev'ything dat he prognosticates, but hit shorely am a techin' thing to witness all de different kinds of a fool dat a gal makes of herself when she's in love, an' when I hears a young couple a-billin' an' a-cooin' I laughs out of one side of my mouf, an' cries out of de odder.

"Becaze dey misses all de p'ints.

"Dey spends deir time a-buildin' scaffolds in de air, when dey ought to be busy a-puttin' de under pinnin' in de cabin dat dey got to live in.

"Yassum, dat's so. Ma'y Jane an' Sim, dey [illegible] ev'ybody else dat's ever been in love, an' den conversation sounds des like hit was cut off of de same bolt of love talk as yours an' mine.

"De odder night, when dey was a-spoonin'

De odder night when dey was a-spoon in on de parlor sofa.

on de parlor sofa, I overhears Sim ask Ma'y Jane ef she is shore dat she will love him right straight on through dis world an' into de nex', an' Ma'y Jane 'spons by inquirin' of Sim ef he is suttin dat his devotion will never wane, even when she gits old, an' fat, and loses her teeth.

"Den Sim begins to question Ma'y Jane 'bout whedder she is ever loved befo', an' Ma'y Jane demands to know ef she's de only woman in de world to Sim.

"Den Sim axes Ma'y Jane ef she is shore dat she will never be sorry for entrustin' her angel self to him, an' Ma'y Jane begins to sniffle, an' axes Sim ef he'll ever marry agin ef she dies.

"An' I bust out laughin' so dat I mos' drapped de chany pitcher dat I was washin' at de sink.

"Caze I lay dat dem questions ain't de questions dat a married pusson would ax de one whut dey was 'bout to tie up wid, ef dey had to do hit over agin. Nawm, I ain't never heared no widows an' widowers courtin', but I bet fo' bits to a ginger cake dat dey don't waste no time a-hurlin' dem fool questions at one anudder.

"Nawm, ef I was gwine to marry Ike over agin I wouldn't bodder to ax him whedder he would love me forever, an' whedder he was suttin I was his soul mate, an' ef he would pine away an' die ef anything was to happen to me.

'Nuthermo' would I make him perjure hisself by swearin' dat he ain't never gwine to take notice of no odder woman, an' dat all de amusement he wants de balance of his life is des to hold my hand an' gaze in my eyes.

"Nawm, ef I was puttin' de man dat I was gwine to marry through de catechism I'd ax him ef he was gwine to turn over his pay envelope to me ev'y Saturday night widout no fuss, an' ef he would git up in de mawnin' an' make de fire, an' ef he'd promise to wipe his feet on de do' mat befo' he come in de house, an' ef he'd change his shut widout a fambly argyment, an' ef he'd hang up his clothes widout waitin' for me to do hit, an' ef he'd take his turn a-walkin' de babies wid de colic, an' washin' de chillen's faces.

"Yassum, dem's de questions dat I would ax de candidate for my heart an' hand, an' he'd have to answer 'em right straight off de reel ef he got me.

"An' I kinder 'spicions dat ef Ike was a-courtin' me agin he wouldn't waste so much time a-tryin' to find out ef he was de man dat I has been dreamin' 'bout. Nawm, I 'specks he'd sorter pass up de visions an' ax me whut is my views on de latch key question, an' how much of his wages does I think a man's wife ought to let him keep, an' is I one of dem women whut always smells deir husband's breath when he comes in of a night, an' den he would inquire 'bout whedder I was a good cook or not, an' he would spend mo' time investigatin' de length of my tongue dan he would de state of my heart.

"An' when he got through de ezamination maybe he'd marry me, an' maybe he wouldn't, caze hit's mighty easy to swear dat your love is eternal, an' hit's pretty hard to prove dat you is de kind of a pusson dat is easy an' comfortable to git along wid for de twenty, or thirty, or forty years dat you is likely to have to live wid de one you is married to.

"Yassum, dem of us whut is tried mattermony sho'ly would ax mighty different questions from dem whut is axed by dose whut ain't never been through de mill.

I ax him ef he was gwine to turn over his pay envelope to me ev'ry Saturday night.

"For love is a mighty good thing, but hit ain't all. Hit's lak de parsley dat I puts around de aidge of de beefsteak an' onions—a mighty pretty garnish, but hit ain't de meat."

Is the 8-Hour Movement Right or Wrong?

Symposium Arranged by Prof. Frank Parsons, Ph.D.

THE eight-hour movement is one of the most important before the people to-day. The shortening of the hours of labor is a vital element in the welfare of the individual and the progress of society. It means better work, better pay, longer life, more opportunity for self-development, a higher citizenship and a nobler manhood. The workers form the mass of every community, and the improvement of their condition is the most potent means of lifting the level of civilization in that community.

An Austrian professor has calculated that if all the men who are shouting themselves hoarse for no useful purpose in the stock exchanges, or idling much of their time in superfluous stores, were put to work on the farm or in the factory, or where their labor is really needed in production; if all detrimental and useless avocations were abolished, and all unnecessary duplication of stores, factories, etc., were eliminated, less than four hours' work per day would be required to provide for all the necessary and reasonable luxuries of life. If this is true—and there is no doubt that it is true—then the demand for an eight-hour day is very moderate indeed.

The building trades and some other employments in this country have the eight-hour day, and in New Zealand and Australia the eight-hour day is practically universal, except for farm and domestic labor. And the prevalence of the short day for many years in those countries has been one of the principal causes enabling them to go far ahead of the rest of the world in politico-industrial progress. Wherever the workingmen have time to think the rule of money must give way to the rule of manhood. Reasonable leisure is a fundamental condition [illegible] and civic development.

[illegible] tell us that Athens attained her high intellectual and civil development because there were five or six slaves to every freeman to give him leisure to cultivate his mind and develop the arts and sciences, especially the science of government. In America we have learned how to make machinery do the work of the Greek slaves, and more. Our machine power is equal to twenty-five or thirty slaves for every man and woman in the country—more than enough, if the benefits of machine production were fairly distributed, to give every one ample leisure for individual development and social life.

It may not be practicable at present to make an eight-hour rule for farm and dairy work, or for sailors or fishermen, or for the professional classes, though teachers and bankers already have only five or six hours of stated work. But in all mechanical trades and in transportation, and, in fact, in all union trades, the eight-hour day is practicable now. A man may well work more than eight hours if he likes at any work freely selected by him for his own sake, or for some other reason than economic pressure and under conditions that make it possible for him to stop when he chooses and work in the way he wishes to. But for workers, under the beck and call of a boss, or laboring simply to secure the means of subsistence, eight hours is enough—yes, altogether too much. A hundred years from now men and women will be at a loss to know how the workers of to-day could endure the self-abasement of long hours of labor under the absolute control of their employers, mere cogs in the machinery of the competitive system, without any voice in the management of the industries into which they pour their lives.

In September, October and November, 1905, the Bureau of Economic Research, at my suggestion, sent letters to many leading men, including the Governors of States, Mayors of the principal cities and presidents of universities or colleges having 400 students, submitting the following propositions for signature, and explaining, especially in the later letters that the movement at present related specially to the printers' demand for eight hours, and to the general demand for it in mechanical and transportation lines and other union trades where an eight-hour day is reasonably practicable now. The propositions and the replies must be read in the light of this explanation. Here are the statements submitted for signature:

1. We favor the eight hour day.
2. Believing that the eight-hour day means a longer and richer life, a fairer diffusion of wealth and power, a better citizenship and a higher civilization through leisure for education, recreation, civic and social life, we welcome each step in the progress of the eight-hour movement, and earnestly hope for the success of the typographical unions in their efforts to secure the eight-hour day.

Two hundred replies were received, sixteen against the eight-hour movement and 184 favorable to it, most of them indorsing both propositions above stated. A number holding judicial and other delicate positions asked that their indorsements should not be published.

A considerable number accompanied their replies with comments, some of which are of much interest and value. I will quote a few under their names.

DAVID STARR JORDAN, president of Leland Stanford University—I certainly favor the eight-hour day when it can be reached in the progress of civilization and by methods which are above reproach. I believe that useful aims of this kind should be attained by peaceful methods, and that there is no interest of labor so important as that its leaders should be law-abiding.

J. G. SCHURMAN, president of Cornell University—I believe that the best quantitative test of a civilization is the pay received by wage-earners and the amount of leisure which they enjoy. But I am not prepared to say that the eight-hour day is the ideal for all workingmen irrespective of the toilsomeness of their labor or the unfavorable circumstances under which it is performed.

HON. CARROLL D. WRIGHT—I favor the eight hour day whenever the economic conditions of an industry warrant it, and as a general principle, but cannot favor a universal compulsory eight-hour day, because in some industries this would be a very damaging policy at present. Ultimately the eight hour day will prevail. Indorsing the typographical union movement and the statements that the eight hour day means a longer and richer life, a fairer diffusion of wealth and power, a better citizenship and a higher civilization.—Mr. Wright says: The eight hour day, wherever it can be adjusted, means what is here said. The difficulty will come in trying to adjust it to all conditions, whether ripe for the adjustment or not. Great care should be taken in this respect.

C. F. TAYLOR, Philadelphia publisher—I have offered to pay a proportional increase in price for my work if the eight hour day were adopted. Some of the pressmen I have talked with say they have a contract for two years more at nine hours. And that, in their opinion, the eight hour demand should not be forcefully insisted upon in such a way as to break the said agreement. The proprietor of a large printing establishment admitted to me that the eight-hour day is sure to come, and that he is personally in favor of it, but that the difficulties of meeting the demand at the present time are very great.

GOVERNOR FOLK, of Missouri—I am taking steps to have the eight hour law enforced in this State. I believe it has been demonstrated that such a law is desirable as a means of uplifting the laboring classes.

GOVERNOR CUMMINS, of Iowa—I thoroughly believe, as a general proposition, the eight hours are enough for work in any one day, and I always have and always will, I trust, use my influence toward the establishment of this limitation upon the hours of labor. I recognize, however, that there are certain kinds of employment and certain times of employment when, in the very nature of things, it is necessary that the laborer shall work more than eight hours per day. In the trades and in like callings the rule can be observed; but in farm work, domestic work, some kinds of clerical work, and many kinds of professional work it cannot be observed.

PRESIDENT DOPPERS of the University of South Dakota—You can put me down as in favor of the eight-hour day in all purely mechanical industries. It seems to me that an industry that has a good deal of liberty of action in it, where a man may go from one sort of work to another, as a farmer or a storekeeper, need not come under consideration in this question to the same extent as workers who have an entirely mechanical job before them. I once visited a Fall River cotton mill, and I came to the conclusion that the demand for more than eight hours' work from a man or woman working in these mills was without any excuse. Where people are absolutely bound to a machine of any kind, where the work is of the nature of repetition, without any opening or interest in it, eight hours is certainly all sufficient.

MARY E. WOOLLEY, president of Mount Holyoke College—I am glad to say that I favor the eight hour day "wherever reasonably practicable."

PRESIDENT SLOCUM of Colorado College—I am quite sure that on the whole the eight-hour day is a good thing, and I am always glad where it can come into vogue for our laboring men. It should be recognized however that there are certain positions where the necessities of the work make it impossible for the labor to be completed in eight hours. Then I think it should also be borne in mind that there are certain kinds of work which are so exacting that one is hardly able to continue working steadily for eight hours each day, whereas there are other lines of work which are not at all exacting if one is required to keep his task for ten hours. In other words, it is hardly possible to lay down an exact rule which fits in every case. After all this has been said, however, I am deeply interested in the eight-hour movement, and think, on the whole, it is a good thing.

PROFESSOR YOUNG, Dean in the college of the University of South Dakota—I reply with pleasure to your request for an opinion upon the eight hour day. Believing that the eight-hour day means a longer and richer life, a fairer diffusion of wealth and power, a better citizenship and a higher civilization through leisure for education, recreation, civic and social life, I welcome each step in the progress of the eight-hour-day movement, and earnestly hope for the success of the typographical unions in their efforts to secure the eight-hour day. Can any man who believes in the higher interests and the higher ideals of civilization for a moment doubt the necessity of the eight-hour day for the laboring man if he is ever to be anything more than a hewer of wood and a drawer of water? The ten hour day is operating most effectively to differentiate society into two classes, viz., the wealthy and so-called upper class, and the lower and so-called laboring class. Not until we cease making a machine of men will men be what they ought to be. The man who labors ten hours a day is a machine. He has no energy, no normal human interests, and no individual initiative in civic life or in social affairs. He works in a mill and sleeps in a house, which by euphemism is called a home. I do not see much difference between the life of the dray horse and the life of the common laborer who works ten hours a day. I am deeply interested in this phase of social reform, and welcome any movement that will help to lift humanity out of the materialism of the present, with its widespread economic slavery.

PRESIDENT STORMS, of Iowa State College—I favor the eight hour day, but under such restrictions and modifications as shall not embarrass men who for reasons wish to work longer hours, or interfere with the right of contract for longer hours between employer and employe.

PRESIDENT ROGERS, of St. Louis University—Present contracts should be allowed to expire before the eight hour schedule is forced. Unions hurt themselves much with their employers and the public by anything to the contrary.

PRESIDENT FIELDER, of Fort Worth University—I am for the eight hour day first, because the work of the world can be done in a day of that length, and, second, because the best welfare of the race demands it.

MAYOR TIMANUS of Baltimore—The organized labor of this city proposes to appear before the next General Assembly of Maryland and request that a uniform eight-hour law be passed, applicable to the entire State. I am convinced that this is what is needed. Personally I am deeply in sympathy with every move toward alleviating and bettering the condition of the laboring classes.

MAYOR LYONS of Mobile—I am in favo of the eight hour movement. I emplo labor of various kinds and know that a man can accomplish about as much in eight hours of conscientious and persistent effort as he can in nine or ten hours under present conditions; and it is proper that the working classes should have sufficient leisure to improve their mental and physical condition, thereby evolving a better type of American manhood.

MAYOR DEVEREUX of Springfield, Ill.—I take great pleasure in stating that I am heartily in favor of this movement.

MAYOR HASSETT of Sacramento—I fervently concur in all above stated. I favor the eight hour day for the reason that it is demanded in the interest of justice and intelligence.

Notes From a Negro Paradise

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Jamaica, W. I., Jan. 12, 1906.

THE Reverend (God save the mark) Thomas Dixon had not made a study of the colored people in the Island of Jamaica, surely, when he wrote his book and play which caused such [illegible] among the emancipated [illegible] States.

Mr. Dixon [illegible] it would seem to an unprejudiced [illegible] more Godly work to do [illegible] world than to devote his [illegible] upon a race which has [illegible] phase of injustice and [illegible] humanity in its evolution [illegible] higher planes.

[illegible] woman who visits Jamaica [illegible] knowledge the ability of the [illegible] occupy positions of dignity [illegible] to acquire education and culture, is either blind or utterly pig-headed.

Three colored men acted on the jury in Kingston this week. The policemen, the trolley and railway officials are colored; so are the postoffice officials. Scores of men stamped with the indelible marks of the African occupy prominent places in large industrial concerns, and the most remarkable man teacher I have ever met is Mr. W. H. Plant of Port Antonio, principal of the school [illegible] a man of very dark, albeit of [illegible] features.

Mr. Plant started life with few advantages.

All his education was obtained upon the island [illegible] without influence or aid from others.

Eighteen years ago he had so far succeeded in making his way that he was enabled [illegible] examinations and enter upon his chosen profession.

Mr. Plant began teaching in Port Antonio with [illegible] ful of scholars and one room at his [illegible]

Now [illegible] rooms and nearly two hundred pupils [illegible] the jurisdiction over six other schools outside the city.

The following advertisement in the Kingston Gleaner gives an idea of the scope of his work:

TITCHFIELD GRADED SCHOOL
PORT ANTONIO

[illegible] Secondary—Boys elementary, [illegible] and Infants. Insures [illegible] education on commercial lines.

Prepares pupils for office work, scholarships and Cambridge local exams. Offers special advantages in scholarships; twelve of £8 and three of £40 each.

Gives attention to science and has apparatus for experiments in physics. Has a fully equipped department for manual training in woodwork for boys and plain sewing and fancy work for girls.

Has facilities for typewriting and shorthand.

Cricket, physical and military drill.

Age from four years to eight. Send for prospectus to THE HEADMASTER, Port Antonio P. O.

To talk with Mr. Plant regarding his ideas and ideals of life and the future of his race is to feel new ideas and ideals germinate in your own mind and soul and new courage and faith spring in your heart.

To know what he has done, to think of all he may do, must give one an impetus of fresh hope for the whole world.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

It is small enough praise to call Mr. Plant—as he has been called by the head of all the educational work on the island—the Booker Washington of Jamaica.

The treasury of the colony has not been largely opened in the interests of education. Mr. Plant has been obliged to economize in every direction and to depend upon the kindness of individuals and business corporations for the means to enlarge his admirable enterprise.

He visited the States and England twice before he succeeded in establishing the manual training department in Port Antonio schools, which filled his ideal of individual development of the pupil.

He showed us some interesting specimens of carpenter work done by the boys in this department. We asked him if they easily found desirable positions as carpenters after they left the school.

"Not always," Mr. Plant replied. "But the influence of this training will help them in whatever work they undertake. The boy who made this" (and he held up a simple but exact piece of carpenter work, done by most careful calculation) "came here a crude disorderly, wholly ignorant lad, unable to read or write or think connectedly. He left us with an opened mind, a knowledge of physics and the power of concentration. That boy has gone into banana culture, but he will plant his bananas in straight rows!—a zig-zag line will offend his eye—and whatever work he does will be better done, because of his life here with us."

Many of Mr. Plant's pupils have gone out to fill positions as teachers; others as stenographers and typewriters, and others as joiners, builders and clerks.

There is no question but the colored man is more easily developed and better treated and better understood on this island than anywhere in America, yet almost without exception, the natives of Jamaica are mad with a desire to go to the States.

It is their idea and goal. What is there about us, with our erratic and changeable climate; our hurry and rush, our bad manners and our mercenary views, that all the world still wants to be with us and will turn its back upon prosperity and peace, to be tossed in our maelstrom?

What is it, pray?

Stay where you are, good Jamaican. Enjoy your beautiful island. Thank God for your climate and your soil. Help your land to prosperity by your toil and help your people to greater achievement by inspiring them to improve their homes, their minds and their habits.

Nowhere has the man with colored blood in his veins a better opportunity to rise in the world than right here. Stay then—and prove to all "doubting Thomases" what the colored race can do. It is miraculous to think what it has accomplished here in sixty-eight years, since slavery was abolished.

What may it not achieve in the next half-century?

Education has a vast work still before it in Jamaica. It needs ten such men as Mr. Plant, but such men are not born every day, black or white.

It needs more money used in education and a greater effort made to advance the intellectual status of its women. At present the chief work of woman, white or black, on this island, seems to be to perpetuate the species. Children spring up in this soil like the banana plants. I talked with three white girls, pretty creatures, born of English, Scotch and German ancestors. One said she had sixteen brothers and sisters; another was the oldest of ten, another one of thirteen. All were unanimous in the opinion that such prolific child-bearing was disastrous to the happiness of the wife and mother. "My father travels and goes about and does as he likes," said One-of-Ten. "He takes the older children on trips and gives us advantages, but poor mamma is always tied to a baby. She is old before her time and what has she had out of life? No, indeed, I will never marry in Jamaica. I want to be a mother sometime, but I want to be a wife and a woman and a companion of my husband as well as a mother and nurse of children."

This girl had been sent to the States and educated—hence her ideas. But she is righ —there is as great an evil in prolific child bearing as in race suicide. The women of Jamaica are not the factors in its intellectual and social advancement which they should be because of this continual performance of child-bearing.

Fewer children and better ones, and more advantages for mothers and children, would improve the conditions of life on this Eden island.

The Mystery of the Pleiades

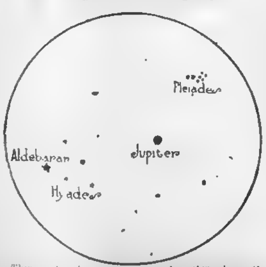
By Garrett P. Serviss

AMONG the brilliant Winter constellations now [illegible] into view none exceeds in historic and scientific interest or equals in delicate and pe[illegible] beauty the little group of the Pleiades. There is something connected with these small stars (the brightest of which scarcely attains the third magnitude, while the fainter ones are separately invisible, only impressing the sense of sight with a curious [illegible]) which fascinates the imagination and has done so in the most remarkable way from the very earliest times. Mr. Richard Hinckley Allen, in his researches into the origin of the constellation and of the [illegible] of the stars, found that the Pleiades were apparently the first stars mentioned in astronomical literature, a reference to them being contained in the Chinese annals as early as 2,357 years before Christ.

Fifty years ago a belief, founded on the calculations of the German astronomer Maedler, was almost universal that the Pleiades were the actual centre of the starry universe around which the whole heavens revolved, and their chief star, bearing the name Alcyone, was even regarded by some as the visible throne of God whereon the Creator was imagined to be sitting [illegible] watching the spectacle of countless systems of [illegible] suns circling about him! Inexorable mathematics have shown that Maedler's calculations were not sound, but yet the prestige of the Pleiades remains undimmed, and as we shall see in a moment, has even been enormously increased by recent astronomical researches. There is no object in the sky that photography has more completely transformed, and by the transformation has plunged into a profounder mystery, than the group of the Pleiades.

To assist the curious reader, who may wish to see this famous constellation for himself, I have drawn the accompanying chart. The first thing is to find the planet Jupiter, which is easily done, because Jupiter is now the brightest object visible in the evening, in the eastern sky. Having identified Jupiter, the observer will see the V-shaped figure of the Hyades below the planet and the tantalizing glimmer of the Pleiades above it, then he may turn with renewed interest to the strange story of the Pleiades.

One striking fact about these stars is that the immense pyramid of Cheops on the bank of the Nile, in some respects the greatest wonder of human workmanship in existence, was evidently constructed for the purpose of making observations on them. The mysterious "Grand Gallery" running through the heart of the vast stone pile, with its polished walls, was so directed that the Egyptian priest-astronomers, sitting deep within it at night, could see the Pleiades pass its upper open end "like a swarm of fireflies" as they culminated at midnight at the time of the Vernal Equinox. Calculation shows that this coincidence between the midnight culmination of the Pleiades and the Vernal Equinox occurred about 2,170 years before Christ. This indicates a date for the building of the great pyramid. Changes in the heavens are so slow that, once constructed, the pyramid observatory could have been used for hundreds of years before the Pleiades drifted so far from their original place that they could no longer be seen through the Grand Gallery at midnight at the opening of Spring.



This circle, [illegible] degrees in diameter, shows the relative positions of the Pleiades and the Hyades, with the planet Jupiter about half-way between them.

The Pleiades have also been connected in many widely separated countries with legends of a deluge destroying the earth. Strange ceremonies of the nature of "feasts to the dead" can be traced in the history of many ancient nations, all hinging upon the date of the culmination of the Pleiades. These festivals have been found in Asia, Africa, Europe, America, and even the islands of the Pacific. The Aztecs in Mexico at the time of the Spanish conquest offered up a human victim on their terrible stone of sacrifice as the Pleiades approached the zenith, believing that in this way they averted a calamity threatening the whole race of mankind. Some have founded upon the legends and ceremonies connected with the Pleiades the hypothesis that the original human race inhabited a great island in the southern hemisphere, which was swallowed by the sea, and a few scattered individuals escaping to the northern hemisphere and handing down to their descendants the tradition that the cataclysm occurred when the Pleiades were on the meridian at midnight.

But we have not space to go further into these curious legends, for something must now be said about modern discoveries which have added vastly to the mystery of the Pleiades, though in a different way. It was about 1885 that the first photograph was made in Paris showing an extraordinary nebulous attachment to the star Maia, one of the secondary members of the group. Other photographs quickly revealed the fact that all the principal Pleiades were involved in a tangle of nebulae. As the art of astronomical photography has increased in skill and sensitiveness its revelations with respect to the Pleiades have become more and more marvellous. It has shown many of the small stars to be strung along like shining beads upon silken flosses of nebulae. It has exhibited the entire cluster overlaid with nebulous matter, streaked and twisted in a most indescribable and almost incredible manner. In short, this group of suns, once believed to be the centre of the visible universe, has been shown in a form that seems at present utterly inexplicable. It appears, on the evidence of the photographs, to be half chaotic, and yet to the eye and to the telescope above the stars are like other stars, except for their peculiar grouping.

One of the greatest future steps in astronomy will be made when the key to the Pleiades is found, and so both on account of their connection with the earliest traditions of mankind, and on account of the problem that they offer to the latest science, they cannot but command the interest of every intelligent person.

DIMINUTIVE SAM CHIP

22 YEARS OLD

18 YEARS ON THE STAGE

BY ELEANOR AMES

By Eleanor Ames.

FUNNY little Sam Chip!

In cold type the words may not mean much, but hear them spoken by anyone who really knows and appreciates Sam Chip, the diminutive comedian in "Wonderland" at the Majestic Theatre, and they stand for a volume of [illegible].

They tell you that Sam Chip is genuinely funny; that he's white and straight and kindly and generous, that he's an all-round good fellow; that he's big-heated, broad-minded and good-natured in absurd proportion to his statue.

A man who has known "funny little Sam Chip" for years said: "When you first meet him you like him, and want to meet him again. When you know him you know one of the best and truest of good fellows."

Sam Chip is not so awfully, awfully tiny, as you might suppose, when you hear him called "funny little Sam Chip" and billed as the "diminutive comedian." He is quite as tall as his father and mother, he tells me, and almost as big as his brothers.

In reality, he's quite a bit under five feet in height, but there's absolutely nothing incongruous n his appearance as you see him about with his friends.

He has splendid broad shoulders, a full moon, smiling face, and the scales give him about 135 pounds to his credit.

Eighteen out of the twenty-two years hich comprise the sum total of his ife to date have been spent in the lare of the footlights. He made his but when he was four years old, ying a baby Dutch comedian, dancg and singing.

He frankly confesses that he doesn't recall the experience. His earliest recollection, and that somewhat vague, is a memory of playing at the Howard here in Boston when he was five.

"I suppose you were one of those precocious kids?" I suggested.

And They Let Him Live

"Heavens!" he said, wiping his hand across his brow, from which the constant wearing of wigs is making his crisp, curling black hair recede, "I suppose I must have been. I never thought of it before. Why did you bring up such a fearful possibility? Ah! they were too kind to me, too kind! I was a precocious kid, and they let me live!"

"They probably had hopes that you would outgrow it!" He looked up sharply.

"I want to tell you a story," he said by way of changing the subject. He did. It was a good one. Sam Chip is a past master in the art of story-telling. However, there is one story he can't tell, and that is an Irish sory.

"I've played every part you can imagine," he says, "except an Irish part. I've never played that and I never will. Oh, I like the Irish well enough, but I can't get the brogue. The only Irish I know is 'Begorrah!' and I say that with a Dutch and Hebrew accent."

This is the first time that Sam Chip, who is really Samuel Kornblum of New York city, has used his given rame on the theatre programme. He has always been known as "Little Chip." As such he has toured America and Europe, playing in vaudeville, been a Dutch comedian, a dancer, an imitator, and has had a part in over one hundred musical comedies. After which he declares that if ever he suffers from stage fright, it will not be from lack of experience.

It was "Master Kornblum" who started out at four years of age to tread the Thespian way to fame. The name was as big again as its owner. Gus Hill christened him "Little Chip."

They, "Master Kornblum," his father and Gus Hill were all standing outside a railroad station one day waiting for a train, when a chip fell from a tree and landed on the shoulder of Kornblum, Sr. At the same moment Gus Hill had an inspiration.

Christened "Little Chip"

"Great!" he cried. "Just the thing! 'Little Chip,'" and so Master Kornblum passed into history, and "Little Chip's" name appeared in big type.

Then busy days commenced. Once across the seas went Papa Kornblum and his clever, diminutive son. In England "Little Chip" won the Lancashire belt for fancy dancing, giving evidence of having at his toe's ends one hundred different steps.

"It's no cinch to dance in those English contests," said he, as we sat in Mr. Smith's office at the theatre and "reminesced." "The judges sit under the stage and count the taps—so many taps to every step."

It was in England, when Sam Chip was eight years old, that he did some clever coster work, which gave him the assurance of engagements for the next five years, and made fame and money for him before he came back to his native land, and looked a legitimate line of work straight in the face and began to believe what competent critics told him, that in the realms of comedy a throne awaited him.

It was in the days when Albert Chevalier was touring England, France, Scotland and Wales and singing one of his famous songs, "The Little Nipper." Mr. Kornblum saw a chance for his imitative young son.

He found a song writer, who wrote a reply to the Chevalier song, and in the race of "The Little Nipper" Sam Chip followed Chevalier's turn with signal success.

For the past four years Sam Chip has been in stock company, under management of Otis Harlan, who has a genuine interest, a personal friendship and most ambitious hopes for the "diminutive comedian."

By the same token, Sam Chip has great ambitions for himself.

Appeals for "Fly Jew."

"I know the theatrical business and I love it," he said, "and my one ambition is to play an original character part. That's harder to do than you think, for all sorts of characters have been played. There's one, though, that I've never seen put on in just the way I'd like to do it.

"That is the character of a 'fly Jew.' Most of the Jews we have on the stage are the stingy, mean, close kind. Sort of Baxter street breed. They have a humor which is usually reached through pathos. They wear queer clothes. I want to play a different kind of Jew, and a kind which is familiar to us all. I can't explain him any better than to call him the 'fly Jew.'

"He's a good spender rather than being stingy—perhaps you might call him a wine buyer, on a pinch. He's a little fellow, a good dresser, has lots of assurance, plenty of nerve, and some wit. He's quick and active and always up and doing. No, you can't sit on him, for he won't let you, and after you've tried and he bobs up again, you laugh and are glad to see him because he amuses you. I believe I could originate such a part.

"Original?" 'Tis to Laugh.

"I want to originate. I've always tried not to steal." He paused a moment, and then began to laugh.

"That sounds queer, I guess," he confessed. "Everybody steals. You get an idea and work around it, but I want to always cover up the theft the best I can."

When you want to find Sam Chip, and he's not at the theatre, you have two guesses. Either he's at some matinee or he's sleeping. Sleep and show-going fill his days. It's a toss-up which he likes best. It's a safe bet that there's not a theatre or a museum or any kind of a playhouse in Boston that Sam Chip will not have attended before he leaves town.

"I find a lot of hints in other shows and even in museums. At almost any museum, no matter how cheap, you may find some piece of business, or some freak way of dressing, which you can make use of in your own work," he said in defence of his ubiquitous theatre going, "and, anyway, isn't it better, to have to hunt through the museums for me than in the corner saloons?" he demanded of his manager, who had just told of a mad hunt for him.

Simple Life for "Chip."

That brings up the fact that Sam Chip is a miniature model of the simple life plan.

He never drinks anything except on Sundays, when he is not working, and two weeks ago he gave up cigarettes. Fear of losing his voice and hope of winning a diamond ring led to this latest reform.

Sam Chip frets all the time about his voice. As a matter of fact, all of us who have seen him in "Wonderland" know that he possesses what is the property of so few comedians, an excellent singing voice. This means much to him. Cigarettes are death to purity of tones.

Otis Harlan realizes this, so he told his protege that one year without a puff from the wicked little weeds would mean a $500 diamond ring. Sam Chip loves jewels. He wears only one ring and a modest diamond horseshoe scarf pin, but he doesn't care how big a jewel case he has to have to hold his treasures.

Already he can see, in fancy, on his well-manicured hand, that half-thousand dollar sparkler.

Speaking of smoking, lots of funny things happen to Chip because of his size, and a special incident hinges on his search for a light for a cigar.

It was in Atlanta, where he was playing in stock.

"I had a lot of new clothes on, and a fine cigar stuck in my mouth," he says, "and not a match about me. I stopped two men on the street, but they were in the same fix. Finally I came to a corner drug store. The place was filled with people, and a lot of them seemed to know me.

Little Chip Held Up.

"I went over to the cigar lighter, like a drowning man to a life belt. But I couldn't reach it. I stood on tip toe, and I jumped, but it was always just above me. Finally a man picked me up and held me till I got a light. The next day the papers had a story headed, 'Little Chip Held Up.'"

"Tell me something," I asked. "It's something I've always wanted to know, does a short man, a little man, if you will, ever feel at a disadvantage? I've always noticed that they are wonderfully important in appearance. Do they ever [illegible] that they are short?"

"Yes," he said sadly, "yes. When I fall in love I always realize how short I am, for the girls I love are invariably six feet tall. 'No, it's not a joke,' he said seriously, as from Mr. Burgess, towering six feet two, there came an amused chuckle.

"No, it's not," I agreed.

Every girl I ever made love to was the tallest girl I knew," declared Sam Chip. "For years I ran around with a cramp in my neck trying to look up into the face of my divinity. Now I'm having another experience. This girl is only about a foot and a half taller than I am, but that's enough."

Devoted to Parents.

Sam Chip is a thrifty little chap. He owns a beautiful home at Bath Beach and has two fine driving horses. Also he's the most devoted son imaginable. His affection for his parents is beautiful, especially in these careless days, and he is never so happy as when able to be one of the family circle.

"During fourteen weeks' engagement in New York I was never in a cafe one night after the show. It was me for home and the folks," he said, and there was a tone of honest affection in his ringing, manly voice—a voice which might belong to a six-footer—which fell pleasantly on the ear and warmed the heart.

Funny little Sam Chip!

"THIS is supposed to be written by Grover," he said.

We read:

GROVER'S LAMENT.

n just a monumental mass of morbid modesty—
diva seems a brazen jade when she's compared to me;
My crowning eccentricity
Is my hatred for publicity, referring obreptitious paths no vulgar eye can see.

gregiously enchafing is the popular impression hat in the life insurance world I'm rather an obsession;
This irritant variety
Of nauseous notoriety ffronts me so I have scant heart to give to my profession.

Twelve thousand dollars salary is little recompense
For one who solely represents the Great Ex-Presidents;
This public incivility
And clamorous scurrility
I'll not endure much longer for the same emoluments.

"Have you got anything better?" we inquired.

"Yes," he said. "I think this is better, perhaps."

We read:

THE BROADWAY MAIDEN.

Maid of Broadway, from your looks
Who'd suspect the jabs and hooks
That lie hid beneath the charms
Of your round and dimpling arms!

Maid of Broadway! Sweet young thing,
What a wallop you can swing!
Mashers still will scoff and doubt
Till they settle down—and out.

Maid of Broadway, who could know
That a solar plexus blow
Lay beneath a fist that man
Thought was fashioned for a fan?

Maid of Broadway, how the art
Of a punch above the heart
Was imparted to that hand
Is too weird to understand.

Maid of Broadway, may you meet
Many mashers on the street,
Handing each that deadly blow—
Dainty Pugilissimo!

We shook our head. "Anything more?" we asked.

"Why, sure," he said, hopefully. "Here's one about—well, just inspect it."

We inspected:

What makes the testy tiger so profoundly petulant?
What tidings rile the crocodile
Upon the bosom of the Nile
And fades the while the former smile
Upon the elephant?
T. Roosevelt has revealed the dark and sinister design
Of penetrating Africa the year of 1909

Now hear the hoarse hyena howl and hear the serpent sigh;
In dumb despair the lions tear
The vibrant, equatorial air,
And loud resound the swamps where fare
The hippopotami.
The panic-pallid python pants prostrated and supine,
For Mr. Roosevelt's coming down the Nile in 1909.

The leopard's lost his love to leap upon the gaunt giraffe.
The panther moans in hollow tones,
A dreary dole the ibex drones,
The laughing jackass merely groans
For want of will to laugh,
For Mr. Roosevelt's coming like a comet down the line
To Juggernaut the jungle in the year 1909.

"Hum," we muttered. "What else have you got?"

"This is the last," he said, crestfallen. "Look at it."

We looked at:

OFF TO ALGECIRIS.

Slam-bang a bunch of battleships across the rolling wave,
Bombard Morocco's rocky shores and make the Moors behave;
Run down the shifty shieks and chase Raisuli to his cave,
To show that we are running all creation.
Let melinite reverberate off Algeciris's shore,
Let shot and shell and shrapnell shriek and twelve-inch rifles roar,
And by and by, when we have time, we'll learn (perhaps) what for—
Oh! We're a great and terrifying nation.

Get twenty fleets of transports full of soldiers on the way
Embark the pick and flower of the mighty U. S. A.;
We'll find out why we're doing it, if we have luck, some day
But now our sole and single occupation
Should be to board the Dey's domains and run the rascals out,
'Ere other nations beat us in accomplishing their rout
At present we don't need to ask just what it's all about,
Because we're such a great and mighty nation.

"We'll think about that last one," we said.

"Come in again."

"You bet I will," he replied.

BOSTON — ITS MEN AND WOMEN DAY BY DAY — BOSTON

How Boston Honored Bernhardt

By Jane Newcombe.

MY DEAR GRACE:

You are perfectly right in your conjectures. I do like Boston [illegible] and em[illegible] such a de[illegible]. People told me that after [illegible] and [illegible] San Francisco [illegible] New York [illegible] best that I [illegible] find Boston dead [illegible] and Bostonians frigidity [illegible].

As a matter of fact Boston is never [illegible] and Bostonians in their own rather reserved and conservative way are the most courteous and kindly of people.

I rather fancy, though, that in order to realize this fully one has to come here under favorable auspices and meet at the outset the right persons.

It is a place, too, where brains and originality count, for there is constant use for all the knowledge you possess, and you are devoutly thankful every day for everything you ever learned in art, music or literature.

Pay Bernhardt Honor.

Something new and interesting is continually happening. This week the most noteworthy function out of the ordinary tea, dinner, dance grind which I attended was the reception given by the Alliance Francaise to Mme. Sarah Bernhardt.

MISS ELEANOR SEARS.
MRS FRANK WATSON.
FRANCIS R. BANGS.
BARONESS ROSSE.
MISS CORDELIA [illegible]

It took place Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at a charming apartment hotel on Commonwealth avenue [illegible] ries.

It was all most appropriate, you see. French reception to French actress, in hotel with French name, and decorated in French style—the ballroom and the anteroom both being of the Napoleonic period.

Yes, yes, I know you are crazy to have me tell you about the "Divine Sarah." My dear, she is a wonder! But first I'm going to be logical and explain about the Alliance Francaise.

It is a society of about 450 members, which was founded some six years ago in order that French language and literature should have a proper representation in the culture of Boston. It has entertained many famous French visitors. Rejane was given a reception one year. M. Jusserand has also been a guest. Every one who is a member is expected to speak, read, write and [illegible] French as well as English.

Perhaps they read, write and [illegible] as well, but dearie, some [illegible] be naturalized from the select so[illegible] in which they move and have [illegible] if they spoke English as they do French.

Of course, having been brought up in Paris and spent several years in a French convent and having had a French bonne, then a governess, then a maid, I really do know quite a bit about it. So I am qualified to act as critic.

Many of the members speak the purest, most exquisite French. But at the reception nearly every one spoke English.

"Isn't she wonderful?" said a woman back of me who was standing on a chair in order to get her glimpse [illegible] over the heads of the crowd and focussed on Bernhardt. "Charmant!" said her friend. "Magnifique. Move over and let me stand on the edge of the chair. I can't see."

"Are you going to the lecture Saturday?" Another woman asked.

"What is the subject?"

"I don't know. Some man with an unpronounceable name reads a French play, and I've forgotten what it is."

"Are you going?"

"Yes, indeed. I wouldn't miss it for worlds. Those lectures are so delightful, such a treat, and Mrs. Blank is going to have bridge afterward, and the lecture is only just around the corner."

"Well, I'm going to Mrs. Black's bridge. I've been playing in splendid form lately and so I'll drop in at the lecture, too. I love French. It's so picturesque. It expresses so much."

The ballroom was simply crowded. At one end was a tea table with white and red roses, with Miss Esther Kimball and Mrs. William Cahill, Jr., doing honors, and at the other end was a platform where the receiving party and the guests of honor stood, [illegible] most of the Mme. Bernhardt [illegible].

The president of the Alliance Francaise is Professor de Sumichrast, who is a most distinguished looking man, with a grey beard slightly parted and with an upturned moustache, finely chiseled features, a partly bald head and a bearing which is eloquent with dignity and courtesy.

He is a professor at Harvard, and has the most delightful way of addressing women, a way in which cordiality and the old French school deference our young men of to-day so lack are beautifully combined. The vice-president is a most entertaining and brilliant man, Mr. George Emmons of Brookline. He has spent a great deal of time in France and speaks excellent French.

Escorted By Emmons.

It was Mr. Emmons who escorted Mme. Bernhardt to the reception and back to her hotel, the Bellevue. Mrs. Francis Sedwick Watson figured more prominently than any other Boston woman at the reception. Mrs. Watson is rated one of the most fascinating women in society.

She is not beautiful, but she has indescribable charm and magnetism.

She is always dominant, even when, with one Pomeranian dog tucked under her arm and another following, she walks along Boylston street on a shopping expedition.

Mrs. Watson is a natural globe trotter. Today she is in Egypt. The next in Japan. She is either just going away or she has just returned. And when she is in Boston she is deluged with invitations. So she leads a really strenuous [illegible].

Her gowns are original; she plans them herself, and fetching to a degree, particularly her evening gowns. Tuesday she wore grey crepe de chine with inserts and medallions of lace, lots of hand embroidery and touches at the belt and elbow sleeves of three shades of red, ranging from pink to crimson.

She also wore a black hat with white plumes and a huge white fox boa.

Mrs. William Tudor was the other matron who received. She is a delightful woman, and the Tudors are very old and very noteworthy as a family. Also some members in history past and present have been more or less eccentric.

Miss Talbot a Beauty.

To my mind Grace Talbot, who with Miss Blake completed the feminine portion of the receiving line, was far and away the prettiest girl present.

She is tall and slender and brilliantly brunette, and in her gown of Harvard red broadcloth was a picture. Get a red broadcloth suit, you and she are much the same coloring.

Don't be impatient. I'm getting to Sarah. Like the small boy with his cake I'm saving [illegible] the last. She was radiant, [illegible], wonderful.

Yes, and once more. She is sixty one years old. She looks not over forty. She has the most marvelous vivacity and vital force. Every motion of her hand or her expressive [illegible] tremendous mental strength. Her great mind seems to fill the whole room and surrounds her like an aura. [illegible] can tell you what she is like. Only this, she is unlike anybody you ever saw in the whole wide world, and once having seen her, you can never forget her.

She wore a gray satin, soft and clinging, and long and shimmering. There was silver on the bodice worked [illegible] and silver sequins formed the [illegible].

She wears her [illegible] very high and close, and they are boned directly in front so [illegible] she always elevates her chin quite noticeably.

I believe it would be a good way to escape having a double chin.

Her hat was of deep Alice blue, and had some shaded blue plumes at the side.

Her Wonderful Coat!

But her coat, oh, my dear, it seems [illegible] to try to describe that coat. It is too gorgeous for words, of broadtail to her heels, loose and in most rippling about the edge, lined entirely with chinchilla and having a deep shawl collar of chinchilla.

Can you imagine it?

With Mme. Bernhardt was Mlle. Seylor, a member of her company and a fascinating little creature, M. de Max, her handsome, poetical, temperamental leading man, and M. Meyer, her secretary, a man with black beard, hair, mustache and eyes, who looks more Russian than French. Don't you remember the Russians we met at the Portsmouth Peace Conference, with the little brush like beards directly on their chins?

He has been everywhere and is entertaining beyond description.

I am going to see Mme. Bernhardt in every play that she gives here, and I wish you could be with me. I'm sure you'd love it all so, and you have what [illegible] of girls lack [illegible] Boston girls a sense of honor and really and truly even in Boston, with all its culture and conservatism and charm, a sense of humor is a good thing to have. Forever devotedly,

JANE.

Invitations are being prepared for a novel party to be held the first of next month at one of the houses in [illegible] square. It will be something different, we are informed, from any party ever held in town, and the county [illegible] who is issuing the invitations, is going to invite some of the most prominent of our citizens. The office of the commissioner on banks was whitewashed this week. Much of the debris that had accumulated there was thrown away and it is planned not to allow the place to get so cluttered up again.

There will be a meeting at the Beacon Hill Hall soon, to discuss the question of allowing the taverns in Boston to sell drinks after sunset. It won't necessarily be the total abstainers that make the most talk on the negative side of the question. More likely it will be those from the places where there are no taverns and nobody stays up late. Why should Boston folks want to stay up after dark, anyway? They don't in [illegible].

The Hon. James Collins was in town one day last week. He came to meet Mr. Taylor to arrange plans for next Summer's [illegible] carnival on [illegible] avenue. Our respected citizen Mr. Austin Lomasney is selecting a plan to have the tax collector, treasurer and pound keeper consolidated into one office, raising the tax to $2000 a year. He has given us a copy of the new law he wants passed, but we haven't space to print it this week. Chairman Fitzgerald of the Selectmen says he doesn't think much of the bill any way.

Constable Gaskin is going to be called before the powers that be to explain why he was sleeping on his beat the night Mr. Burton took what there was out of the office of the Provident Bank. The constable says he wasn't asleep, but he was wide awake, and it was Captain Pierce who was asleep. Chief [illegible] is anxious to get at the bottom of the matter as he was to enforce the liquor law, but it seems to us as if the thing was hardly worth fussing about. When Mr. [illegible] got at the bank there wasn't enough left to bother any way. The Savings Bank Commissioners set it [illegible] long enough for that.

How the Puritan Club "Declared" Itself

By James Francis.

"THIS," said the loquacious guide, "is the house of the Puritan Club, located at the corner of Beacon and Spruce streets. This club has for many years acted as a feeder for the exclusive Somerset and Union Clubs and is the kindergarten in which all the arts and graces that make an aristocratic clubman worthy of his membership have been taught. After having spent a sufficient length of time in the [illegible] of the Puritan [illegible] sixteen [illegible] eighteen years [illegible] sometimes allowed [illegible] one or the other of the two [illegible] of late, that [illegible] We will quietly de[illegible]ten. It will be instructive as well as entertaining to those of you who may never hope to be allowed within the portals of an exclusive club—unless to get a job there as waiter. Listen.

Teacher—"What is the first mark of a gentleman, as shown in the Puritan club?"

Chorus—"To admire and revere our late President, George von L. Meyer."

Teacher—"And the next mark?"

Chorus—"To cease any [illegible] of Thomas W. Lawson when Eben Stanwood approaches."

Teacher—"You have learned this lesson well. And what politics should a good clubman profess, while in his club?"

Thomas Talbot and Benjamin W. Wells (together)—"He should be a [illegible]."

Teacher—"[illegible] the greatest organizer [illegible]?"

Chorus—"Harry Kent White."

Teacher—"Is this [illegible] as good as the Somerset and Union?"

[illegible]

Teacher—"What is [illegible] of training?"

Chorus—"The accumulation of wealth and weight and a rigid adoption of [illegible] manners."

Teacher—"Who can never hope to enter these great clubs?"

Chorus—"A poor man, an ambitious man or a Smith."

Teacher—"Will some little boy answer this question. Is it a disgrace to be poor?"

Reginald F. Bones—"It would be [illegible] with a stock exchange an[illegible] ceory and training."

Teacher—"Is it proper to be abstemious?"

Chorus—"We do not know any such [illegible]."

Teacher—"Is it disgraceful to be a Smith?"

William R. Beuwick Smith—"To be an unhyphenated Smith is worse than a disgrace—it is a crime."

Teacher—"What is the motto of our club?"

J. O. Proctor, Jr.—"Like father, like son."

Teacher—"Who is the greatest author alive?"

John Dearborn—"Henry Clews."

Teacher—"What book has the best binding?"

John F. Rousmaniere—"Any book that is bound in leather."

Teacher—"What is the best American play?"

Dr. John Duff—"The Wife."

Tyler Morse—"Mrs. Black is Back."

Teacher—"What is the greatest piece of American fiction?"

Henry L. Burrage—"The last report of the Provident Securities and [illegible] Company."

Teacher—"Very good indeed. Now [illegible] little boy answer this question [illegible] attorney general [illegible] and a police commission [illegible] and the attorney general [illegible] gets indignant a[illegible] the police commission [illegible]?"

Charles H. Cole, Jr. (very promptly)—[illegible]

Teacher—"Correct. And here is another. If a naval officer is to be appointed for Boston, and a politician should be selected, from what part of Massachusetts should he come?"

James O. Lyford—"From Concord, N. H."

Teacher—"Correct again. And now one more. If a shovel, made in North Easton, Mass., costs eighty seven cents in Liverpool and $1 in North Easton, how long will it take the manufacturer to become attracted to tariff revision? Can you answer that, Oakes Ames?"

Oakes Ames—"No, ma'am. I mean no, sir. I don't know. Freddie [illegible] could answer it, but he isn't here."

Teacher—"Then we will cease our lessons here for to-day. The kindergarten will close with singing our new declaration of independence. Let every little boy sing as loud as he can. If they can hear us over to the Somerset and Union clubs, maybe they will think we mean it."

(Chorus singing)

For something more than twenty years
We've regularly met
And [illegible] to join the Union Club
Or else the Somerset.
But it has dawned on us at last
No matter what they say
That while our prestige may be less,
We're just as good as they.

So here's to the health of the Puritan Club,
Drink it down in the sparkling flax
No longer a cub in the clubs of the Hub,
We're as good as the best there is.

We're all upon the waiting lists,
But very few are called.
Our heads are getting gray and white
And some of them are bald,
And though we show humility
[illegible] ready seems a sin
That after waiting eighteen years,
Sometimes we don't get in.

So here's to the health of the whole of us,
We're as good as the best in the Hub
And we don't give a cuss for the fuss or the muss
Of the Union or Somerset Club.

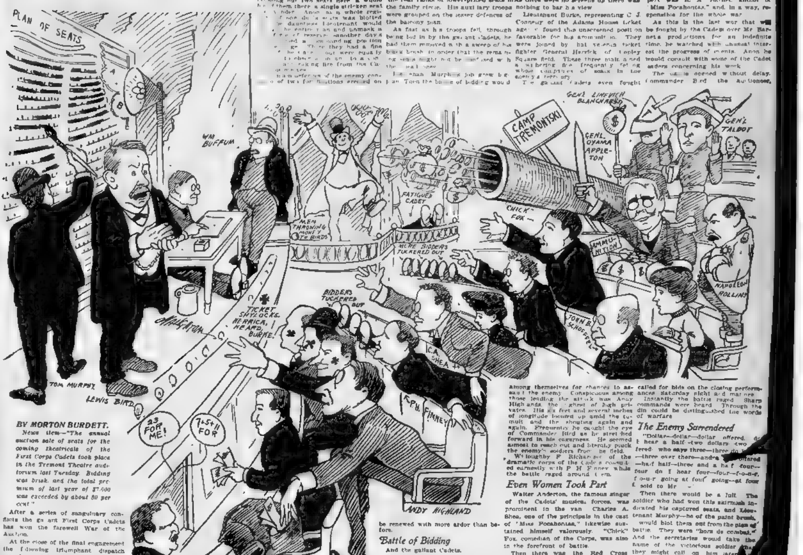
How the Cadets Captured Seats in Auction War



BY MORTON BURDETT.

News item—"The annual auction sale of seats for the coming theatricals of the First Corps Cadets took place in the Tremont Theatre auditorium last Tuesday. Bidding was brisk, and the total premium of last year of $7,400 was exceeded by about 30 per cent."

After a series of sanguinary conflicts the gallant First Corps Cadets has won the farewell War of the Auction.

At the close of the final engagement the following triumphant dispatch was forwarded to headquarters:

Tremont Theatre.
To Cadet Theatrical Committee, Journal Building, Boston.

Gentlemen: I have the honor to report that we met with the enemy and captured practically every seat, with financial returns exceeding last year's by about 30 per cent. on premiums. Auctioneer Bird, commander of the enemy, went down before our withering fire of financial ammunition. His last words were "Going, going, gone!" His aide, Lieutenant Timmie Murphy, the Knight of the Black Brush, is held as a prisoner of War.

Yours in [illegible],
WILLIAM M. BUFFUM, Treasurer commanding.

And there is much joy at the Cadet theatrical headquarters over the result of this auctionary contest. For it means that the coming production of "Miss Pocahontas" in the Tremont Theatre the week of next February 5—and the farewell Cadet theatricals for some time to come—will bring a large profit to the Cadet treasury from the premiums on the public auction sale of seats.

Last year the premiums over and above the regular prices of seats netted some $7,400. It is estimated from the first reports from the field, that this year's premiums will aggregate 25 to 30 per cent. more than last year.

Which is very gratifying on this the eve of the Cadets' farewell to the stage.

Auctioneer Unscathed

It was a great battle, this engagement which opened at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon in the Tremont Theatre. Both sides had disposed their forces skilfully and were prepared to lose everything but honor.

The Cadets were deployed through the floor of the auditorium. The enemy's [illegible] better and busier every minute as the battle progressed. Amid sharp words of command he darted to and fro with his black banner, recklessly flashing out two seats here, a whole row of them there, a single stricken seat [illegible] yonder. Anon as a whole regiment of one day's seats was blotted [illegible] the dauntless Lieutenant would [illegible] the entire plan and unmask a [illegible] reserve; another day's [illegible] commanding position [illegible]. There they had a fine [illegible] out were equally [illegible] of the enemy con[illegible] of two fortifications erected on the stage in form of seat plans of the floor and balcony for the different night and matinee performances. In the forefront of battle stood the enemy's commander, doughty Auctioneer Lewis J. Bird, who has passed scatheless through many a contest. He has auctioned off books, furniture, rugs, articles of virtu and articles of vertu. His campaigns have traversed the entire field of auctionary action, from goods of common or garden use clear up to Shakespeare and the musical glasses.

Right back of him and covering the field in front of both defences was Lieutenant Murphy of the theatre ticket office, armed with his deadly paint pot and black brush. He was directly in command of the regiment of theatre seats which were massed on the plans. In the front he had his heavy artillery of $1 seats, protecting the rear ranks of lower-priced seats in the family circle. His auxiliary troops were grouped on the lesser defences of the balcony plan.

As fast as his troops fell, through being bid in by the gallant Cadets, he had them removed with a sweep of his black brush, in order that the remaining seats might not be confused with the dead ones.

[illegible] than Murphy's job grew bigger. Then the battle of bidding would be renewed with more ardor than before.

Battle of Bidding

And the gallant Cadets.

Ah, there was a sight to thrill the most craven heart!

The finest furor of "frenzied finance" was but a languorous lullaby of the Land of the Lotus compared with the way the Cadets and their supporters dashed into action in this battle of bidding.

There was General Francis H. Appleton. There was Major Thomas Talbot, hero of many an engagement in politics and in the Country Club. There were Captains John A. Blanchard and Charles H. [illegible].

Then there were the main forces of the Cadets themselves, [illegible] round after round of [illegible] bids for themselves or for friends who could not be present at the seat, or rather the seats, of war.

Then there were the "mercenaries," the ticket agency troops fighting for seats with the Cadets against the common enemy.

These "mercenaries" were skilfully disposed in the forefront of action. One of the first to assume position was the famous warrior John R. Heard, who has a ticket selling agency at the Hotel Touraine. He chose a commanding point in the very front rank. As there were no screens up there was nothing to bar his view.

Lieutenant Burke, representing C. J. [illegible] of the Adams House ticket agency, found this unscreened post so favorable for his ammunition. They were joined by that veteran ticket fighter General Herrick of Copley Square field. These three maintained a withering fire, frequently getting whole companies of seats in the enemy's territory.

The gallant Cadets even fought among themselves for chances to assault the enemy. Conspicuous among those leading the attack was Andy Highlands, the highest of high privates. His six feet and several inches of longitude loomed up amid the tumult and the shouting again and again. Frequently he caught the eye of Commander Bird as he stretched forward in his eagerness. He seemed almost to reach out and literally pluck the enemy's soldiers from the field.

Willoughby F. Richardson of the dramatic corps of the Cadets consulted earnestly with P. H. Finney while the battle raged around them.

Even Women Took Part

Walter Anderton, the famous singer of the Cadets' musical forces, was prominent in the van. Charles A. Shea, one of the principals in the cast of "Miss Pocahontas," likewise sustained himself valorously. "Chick" Fox, comedian of the Corps, was also in the forefront of battle.

Then there was the Red Cross corps, the women who even took part in the contest. They were not many, these brave women who marched to the front in the War of the Auction, but occasionally a high-pitched feminine voice could be heard crying valiantly, "Dollar-dollar-dollar-and-a-half!" till the speaker captured the desired seat.

On the extreme right wing of the Cadets' forces stood the non-combatants. Chief among these were John B. Schoeffel, proprietor of the Tremont Street Theatre, the scene of battle. Unmoved he watched the fortunes of war sway to and fro. Occasionally a grim smile would play across his face as the Cadets scored some notable victory.

A war correspondent stood beside him a moment.

"Very lively, Mr. Schoeffel," said the correspondent.

"One of the best I ever saw," he answered.

Another non-combatant who viewed the action with the interest of an expert was R. A. Barnet, author of "Miss Pocahontas," and, in a way, responsible for the whole war.

As this is the last war that will be fought by the Cadets over Mr. Barnet's productions for an indefinite time, he watched with unusual interest the progress of events. Anon he would consult with some of the Cadet leaders concerning his work.

The [illegible] opened without delay. Commander Bird, the auctioneer, called for bids on the closing performances Saturday night and matinee.

Instantly the battle raged. Sharp commands were heard. Through the din could be distinguished the words of warfare.

The Enemy Surrendered

"Dollar—dollar—dollar offered, do I hear a half—two dollars—two offered; who says three—three do I [illegible]—three over there—and a [illegible] offered—half half—three and a half—four—four do I hear four—four—f-o-u-r, f-o-u-r going at four going—at four sold to Mr. [illegible]."

Then there would be a lull. The soldier who had won this skirmish indicated his captured seats, and Lieutenant Murphy—he of the paint brush—would blot them out from the plan of battle. They were "hors de combat." And the secretaries would take the name of the victorious soldier that they might call on him later and gently suggest that he back his bidding ammunition with a few of the useful commodity vulgarly called "scads."

Fiercely the warfare raged—from noon to dewy eve—and, with the setting sun the enemy surrendered.

Sad was the sight in the enemy's ranks. The battlefield—the theatre plans—was covered with the slain, marked where Murphy's paint brush had done its deadly work.

The Cadets were triumphantly victorious. They had fought valiantly, firing round after round of bidding ammunition till they were in full possession. The slaughter—that is, the sale was terrific. Ten dollars was paid for premiums for choice of seats on the best nights. The Saturday night sale alone averaged five dollars premium on every seat. The net gain in financial booty to the Cadets was correspondingly large.

More power to the Cadets. The final War of the Auction was won by them after a gallant struggle.

They came, they bid, they conquered.

THERE AIN'T NO OTHER CAT

I NEVER had no collar and I never took no prize.
I'm just a common, garden cat of ordinary size
I ain't got no Chinchilla blood nor great big fluffy tail,
And thirty cents would be my mark at any auction sale.
But when old Norah gets the milk and fills my pewter cup
You bet there ain't no other cat a-lappin' of it up.

MY Missis says no prize-show cat is half as good as me.
There ain't no dog in this here town can drive me up a tree.
I never entered in a show for ribbons and applause
But I can scrap like forty cats with all my paws and claws
An' that's the reason, when there's milk in my old pewter cup,
There never ain't no other cat a-lappin' of it up.

IT'S all wrong about the old maid and the cat.

The cat department of the Boston Poultry Show, which closed its 1904 exhibition last night in Mechanics Hall, shows this.

One doesn't have to be a spinster to dote on cats. For example. The catalogue—this is no joke—contains a list of sixty-two cat exhibitors. Forty eight of them were women. Thirty one of them are married. Of the remaining seventeen women exhibitors none are "old maids" by many years. They are charming young women.

Hurrah for Tabby. She has nailed another fallacy to the cross.

Another thing about the cat.

We Bostonians have beaten the ancient Egyptians at their own game.

Talk about the sacred cat of Bubastes.

It would have made even Isis and Osiris themselves sit up and take notice [illegible] a feline treasure as [illegible]. How the sacred [illegible] the Nile would have had their Egyptian [illegible] owned by Mrs. Florence [illegible] Weymouth, is a great [illegible] which won the [illegible] prize for the best American bred cat. This cup must be won three times.

[illegible] the swarthy subjects of the Pharaohs never began to have the cat breeding business down to such a science as we have, despite their temples and their priests and their adoration of the first mousers.

Speaking about ancient notice of cats. Did you know that the Egyptians were not the only ones who thought the cat worthy of honorable mention?

There was Pilpay, or Bidpai, as some call him, the Indian gymnosophist. [illegible] must have been a fine job, gymnosophizing. Anyhow Pilpay lived several centuries before Christ when they didn't have lots of modern luxuries, except possibly graft and municipal corruption and weather prophets and such things as always have existed and always will.

Pilpay was considerable of a "literary cuss," as Artemus Ward would say, and he jotted down from time to time things that struck him as worthy of mention. Among his interesting observations was the following:

"It has been the providence of Nature to give this creature (the cat) nine lives instead of one."

There are worthy names backing this club, either by membership or as exhibitors, or both. One of the most prominent members—and an officer of the club—is Mrs. Harriett Prescott Spofford, the author. The membership and exhibitors' list includes such women of Greater Boston and vicinity as Miss Helen M. Winslow of [illegible], Mrs. H. Franklin Torrey, Mrs. [illegible] Brewster of No. 17 Worcester street, Boston, Miss Bernice Whiting of East [illegible], Miss Lillian C. [illegible] of No. 7 Olive street, Miss Mina K. MISS FUJI YOSHIDA, the pretty Japanese girl who has been delighting Boston's social and art circles with her winsome manner and quaint costumes, is soon to go South for the Winter with her brother Miss Yoshida and her brother are both artists, and they are eager to paint the semi-tropical scenery. They have gone to Palm Beach, Florida, where they can see this as well as the gay life at the most beautiful Winter resort of the Florida east coast

Miss Yoshida came to this country two years ago, when she was only sixteen years old. She was then just out of what we would call the high school, in Tokio. Her brother, who has been in the United States for several years, sent for her and his mother. He had already won distinction for himself through persistent effort against many obstacles. He is a painter of Japanese scenes, which have never before been painted with Western technique. He is especially fond of moonlight, mist and Springtime haze, which he portrays with deep poetic feeling. Miss Yoshida's artistic sense is most appealed to by flower gardens and sunshine She has been a student at the Chase art school in New York, but lately has been studying under her brother's direction.

After their [illegible] from the South both the young people [illegible] sail from Boston for France, Italy and Germany, where they will continue their art studies. They will be gone several months, and in the Spring of next year will sail for Japan. Instead of travelling the usual course, by way of San Francisco, they will go through the Mediterranean Sea and the Suez Canal, though this trip takes fifty days longer. Miss Yoshida and her brother are warm friends of Bunkio Matsuki of Brookline, the Japanese merchant, and of his wife, who is a charming American woman

Future Events

As the season advances the rapid social pace slackens visibly and now that all the larger dances are done with, save the second assembly, which takes place February 16 at the Somerset, and the long list of buds have made their initial bows to the great social world, the intervening time between now and Lent will be devoted to the more quiet affairs

Small dinner dances, theatre parties, receptions and literary and musical events, with now and then a larger affair, such as the dance Mrs Edward B[illegible] is to give at her Brookline estate, Faulkner Farm, later in the month, and the dance which Mrs. Arthur Weland Blake is to give in Paul Revere Hall in honor of Alice Thorndike.

Her Boston friends gladly agree to this, and those familiar with her superb horsemanship and skilful driving declare her a veritable "witch with the ribbons." She is among those who are expected to attend the Boston Horse Show in April

SOCIETY HEEDS THE CALL OF THE SOUTH

BY A SOCIETY WOMAN.

Rose bloom and bird song, soft air and cerulean skies are beckoning to the sun-lands of leisure and the cooing call of the South comes early this year, hinting of raptures of rest to the overwrought Northerner.

The great mid-winter exodus is on, and in the world of society the ranks are depleting earlier and more rapidly than during any previous season.

Among those about to migrate to milder climes is popular and charming Adeline Hooper, who is just recovering from an attack of typhoid fever, and who will start for the Bermudas as soon as her condition will permit. Miss Hooper is a member of the Vincent Club, and will be unable to take part in the theatricals this year, as she expects to be gone for some time

Mrs. Edwin C. Swift, who has been ill at her Pride's Crossing home the greater part of the winter, will sail for Southern Europe as soon as she is able and will spend the remainder of the Winter there.

Mrs. F. W. Thayer of Brimmer street goes abroad early next month and will remain until June.

M. and Mme. Gustav Wagnier, parents of Mrs. Kenneth Horton, the popular young society matron, are sailing shortly for Italy to remain until Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Wharton (Edith Jones) are planning to sail for Southern Europe very soon.

Busy Days for Eleanora Sears.

Boston is seeing little of the charming and popular Eleanora Sears this Winter, for no sooner does she return from one visit than she is off for another

After returning from Long Island, where she was the guest of Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Reginald Brooks, at their country places, and attending the assembly at the Somerset and one or two other functions, she went to New York to attend the wedding of Miss Mabel Bacon and Mr. Richard H. Harper of Lawrence, L. I., which took place yesterday

During her stay in the metropolis she will be the guest of Mrs. John Jacob Astor

Cornelia Thayer's Fairy Tales.

The latest and prettiest fad being introduced by Cornelia Thayer is that of devising new and beguiling fairy tales which she tells to the little ones in the Children's Hospital, which she visits each Tuesday. With her new dog she goes from bed to bed allowing each child in turn to fondle her pet. In her smart black velvet walking suit and her squirrel coat and hat trimmed with purple plumes, she is one of the most welcome sights to the little sufferers, who wait anxiously each week for the coming of their "lady beautiful."

After her little friends, as she calls them, have been made happy, she joins the women in the sewing room, where they meet each week to make clothes for the children, and proves herself quite as apt with the needle as with her fairy tales.

Getting Ready for Horse Show.

The smartest of the Boston Smart Set are already manifesting intense interest in the Boston Horse Show, which takes place in April, and the horsewomen of the younger set, led by the dashing and ever daring Eleanora Sears, are planning to take active part.

Colonel John E. Thayer is chairman of the Executive Committee, which is made up of such well-known men as Francis Peabody, Jr., Rudolph Agassiz, Bryce Allan, Eben D. Jordan, Captain Parker of the Somerset Club, and Oliver Ames.

Carrot Craze in Back Bay.

Mrs. John L. Gardner is said to be one of the many Boston society women who are finding much interest in the philosophy of Madame Charlotte de Golter Davenport, who has arrived in Boston, and who makes the refreshing assertion that "there is no age." Mme. Davenport, who is herself seventy-eight years wise and spry, is a Russian countess and is a reformer of an interesting type.

Her mission in Boston is to teach women to be always young and beautiful, and since her advent here a "carrot craze" has struck the women of the Back Bay, as the eating of raw carrots is the simple means she recommends for beauty building.

A WEEK of tragedy, light comedy, romance and musical comedies is scheduled for the benefit of Boston playgoers this week. Sarah Bernhardt has another week at the Boston Theatre and, in addition to repeating some of the plays produced last week, will be seen in "La Tosca" and "Magda." There will be three musical shows in town, "Veronique" at the Hollis Street, "Wonderland" at the Majestic, and "Molly Moonshine" at the Tremont.

Napoleon is again to appear, in "Madame Sans Gene" at the Castle Square, and that famous war play, "Shenandoah," will be put on at the Empire. Viola Allen brings her new Fitch play, "The Toast of the Town," to the Colonial, and "Clarice" takes a short journey from the Colonial to the Park Theatre, where evening performances will be given. Two thrillers are to hold the boards; at the Grand Opera House, "Child Slaves of New York," and at the Bowdoin Square, "Lost in a Big City." At the Globe Theatre the amusing "Runaways" come, while all of the vaudeville and burlesque houses have changes of bill.

Boston Theatre

To-morrow night at the Boston Theatre Sarah Bernhardt will enter upon her second triumphal week, the last of her Boston engagement. There are two new bills in her repertoire for this, her final week. "Magda," which she offers on Tuesday evening, and "La Tosca" for Wednesday evening. For a special matinee which, owing to the extraordinary demand, she has consented to give on Friday afternoon, she will play "Camille."

On Monday night she will repeat "Adrienne Lecouvreur," giving "Camille" for the Wednesday matinee; "Sapho" for Thursday evening, "Phedre" for Friday evening, "Fedora" for the Saturday matinee and "La Sorciere" for Saturday evening.

A feature of the first week of the engagement was the reception tendered Mme. Bernhardt at the Tuileries on Tuesday afternoon, by the Alliance Francaise, Boston's most prominent French literary, dramatic and social organization. Another equally important event is scheduled to follow the second performance of "Phedre" next Friday evening, when the Cercle Francais of Harvard will be admitted to the stage immediately after the curtain falls on the final act of the play, and will then present to Mme. Bernhardt a gold medal. This gold medal has never before been given to a woman, and the only recipients have been eminent men of letters who have appeared before the Cercle Francaise in the James Hazen Hyde course of lectures at Harvard University.

Colonial Theatre

Viola Allen will appear as Betty Singleton, in Clyde Fitch's play, "The Toast of the Town," at the Colonial Theatre during the next two weeks. This will be the second time that Miss Allen has, since becoming a star, impersonated an actress in a play. The first was Glory Quayle in "The Christian," and now Betty Singleton in "The Toast of the Town," with big success. Mr. Fitch has, it appears, provided Miss Allen with the best made play that has come from his pen in years.

The [illegible] incidents in the career of Betty Singleton, a famous actress, during the time of George III. Betty in the height of her career and "the toast of the town" [illegible] of Malmsbury and leaves [illegible] has her troubles, but after [illegible] storm, the two young people finally settle their differences and live happily ever after. Mr. Fitch has introduced several striking novelties. One of these occurs in the green room of old Drury Lane Theatre, when Betty is making her farewell to the stage. The cast includes Isabel Irving, Mrs. Fanny Addison Pitt, Harrison Hunter, Hassard Short, Norman Tharp, C. Leslie Allen and Alice Wilson.

Hollis Street Theatre

In "Veronique" we have an example of the Simon pure sort of comic opera, the style of which has never ceased to be popular, but the supply of which has fallen woefully short these late years. Indeed, George Edwardes, the London manager, had to go to France to find the present one. There it was having a phenomenal run that lasted two years, and he determined that London should see it. He commissioned Henry Hamilton, a well known English dramatist, to make the [illegible] and put it on with usual elaborate care at the Apollo Theatre. It answered all his expectations, making an instant success and running without a break for 400 nights. It is this production we are to see at the Hollis Street Theatre this week, for the London company that played "Veronique" has been brought over in its entirety, though completely new scenery and costumes were supplied for America.

Messager's music is, of course, the most entrancing element of "Veronique." It is irresistibly captivating. But the opera is full of fun, as it employs no less than three of London's best known comedians, John LeHay, Aubrey Fitzgerald and Ralph Nairn, and a distinguished comedienne in the person of Miss Kitty Gordon. Miss Ruth Vincent, the star of the organization, Lawrence Rea and Miss Lena Maitland contribute voices of high class range, and otherwise the company is large and complete.

Majestic Theatre

That pretty spectacle, "Wonderland," which was written by Glen MacDonough, with music by Victor Herbert, starts on its second week at the Majestic. It is an exceptionally clever comedy, full of good musical numbers and much care is evident in the selection of the cast, for in addition to Sam Chip, a comedian who required but a single night to establish himself as a local favorite, there is Lotta Faust and Bessie Wynn, who will be remembered for their respective parts in the "Wizard of Oz" and "Babes in Toyland," while William Cameron, George McKay, Charles Barry, Hilda Halvers, May Leslie and some half hundred charmingly gowned girls aid in the funmaking.

The production is Mitchellesque in that it is one succession of scenic surprises, transformation, etc., aided by some splendid light effects and costumes, and the music is characteristic of Herbert, that bright, snappy sort, that keeps one's feet and hands moving, the kind they whistle on the way out. One of the most laughable features of the show is "Rolla, the laughing horse," Mitchell's newest stage animal, who easily carried off his share of the praise. The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

Tremont Theatre

The art of Marie Cahill has won a signal triumph at the Tremont Theatre, where the largest audiences that home of musical comedy has ever known have greeted this most American of comediennes. It has been a triumph also for the "somewhat different," and "Molly Moonshine" approaches nearer to what might be termed a "musical comedy of manners" than anything heretofore shown. Fun and plenty of it without vulgarity is what an American audience wants, and Marie Cahill is giving it in liberal quantities. A pleasant feature of "Molly Moonshine" is the peeping out here and there, as if timidly revealing itself, of the more serious possibilities of Miss Cahill as an actress. With her inimitable magnetism she abruptly turns from comedy to plot and the audience follows willingly. It is a strong tribute to Miss Cahill's versatility. She will play no Wednesday matinees during her engagement.

Keith's Theatre

Perhaps no entertainer on the programme announced from Keith's for the week will arouse more comment than Alice Pierce, the celebrated impressionist. Miss Pierce has just returned from a highly successful tour of England and the Continent, having been absent from this country for the past four years. In London she took the city by storm, winning unstinted praise. Miss Pierce is a refined young lady who looks to be not more than eighteen years of age, and her impersonations, or "impressions," as she prefers to have them known, include such noted stage celebrities as Mrs. Leslie Carter, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Digby Bell and others.

Lovers of good horsemanship and expert driving will be agreeably entertained by Rose Wentworth's equestrienne novelty. There are three handsome horses in the act, the animals appearing both in and out of harness, and Miss Wentworth gives a clever exhibition of reinsmanship and bareback riding. The surrounding programme includes Mme. Slapoffski, the English prima donna soprano; May Duryea and W. H. Mortimer, in the comedy sketch, "The Impostor;" Keno, Welch and Melrose, comedy acrobats; Alfred Arnesson, European equilibrist and gymnast; Renier and Gourdier, singers and dancers; Saona, impersonator of "Great Men, Past and Present," and Henella, skilful magician and illusionist. The usual new list of comedy and interesting motion pictures will be exhibited in the kinetograph.

Park Theatre

"Clarice," the season's greatest success, is to be transferred to the Park Theatre next Monday for six evenings and a Saturday matinee performance. The remarkable success of "Clarice" has not been equalled on the Boston stage in many years—in fact, few plays at any time have made such an instantaneous and enduring hit. Both as an actor and a playwright, Mr. Gillette has scored a triumph.

Produced originally in London it met with much favor for several months. The first American performance of "Clarice" was in Boston at the Colonial Theatre on Christmas night. Its success was immediate.

Much of the credit is due to the fact that it is a clean, wholesome play of American life, stirring in its dramatic situations and abounding in bright comedy lines. Mr. Gillette has the best role of his career as Dr. Carrington. Miss Marie Doro is wholly charming as Clarice.

Empire Theatre

Bronson Howard's "Shenandoah," which easily holds its place as the best constructed and most exciting of the dramas dealing with the Civil War period, is the bill at the Empire this week. Several productions of this play have been made in this city since its original presentation by the old Boston Museum stock company in 1888, and it has never failed to prove a popular attraction. The groupings and tableaux incidental to the action will be made additionally realistic by the use of a large force of auxiliaries.

The principal characters are as follows: Major-General Philip Sheridan, Frank Mahr; General Haverhill, officer of Sheridan's cavalry; Frank Losee; Colonel Kerchival West, Howell Hansel; Captain Heartsease, Francis Byrne; Major-General Buckthorn, James Seeley; Sergeant Barket, U. S. A., William Evarts; Colonel Robert Ellingham, 10th Va. C. S. A., William Hasson; Captain Thornton, Secret Service, U. S. A., John Meehan; Major Hardwick, surgeon, C. S. A., Harry Hadfield; Lieutenant Frank Bedloe, Edwin Nicander; Gertrude Ellingham, Mary Hall; Mrs. Constance Haverhill, Gertrude Berkeley; Madeline West, Zeffie Tilbury; Jenny Buckthorn, Mary Sanders; Mrs. Edith Haverill, Marion Longfellow; Old Marjory, Rose Morison; Jeanette, Jennie Kendrick.

Castle Square Theatre

Bostonians seem never to tire of Sardou and his romantic plays. His "Cleopatra" and "Diplomacy" have already been presented at the Castle Square Theatre, and now during the coming week his "Madame Sans Gene" will also be given. This play was written for Madame Rejane, who produced it with great success in Paris, and it has also been played in an English version in this country by Irving and Terry, by Ada Rehan, and by Kathryn Kidder.

The plot of "Madame Sans Gene" has for its central figure the great Napoleon, and around him cluster many important personages in French history. The play is divided into a prologue and three acts, each one of which shows a brilliant scene in the palace of the emperor's day. Napoleon will be played by John Waldron, and the title heroine by Lillian Kemble.

Globe Theatre

"The Runaways," which will be seen at the Globe Theatre to-morrow matinee, is the extravaganza that took New York by storm during a seven-months' run at the Casino. George Evans, for whom the part was originally created, is still at the head of the cast. Charlie Dox, James M. Bowman, William T. Bowman, Francklyn Wallace, Herbert Denton, Charles Berner, Rastus Brooks, Mora Garrington, Margaret Sutherland, Sarolyn Walker, Mazie Ainsworth, Neela Paldock, Eva Bell, Dolla Wilmot, Lola Wilmot, Earlie Bowling and Trixie Buggs are with him.

The musical comedy is in two acts, the first showing the race track and club house at Saratoga, and the second act the island of Table D'hote in the Pacific. During the performance twenty-one songs, all tuneful, are sung. The costumes are another big feature.

Grand Opera House

Charles E. Blaney dug deep into realism when he conceived the inspiration to write the "Child Slaves of New York," which comes to the Grand Opera House for a return engagement beginning to-morrow night. The most interesting scene is that in which the famous gatling gun is brought into play. It shows the complete destruction by the harbor police patrol of an abandoned grain elevator on the river front, the den of the "child slaves." Two tons of brick and 1,000 feet of lumber are used in constructing this massive scene, and the building is literally blown to pieces by genuine rapid fire gatling guns.

The action of the play takes place in the gold regions of Alaska and in New York City, and deals with the adventurous people who risk their lives seeking fortunes in the far Northwest, as well as the many casualties and crimes of the great metropolis. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Austin & Stone's Museum

Leading the list at Austin & Stone's this week will be the Barouth troupe. This aggregation includes some dexterous gun spinners and a group of battlescarred athletes and two Eastern beauties, La Belle Marie, the queen of whirlwind dancers, and La Belle Freda, the "Pride of the Harem," and a complement of maids in waiting. La Belle Marie is said to be one of the prettiest as well as one of the most agile of the Oriental artists.

Some of the other attractions will be Jennie LeRoy on the trapeze, Professor Ritter, the German illusionist; John Till, with his English marionettes, and Trixy and the den of snakes, including Ben Hur, the biggest python in the world.

In the theatre Charley Clark, the star blackface comedian; Harry Powell and Bert Kennedy will deliver some new gags in the "minstrel maids" production.

Columbia Theatre

If you are a believer in the power of the "mascot" and its influence, you will be found at the Columbia this week where the jolly "Mascotte" Burlesquers will be the entertainers. If you are a lover of good comedy, good singing and good dancing, an admirer of the fair sex, the most dashing, vivacious and dainty of any group of chorus girls seen in Boston this season, you will not fail to have a seat in one of the front rows.

The "Mascottes" will be seen in two burlettas, "Two Irish Daddies" and "A Jealous Woman." In the olio will be Wilbur Held, monologist; Cora Mason, singing soubrette; Barrett Williams and Alleyne, in a laughable skit entitled "Dan Duggan"; the Bachellor Sisters; Levine and Page, comedy acrobats; Alexander Hume and Harry Mortimer, in pleasantries, and Fields and Mason, in a side-splitting stunt.

A number of amateurs from all over New England will be on hand next Friday night for the big theatrical event of the week.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

N. S. Wood, the young star, comes to the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week with one of his great up-to-the-minute sensational plays—"Lost in a Big City." Since his last appearance in Boston he has toured the English speaking countries with unqualified success. Mr. Wood is regarded as peerless in his lines of work.

"Lost in a Big City" is lively in action—ripe and brilliant in up-to-date features—abundant in comedy and humor—strong in sensationalism and rich in scenic dress and mountings. The stage pictures include a view of a handsome Madison avenue home with a distant view of the famous St. Patrick's Cathedral; a view of the lively Washington market at night; a banking house interior in Wall street; a deserted mission in far off California; a fashionable club house on Fifth avenue, New York and [illegible] oil works at Greenpoint, Long Island.

Mr. Wood will head the cast as Harry Farley, a sailor, and his support will be given by the popular members of the [illegible] stock company at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. Miss Annette Marshall will be seen as Kate Prichard, the [illegible] of the story, and Miss Emma [illegible] will have the important role of Helen Norman the widow.

Howard Athenaeum

One of those bills that is a combination of everything good in burlesque and vaudeville is announced for this week at the Old Howard. The Three Sisters Herzog Camaras do the greatest balancing act of its kind in the world and have never before been seen in Boston. Of course James Thornton and his act and his songs are known to all theatregoers, so it is needless to expatiate on his worth. Fiske and McDonough in their funny skit called "Good News" are top notchers, and Hayman and Franklin in their sketch of matrimonial difficulties drive the blues away.

Evelyn Fenner, favorite of last year's burlesque, is with the winning cards. The Dancing Mitchells and the Musical Simpsons are in the heart of the bill. McDade and Welcome, Carlin and Otto, Orville Pitcher, the Heelys, Henderino and the Howardscope with some new pictures complete the bill. The burlesque company is, of course, in the programme.

Lyceum Theatre

Patrons of the Lyceum Theatre are to see a novelty this week when the Gay Masqueraders—James E. Cooper, Lucia Cooper, the Harrison Sisters and the rest of their talented company present "The Adviser" and a cleverly constructed variety program. The Shetland Pony Ballet is also a big feature.

The Coopers in their "Tangletalk" are refreshing. There are also Gourley, Sully and Gourley in hair-raising stunts, and "Way Up Yeast," including the "Puckerbrush Band." The Gayescope will have two new pictures.

Palace Theatre

At the Palace Theatre for this week the faomus Rentz Santley Company will be the magnet. This attraction will present a diversified entertainment, embracing vaudeville, farce comedy and musical extravaganza. Amongst the vaudevillians are Mills and Beecher, German comedy sketch artists, in "Othello's last Rehearsal;" Fantelle and Radcliffe, "The Tramp and the Bell Boy;" Buskirk and Rich, something new in musical comedy; Thelma and Fowler, in an operatic change act, Fred Barth, character comedian; Lew Welch, Hebrew comedian and parodist, and a European importation, Cornalla and Eddie, comedy acrobatic juggling act, and the leading queens of burlesque, Nina Bertolini, Georgia Putnam and Myrtle Montez.

"Lady Teaser" and "A Night's Frolic" are the titles of the merry musical burlesquers.

Four Irish Plays in One Bill

A revelation to the theatregoers of Boston will be made at the Colonial Theatre next Thursday afternoon, when four one-act plays of the Irish National Theatre will be given under the most advantageous manner possible. They are "The Saxon Shillin'," the folk play, by Patrick Colum; "The Lost Saint," a mystery play, by Douglas Hyde, "Riders of the Sea," a folk tragedy, by J. M. Synge; and "The Twisting of the Rope," a comedy, by Douglas Hyde.

These plays must not be confused with the Irish plays given several years ago by Margaret Wycherley. None of these was included in her repertory. There will be incidental music arranged from the ancient Gaelic sources by Henry Gilbert, and given under his direction. A picturesque Irish dance will be directed by Mrs. Lilla Viles Wyman.

"Babes in the Wood"

With the music fully as [illegible] catchy as that of "Florodora," [illegible] wealth of scenic investiture [illegible] trical effects, beautiful [illegible] witchingly attired, a co[illegible] cenes and singers [illegible] famous English [illegible] soldier, for the [illegible] the aggregation, [illegible] New York's latest [illegible] musical extravaganza [illegible] ton Theatre for a [illegible] ginning a week from to-[illegible]. Associated with him in the cast are such other favorites as Junie McCree, [illegible] Marlowe, Louis Wesley, Will Archie, Adele Cox, Lillian Coleman, Carrie Behr, Gertrude Douglas, Richard Craven, Mabel Wilbur, Vera Cameron and [illegible] together with [illegible] and Adele Cox as [illegible]. The advent of "Babes in the Wood" [illegible] Theatre will mean a return to dollar prices for the best orchestra seats. The seat sale will open to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Roller Skating

The Royal Italian Band of fifty musicians continues to prove a great attraction at the Park Square Roller Skating Rink. The coming week promises to be one of unusual interest. The star attraction will be Professor Charles Franks, the trick, fancy and acrobatic skating expert, who will appear each afternoon and evening with his little daughter, Lilian.

"A Yankee [illegible] Mars" is the latest and most st[illegible] of all of Manager Lawrence McCarty's theatrical acquisitions for the Boston Theatre. It is the famous Thompson & Dundy Hippodrome show from New York, with its army of acrobats, [illegible] dancers, [illegible] horses and [illegible]. It comes to Boston Theatre on the 30th of April.

For the week of January 29 the Old Howard will offer the greatest bill in its history, and heading it will be the wonderful Battling Nelson, the hero of the great fight with Britt. Other big cards are Brown, Harris and Brown, George H. Wood, Mr and Mrs. Mark Murphy, Orville and Frank, sensational acrobats; Milt Wood, one of the greatest dancers the world has ever produced, and others.

Johnny Ford and Mayme Gehrue and half a hundred others in the musical comedy novelty, "Lovers and Lunatics," will be the offering at the Globe the week of January 29.

"Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World," the genial hobo made so famous by Mr F Opper in the New York American and put into dramatic form by Maurice Hageman, will be the offering of the Grand Opera House next week.

Sunday Concerts

As usual Sunday night will be a big night at the Boston Theatre, for an all-star bill is to be put on there to-night for the charity concert.

At the Bowdoin Square Theatre to-night the proceeds of the concert will be given to the [illegible] Dispensary. The concert will begin at [illegible].

Charles H. Burke and Grace La Rue in their [illegible] "The Silver Moon," head the concert [illegible] at the Majestic to-night. Max W[illegible], the female impersonator; George W[illegible], the minstrel; Bertie Fowler, [illegible], and a half dozen others make [illegible].

A very high standard has been reached by Manager [illegible] in his Sunday evening concerts at the [illegible] Theatre. [illegible] big acts are scheduled for to-night. The box office opens at 2 [illegible].

Dixon and H[illegible], [illegible] Parker and [illegible], the Martin Brothers, all these [illegible] Burke and Grace La Rue in their "Silver Moon" sketch make up the list for the Sunday concert at the Globe Theatre to-night.

Stage Notes

Alice Pierce, one of the leading entertainers in the Keith programme the coming six days, has but lately arrived in this [illegible] from London, which city she fairly took by storm. Miss Pierce will be remembered by Boston theatregoers in the role of [illegible] in the days of the Boston Museum stock company.

Digby Bell will give "The Education of Mr Pipp" at the Park Theatre, making his first Boston appearance outside of comic opera in many seasons.

May Irwin's return to Boston in "Mrs. Black Is Back" promises to rival her first engagement in that play here last season. The business for the fortnight was the largest for any [illegible] of the year.

To enable W[illegible] to remain in Boston [illegible] had to cancel bookings in eighteen cities of New England.

Mary Young and Marion Ballou made a fine impression as Jessica and Nerissa in "The Merchant of Venice" at the Castle Square last week. In "Madame Sans Gene" they will have equally good roles, and they promise to do equally well.

Joseph Addison in "The Spectator" gives the origin of the word "toast" as used by Clyde Fitch in title of Miss Allen's comedy, "The Toast of the Town." "A celebrated beauty," said Addison, "was at Bath, and one of the crowd of her admirers took a glass of the water in which the fair one stood and drank her health to the company. A gay fellow, half fuddled, offered to jump in, and swore though he liked not the liquor he would have the toast. She was opposed in his resolution, yet this whim gave foundation to the present honor which is done to the lady we mention in our liquors, who has ever since been called a toast."

Bessie Wynn, who is the charming Prince Fortunio in "Wonderland" at the Majestic thinks she is entitled to recognition by the Carnegie hero fund society, as she was instrumental in rescuing a baby from the wheels of a fire truck in Chicago this season.

Mme. Slapoffski, the noted operatic prima donna, soprano, included in the Keith show the coming six days, is not a Russian as her name would seem to indicate. She is an English [illegible] who has toured the world in opera [illegible] and is said to be the best [illegible] ever heard in the varieties.

Margaret Sutherland, [illegible] "The Runaways" [illegible] known [illegible]. Miss Margaret [illegible] favor by good work, fine stage [illegible] and a beautiful voice.

Graham's Refined Vaudeville Company, headed by the Osaka Troupe of Japanese acrobats, [illegible] appear in Concord, N. H., January [illegible], Manchester, N. H., 24, [illegible] and N[illegible], N. H., 26 and 27th.

The first production of "Shenandoah" was made at the old Boston Museum December [illegible] 1888, at the suggestion of Manager R. M. Field, who had [illegible] with the [illegible] of its [illegible].

George V. Hobart, one of the authors [illegible] "Moonshine" will be in Boston this week to see the show. He will be the guest of Mr and Mrs. Daniel V. Arthur at the Touraine.

James K[illegible], leading man of the Kennedy Repertoire company, entertained the Boston newspaper men who waited [illegible] last Sunday for Mme. Bernhardt with a fine graphophone concert in the hotel parlor.

The chorus of "Veronique," which opens at the Hollis Street Theatre to-morrow night is said to be the handsomest ever brought to this country by George Edwardes. They are all young and pretty English girls who have seen service in the big London musical productions. None of them have ever been in this country before.

Cora Mason, who will be with the Mascottes at the Columbia this week, in the few seasons she has been on the stage, is already in the front rank of singing soubrettes.

Mrs. Carter is playing in New York once more, this time at the huge Academy of Music, which has been filled to the doors during the past week by audience that were unable to see her Adrea when she appeared in that play at the Belasco Theatre last season. Later she will reappear in New York as "Zaza" and "Du Barry," and in February she comes to Boston.

"Mizpah," the poetical play by Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Luscombe Searelle, is to be given its first performance on any stage at Baltimore to-morrow. J. H. Gilmour has the leading role.

One of the exciting scenes in "The Child Slaves of New York," at the Grand Opera House this week, is the thrilling rescue by the Harbor Police, with a real Colt's rapid firing gatling gun in action.

"The American Lord," William H. Crane's new play, was started out this season to tour the middle and far west. The favor showered upon it exceeded all anticipations. After its highly successful stay in Chicago it was deemed wise to keep the comedian and the play in eastern territory as much as possible, and the result has been that Mr. Crane has been playing the skeleton of his original route [illegible] touching only the big cities. Hilda Spong is the leading woman.

If some of the trust magnates and directors of some of the big insurance companies could be induced to sit under the [illegible] in "The Runaways" we wonder [illegible] large an [illegible] would fall [illegible]. [illegible] every time a lie [illegible] and the bigger the lie the bigger [illegible].

[illegible] is one of the important factors in "Babes in the Wood," [illegible] week's attraction at the Boston [illegible]. She is accounted the most wonderful toe dancer of the decade.

"Extra men" and "extra girls" are not [illegible] the management of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt and this is the only case of the kind in the stage world, outside of grand opera. Wherever the great tragedienne goes there are scores of French students and lovers of the drama in general clamoring for places merely to be in the Bernhardt atmosphere.

At the Savoy Theatre in New York next Tuesday, James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering will appear for the first time in "The House of Silence," a new play written by Herman Knickerbocker Viele.

Mary Hall's familiarity with the dialect of the South, gained in her school days, will add a bit of realism to her impersonation of Gertrude Ellingham in "Shenandoah."

There will be a novelty recently imported from Europe with the Rentz-Santley company at the Palace Theatre this week. It is a comedy acrobatic juggling act presented by Cornalla and Eddie, and is said to be one of the greatest acts of this kind seen in this company.

The big musical number of the "Mascottes" entertainment at the Columbia this week is entitled "Klouta." It calls for an elaborate stage setting and expensive costumes.

A new variety of criminal, new to the stage, but not new to criminology, is introduced in "After Midnight," which comes to the Grand Opera House soon. He is a conscienceless rogue, who conducts a school in a wretched hovel, where young boys are taught to become crooks.

"Veronique," Messager's comic opera, comes to the Hollis Street Theatre tomorrow night with the prestige of five hundred performances in London and a hundred performances in New York.

Music Notes.

Next Saturday, January 27, will be the 150th anniversary of the birth of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, naturally a date not to be passed without notice by our orchestra. Consequently, Mr. Gericke heads the thirteenth program of the season with what is generally acknowledged the greatest of Mozart's symphonies, that in C major, called "The Jupiter." "The Jupiter" symphony was played at the eighth rehearsal and concert last season, and will be the second Mozart symphony to be played this year. A novelty of this week's concert will be a symphonic poem by the Russian Glazounoff, called "Le Kremlin," a work of very large dimensions which lasts about one half hour. The wide gap between the classic suavity of Mozart and the [illegible] of the modern Russian will be bridged by the Mendelssohn violin concerto, which will be played by Miss Marie Hall.

The second of the series of three concerts under the auspices of the Drama and Music Committee of the Twentieth Century Club in the hall of the clubhouse at No. 3 Joy street, will take place on next Wednesday evening, January 24, at 8 o'clock. The program, which has been arranged under the direction of Mrs. Frank [illegible] Stantial, will be devoted to Russian music and will include eight folk songs collected by Rimsky Korsakoff and Tschaikowsky, and four songs of A. Davidoff, along with two quartets for piano and strings by Edouard Napravnik and Edouard Schutt. Tickets at 75 cents each, may be obtained in advance of the secretary of the club, or at the clubhouse on the evening of the concert.

The fourth concert by the Boston Symphony Quartet will be given in Jordan Hall on Monday evening, February 5. The assisting artist will be Carl Stasny, pianist.

The second concert of the Longy Club will be given in Potter Hall tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Admirers of the exquisite art of Charles Gilbert will be glad to know that he and Mme. Gilbert will be the soloists, Mr Longy at the last moment having been able to make satisfactory arrangements with him. M. Gilbert was heard here last month at the concert of the Orchestral Club, and his return will be warmly welcomed. M. and Mme. Gilbert will sing duets from Gounod's "Mireille" and Gretry's "Richard, Coeur de Lion," and M. Gilbert will sing four songs.

"The Twilight"—A Soothing Song

Here is a song as soothing as a lullaby, printed to-day as part of this newspaper.

Once there was a song called "In the Gloaming." Everybody sang it. But that was not because of its poetic and melodic description of the period when day is done and night has yet to come. It was a rather passionate love song, in which thoughts of "him" fill "her" heart always to overflowing—"in the gloaming."

Just now there is a song bidding for popularity, however, that tells of the beauties of "the twilight" purely and simply, without any appeal to stronger human emotions. "The Twilight" is printed as a separate section of this newspaper, so you will be able to judge whether that one hour of the twenty-four contains in itself sufficient charm to make popular the song which describes it.

The melody and its piano accompaniment are simple and sufficiently appropriate, giving the right color to the words, which make quite a soft and pretty poem, as this first stanza and refrain indicate:

"The twilight lingers, calm and cool,
The swallows skim the darkened pool,
The sower plods across the field,
The dew enfolds the promised yield;
While faintly from the wood is heard
The low, weird cry of some lone bird.

REFRAIN
"The twilight, the twilight,
We hail thee, Queen of Night!
The starlight, the starlight
Is coming soon and bright
But ere the stars with brightness shine,
To tell us of the night,
We'll worship still at nature's shrine,
At twilight, at twilight."

That is all there is to it—the one other stanza is in the same strain. No lovers, nothing but the homeliest objects of a country landscape. Yet the hour of twilight in the country probably is remembered with delight by every country-bred person, and certainly there is novelty in a song for grown persons that is as soothing as a lullaby.

MORAN AFTER STANDARD OIL MAGNATE ROGERS

Wants Rockefeller's Partner Tried for Crime in Boston

TUCKER IS HOPEFUL OF NEW TRIAL.

Mother Shares Confidence with Son That Latter Will Escape Chair.

FATEFUL DECISION IS LOOKED FOR THIS WEEK

Affidavits Regarding Stickpin Lead Lawyers to Look for Final Victory.

Another day or two is expected to end the suspense of Charles Louis Tucker and his parents as to his chance for a new trial. Early in the week it is expected that Judge Sherman will hand down his decision on Tucker's petition. Fortified by the encouraging words of his counsel, and the knowledge that three new affidavits have been filed within the past week supporting the appeal for a new trial, Tucker is cheerful and confident.

Had Judge Sherman not been indisposed with a slight attack of dyspepsia, it is probable the opinion might have been given yesterday. Counsel and court officials looked for it until they learned of the judge's illness.

Mrs. Tucker is more hopeful than she has been at any time since the verdict against her son a year ago this month. Since her call at the East Cambridge jail on Wednesday, when she found Louis more buoyant than she had previously seen him, she has been especially cheerful. Nevertheless, naturally, the suspense is trying on her nerves.

Lawyers Confident.

The prisoner's lawyers feel that there is great hope of success from the fourteen new affidavits which they have submitted. All of these have set forth newly discovered evidence, and in the petition for the new trial it is set forth that none of this evidence was known to the prisoner or his attorneys when the case was tried. Those who have sworn to the affidavits are as follows:

Wilbur F. Turner of Boston, Mass.
Benjamin Franklin Allen of Portland, Me.
Floretta Boyle of Somerville, Mass.
Lucy A. Tucker of Auburndale, Mass.
Ida M. Fish of Cambridge, Mass.
Edward Page of Weston, Mass.
Harold W. Page of Weston, Mass.
Amy Roberts of Weston, Mass.
Louise A. Freeman of Boston, Mass.
John W. Burckes of Waltham, Mass.
Mabel E. Grundy of Damariscotta, Me.
Mary J. Cooper of Boston, Mass.
Mrs. Emma M. Cook, Quincy.
George B. Cook, Quincy.

The affidavits of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Cook were filed yesterday. They contain most important evidence concerning the Canadian stickpin which was found in Tucker's cap. Mr. and Mrs. Cook lived in the same house with Tucker and his wife Grace, in Auburndale. Mr. Cook's affidavit is as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

I, George B. Cook, on oath depose and say that I live on Franklin avenue, in the Wollaston District, Quincy, Mass.; that I am a painter by trade; that I am married and my wife's name is Emma C. Cook; that from January 1903, until April, 1903, I lived in the lower flat of a house on Kapelia street, in the Auburndale district, Newton, Mass.; that Charles L. Tucker, the de-

JURY FAILS TO CONVICT U. S. CUSTODIAN.

DELIBERATED ELEVEN HOURS WITHOUT RESULT

The jury in the case of Timothy J. Swift, former assistant custodian of the Federal building, charged with receiving money in connection with the award of a Government contract, and on whom it was alleged marked money was found, reported disagreement last night, after being out eleven hours. The case, before Judge Dodge in the United States District Court, lasted nearly all the week. It was given to the jury yesterday morning. At 10.30 o'clock last night they returned and reported their disagreement. They were discharged by Judge Dodge.

The jury had been called in for a Saturday session so that the case would not go over into next week. After they had been charged by Judge Dodge they retired.

Failed to Agree.

For nearly twelve hours, save during the eating hours, they deliberated over the case, but could come to no conclusion.

Swift was arrested on October 4 on a charge made against him by Robert T. Bourn, of the firm of Bourn & Hadley. In his testimony, Mr. Bourn said that he had received information from the defendant by which he raised his bid for certain Government work, for which information he was to pay Swift one half the difference between his former contract price and that to which it had been raised.

He said this difference amounted to $120 and that after the deal with Swift he had reported the matter to Inspector Leatherman who advised that the man be paid with marked money. This was done, according to the witness, and the arrest immediately followed.

Conspiracy, Says Defence.

Former Assistant United States District Attorney Casey appeared for the defendant and claimed that it was simply a case of conspiracy against his client. He claimed that the story of the principal witness for the Government was improbable.

Marked money alleged to have been found on Swift was flaunted in the faces of the jury during the argument for the Government made by Assistant District Attorney Lewis.

ROUSE O'BRIEN HAS DWYER NEARLY OUT

Gong in Fourth Round Saves Him from Wallops of Boston Man.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Philadelphia, Jan. 20.—Johnny Dwyer, of Perth Amboy, and Rouse O'Brien of Boston, went the limit in a cyclonic wind-up at the National A. C. to-night, duplicating practically their windup of New Year's Day. To-night O'Brien loomed up in better shape, getting to Dwyer's body in the fourth round and having him in bad shape when the bell sounded for the ending of the round.

In the fifth round Dwyer fairly carried O'Brien off his feet by the fury of his onslaught. Toward the end of the round Dwyer tired perceptibly and O'Brien got in hard body punches which counted, but before he could follow up to any advantage the bell sounded.

The sixth round found Dwyer in better shape, and O'Brien just as willing as ever. In this round Dwyer's superior quickness served him well. He got in his punches ahead of O'Brien's well-meant and harder efforts, and, though his punches did not have a tithe of the steam behind them, they landed so often as to make O'Brien look a beaten boy at the finish.

CHARGES OF GRAFT MADE IN CONGRESS

Washington, Jan. 20.—"Graft" was indirectly charged in the House to-day, when in figuring a proposed item of $10,000 to meet an expected deficiency in the funds for transporting silver bullion and coin, Representatives Hall, Republican, Connecticut, Smith, Republican, Iowa, said that the legislation was primarily in the interest of the express companies.

Opposing the proposition, Representatives Smith and Hill, intimated charges that the appropriation was nothing but a plain case of "graft" for the express companies.

ASK SENATE TO KILL PHILIPPINE BILL

Washington, Jan. 20.—Senator Newlands, Charles E. Palmer, vice-president of the International Bankers' Association, Henry W. Peabody, banker and commission merchant of Boston and New York, and Thomas Hopkins of this city were before the Senate committee on the Philippine tariff bill.

The second section of the bill in its present form, the commercial men argued, would be a direct cause of a panic in the sugar market of this and other countries.

Worst Case of Intoxication Ever Brought to Station, Say Police of Lynn.

A nine-year-old boy, helplessly intoxicated, was found in Market square, Lynn, about 1.15 o'clock this morning by Patrolman Murray. The boy was well dressed, but was too drunk to even tell his name.

He was taken to the station where he was examined by Dr. George B. Carr, the city physician. Dr. Carr said the boy was suffering from alcoholism. The police declare it is the worst case of intoxication ever brought to the station.

SLEUTHS IN AUTO HUNT ROCKEFELLER WITH SUBPOENA

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Jan. 20.—During the past week two process servers, disguised, it is said, as real estate dealers, have been around the estate of John D. Rockefeller at Pontico Hills in hope of being able to serve the Standard Oil king with a subpoena in connection with the suit brought by the Attorney-General of Missouri against the Standard Oil Trust.

It was reported that Mr. Rockefeller intended to visit his country mansion to-day and the subpoena servers had an automobile to chase him with but he didn't show up. He has not been around Pontico since the suit was started, and it is alleged he is evading service. Efforts to learn from servants where he is have been in vain, as they say they cannot talk about their employer.

TALK OF RED HAT FOR O'CONNELL

Maine Bishop Reports Great Success in Mission to Japan.

Rome, Jan. 20.—Bishop William H. O'Connell of Maine, who was recently received in audience by the Pope, may be made a cardinal. He reported the result of his mission to Tokio last Fall, which was so successful that a nunciature in the Japanese capital is now assured.

The bishop had precedence of all ambassadors at the Japanese court, and received the highest decoration. He delivered lectures in the University of Tokio. The Emperor, he says, will send an ambassador to the Vatican.

TO ASK GRAND JURY TO INVESTIGATE CHARGE HE'S GUILTY OF PERJURY

Kidder, Peabody & Company, Also Accused of Having Bribed Legislators in Connection With Notorious Gas Campaign on Beacon Hill, May Be Called Upon to Explain the Secret Entries in Books.

POSSIBLE PERJURY PENALTY IS THREE YEARS IN PRISON

Most Sensational Developments, Likely Soon to Startle the Country, Will Have Their Beginning in the Office of the District Attorney for Suffolk County in Boston.

MANY MINOR MEN MAY HAVE TO ANSWER ACCUSATIONS

William A. Gaston, William S. McNary, Robert Winsor and Others Whose Names Have Not Yet Been Mentioned Are Likely to Get Summonses to Appear and Make Explanations Within a Few Weeks

To indict Henry H. Rogers for perjury, extradite him from New York, and place him on trial before a Massachusetts court.

That is what District Attorney John B. Moran has in contemplation.

The Standard Oil magnate has more than once, recently, been in difficulties with the law, but all his troubles will be small compared to those which will threaten if the Grand Jury, which sits in a fortnight, shall bring in an indictment against him.

In the Bay State receivership hearing, held in this city behind closed doors, H. H. Rogers answered as he pleased, usually as though devoid of memory.

In the Missouri hearing, held before a commissioner in New York a week or so ago, he was merely a witness, and treated the commissioner and Attorney-General Hadley of Missouri with contempt.

If indicted and brought before a Massachusetts court he can do neither, for he will be a prisoner.

When the case against Kidder, Peabody & Co. in the Bay State Gas litigation was before the court in Boston, two years ago, Rogers and Thomas W. Lawson were witnesses. Each told a story that flatly contradicted the other on every essential point. Each was under oath.

Evidence to Be Sifted by Grand Jury.

The grand jury which will sit two weeks from to-morrow will have an opportunity to sift the evidence, if the District Attorney's plans do not miscarry. If the outcome demonstrates that Rogers committed perjury, this powerful magnate, who has successfully dodged the courts of New York and Missouri, will have a real fight on his hands.

Mr. Moran, it is understood, is resolved to bring this matter up for investigation. It is said that he has about completed the preparation of his case for the grand jury.

If the grand jury should indict him, Rogers would have to fight to keep himself out of prison, a fight far more serious than the civil affairs that "the System" has faced, fought and bought its way out of during the years of its tyranny.

It is unquestioned that perjury was committed in the Pepper-Kidder, Peabody & Co. trial. As to perjury the Massachusetts statutes, in Section one of Chapter 210, say:

> Whoever, being lawfully required to depose the truth in a judicial proceeding or in a proceeding in a court of justice, wilfully swears or affirms falsely in a matter which is material to the issue or point in question, or whoever being required by law to take an oath or affirmation, wilfully swears or affirms falsely in a matter relative to which such oath or affirmation is required, shall be guilty of perjury. Whoever commits perjury on the trial of an indictment for a capital crime shall be punished by imprisonment in the State prison for life or for any term of years, and whoever commits perjury in any other case shall be punished by imprisonment in the State prison for not more than twenty years or by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in jail for not more than three years, or by both such fine and imprisonment in jail.

Rogers is not the only prominent man whose acts will come before the grand jury in connection with the various gas scandals committed within the six years embraced in the statute of limitations.

Proposes Also to Probe Bribery.

Mr. Moran purposes also to investigate the alleged legislative bribery and the connection of Kidder, Peabody & Co. with gas legislation, at the time that money was paid to lobbyists and politicians and entered on the books, in at least one instance, to the credit of the person receiving it in inverted initials.

Prominent men are involved in this investigation. They include:

KIDDER, PEABODY & CO., who are generally recognized as the Massachusetts representatives of those financiers commonly known as "the Standard Oil crowd."
ROBERT WINSOR.
J. OTIS WARDWELL.
ALBERT C. BURRAGE.
CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM S. McNARY.
COLONEL WILLIAM A. GASTON.

District Attorney Moran refuses to discuss this matter of his forthcoming action in any way. A year ago, however, when he appeared before the Committee on Public Lighting of the Legislature, denouncing the iniquitous gas steal which these same people were attempting to railroad through the Legislature, he made the following statement:

"Albert C. Burrage wrote to Henry H. Rogers on February 19, 1901, referring to the possibilities of a gas consolidation bill. 'Such a bill could not become a law unless a very large amount of money was spent.'

"In 1903 Mr. Winsor of Kidder, Peabody & Co. wrote to Mr. Rogers: 'As you know, we have bought the stock of the Boston companies, and we now have ahead of us the Legislature and the business part to straighten out.'

"Mr. Winsor had probably read what Burrage had written. Kidder, Peabody & Co. had hired a Mr. Wardwell for a legislative agent, so when Mr. Winsor spoke of straightening out the Legislature he probably knew what he was talking about.

"Before the bill became law it was necessary to make its passage easy.

"Then Money Was Not for Honest Purposes."

"Mr. Wardwell received $25,000 from Kidder, Peabody & Co. If he was doing honest work, then that was his fee, and his name should appear on the books of the company as being paid that amount for legal services. If his name was not on the books then the money was not for honest purposes.

"In the Pepper case in the Supreme Court it was shown that J. Otis Wardwell's name was on the books only through its inverted initials. What honest work did he do? Chairman Barker approved the consolidation bill, the Public Lighting Committee reported the bill and the Legislature passed it. What honest work was there for him to do?

"William S. McNary received $5,000 of Kidder Peabody's money. Now what was the $5,000 for, Mr. McNary? Was he the registered agent of these companies? No. If he gave the money away I do not know. But he will not deny receiving it. It was a gift or hire money. He was to use his personal influence with members of the Legislature.

"I do not know whether it was a gift or bribe money. His name was not on the books. Kidder, Peabody & Co. were neither politically nor socially connected with him. So they picked out Gaston to obtain control of McNary, and Gaston placed the $5,000 in bills in McNary's hands.

"Was this man, who aspires to lead Massachusetts Democracy, afraid to have his name on the books of Kidder, Peabody & Co.? Why should he afraid?"

Much later, when he was conducting his independent and successful campaign for the office which he now holds Mr. Moran made this specific pledge.

"When I am elected I pledge myself to bring before the Grand Jury the books of Kidder, Peabody & Co. for the last six years, to investigate the legislative connections of Wardwell, Winsor, and Kidder, Peabody & Co., and if the investigation prove a crime, to land the criminals where they belong."

Mr. Moran, it is understood, has now about completed his preparations for the investigation which, of all others during his term, is likely to be the most difficult and hardest fought, and the Grand Jury will probably hear it early in its meeting beginning the first Monday in February.

Rogers Declined to Answer Questions.

The investigation into the issue of whether or not Henry H. Rogers committed perjury is a part of this same inquest. It is easily to be believed that Mr. Rogers will find himself in a less simple situation, should he fall afoul Mr. Moran than when he last appeared at a hearing in this city, a few months ago.

Then he attended the hearing of the Bay State gas investigation held before Master of Chancery Austen Brown. The public and the press were excluded. Mr. Rogers declined to answer all questions that were not pleasing to him, and Mr. [illegible] had offered to tell his story of Mr. Rogers's conection with the case, was not invited to appear. So far as the public has ever learned, no evidence was introduced that was not entirely satisfactory to Mr. Rogers.

His trial will not be conducted in that manner, should the Grand Jury indict him next month.

Since his appearance here, the Standard Oil magnate has appeared before a commissioner in New York city, in the case brought by Attorney-General Hadley, of Missouri, surrounded by attorneys. His conduct in that case is of such recent happening as to be familiar to all newspaper readers. Before he was through even the newspapers absolutely controlled by trust influence advised him to be a little more moderate in his contempt for the law and its representatives.

Such an attitude will fail, should the Grand Jury indict him a fortnight hence in a Massachusetts court, as a prisoner, he could not sneer at the law, nor refuse to reply to proper questions, except on the ground that they would tend to incriminate himself. Nor could he rise and leisurely walk out of the courtroom whenever the evidence was not to his liking.

Against Arrogance of "the System."

The trial of the chief of the Standard Oil forces, on a criminal charge, in a Massachusetts court, would be the culmination of all the history of the past few years of the people's fight against the arrogance of "the System."

Such a proceeding would dwarf every previous movement against Standard Oil and its leaders. Should the prosecution be successful, the country would ring with the story of the victory.

The procedure following an indictment of Rogers, if one should be found, would be for Governor Guild to be asked for extradition papers. These would be taken to the Governor of New York, who would authorize the [illegible] from State to State of [illegible] persons charged with crime.

"One of Us Committed Perjury."

It is a coincidence that in a late chapter of his story, "Frenzied Finance," Thomas W. Lawson wrote as follows regarding the Pepper-Kidder, Peabody & Co. case, during which either he or Rogers committed perjury:

"Next day the case was on. I was in court for four weeks while Kidder, Peabody & Co. and Rogers were on the witness stand. When Rogers stepped down I followed him.

"My testimony was directly contradictory to that he had given.

"One of us committed perjury.

"The city of Boston recently elected a new District Attorney. This man ran independently against the incumbent, who had received the nominations of both the regular parties. He is a square and fearless man who dares do his duty. John B. Moran would just as soon drag either a 'Standard Oil' magnate or a Lawson before the bar of justice upon the heinous charge of perjury as order the discharge of some poor fellow arrested for driving nightmares beyond the speed limit. It would not surprise me at all if before this chapter is over age, an attempt were made to determine before a Massachusetts court who committed perjury—Henry H. Rogers or the man who so flat-footedly contradicted all that to which Henry H. Rogers swore.

Other curious anomalies occurred during the progress of this trial. One midnight I was called on the telephone from Kidder, Peabody & Co.'s office and given this startling information:

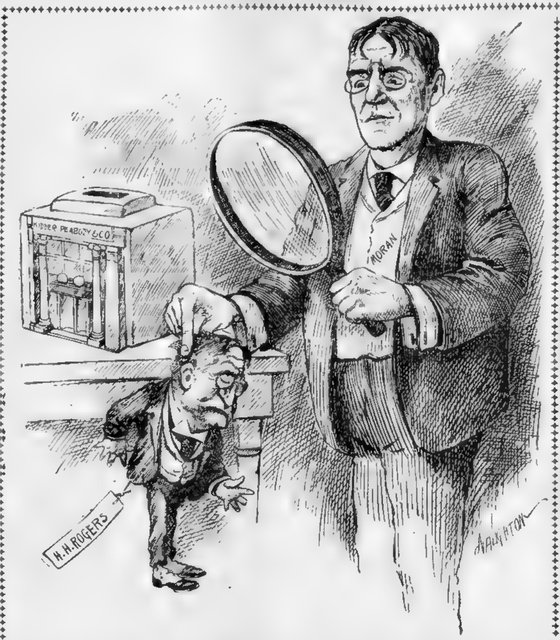
"Will Surely Slip Off the Hook Sometime."

"'You know that it developed in the course of Kidder, Peabody & Co.'s testimony to-day that their books have been altered a number of times while this trial has been going on to make the figures and accounts match the evidence that was being brought forward. Well, on the strength of this Whipple got the right to examine these books at this office to-night. In doing so he has dropped on to startling things. Large sums have been paid out in peculiar ways, and attached to these expenditures are the initials of prominent men, inverted, twisted around, and disguised in a way that looks as though it might constitute actual evidence of legislative bribery. Every one down here is panic stricken, and visions of State prison are in the air. They have begged Whipple to smother it, but he has refused so they have sent for the receiver who is a very intimate friend of very intimate friends of the gang, and he is on the way down here.'

"'Well, well,' I soliloquised, as I turned to bed after leaving the telephone, 'it is certainly a ripe old saw which says "Buckets lowered into the well too often and too recklessly will surely slip off the hook sometime."'

"I went to court early next morning rather expecting the confounding of some of the eminent persons who had been so busy testifying to their own rectitude. This expectation was not destined to be gratified, for I entered the trial chamber just in time to see Whipple and the Kidder-Peabody outfit go into executive session in the judge's little room back of the bench, and again I realized that it was still the era of frenzied finance; that the tradition of the virtue of great wealth had to be preserved and that dollars could do no wrong. After an hour of impatient waiting and wondering on the part of the crowd of spectators, the negotiators reappeared, and it was evident to all that if the Kidder Peabody Rogers crowd had been in close proximity to a live buzz-saw, they had found a way to put its teeth to a no more violent use than sharpening their pencils or clipping their finger nails. Not one of them went to jail, nor has anyone yet gone, although as I write the air is again full of the shadows of coming examinations in this same connection."

Under the Glass That Burns.



"Courts May Determine Who Committed Perjury, Rogers or Myself."—Lawson

*"It would not surprise me at all if * * * an attempt were made to determine before a Massachusetts court WHO COMMITTED PERJURY—Henry H. Rogers or the man who so flat-footedly contradicted all that to which Henry Rogers swore."*—THOMAS W. LAWSON in "Frenzied Finance."

LAWSON REVIEWS BOSTON GAS IN "FRENZIED FINANCE"

Boston gas affairs, the reorganization of the several companies under the direction of Kidder, Peabody & Co. and the litigation that has followed the appointment of George Wharton Pepper as receiver of the Bay State Company—takes up nearly all the space of Thomas W. Lawson's "Frenzied Finance" closing chapters, in the current number of Everybody's Magazine. It is safe to say that no installment of the Lawson story has been more interesting or more brilliantly written.

It begins with a description of Boston high finance.

"With all its garnered wealth of dollars," says Mr. Lawson, "there is no city in the land more avid of increase than Boston. Nowhere in the land will the siren song of the get-rich-quick operator find keener ears, nowhere is the consumption of gold bricks greater than in this thrifty corner of New England. But do not imagine, my readers, that because in the Boston breast ever burns the yearning for quick-made dollars, implanted therein by a canny ancestry, its coffers are open to any rude hand with a ready-made scheme. On the contrary, Boston is most punctilious with whom it does business. To be acceptable, gold bricks must bear the home social hall-mark—the insignia of some proud old generation-and-a-half house with Medford rum or East India traditions. Thus stamped, a brick has pedigree and distinction; it becomes at once an heirloom—a security valuable not alone as an evidence of intrinsic worth, but because of the associations that halo it. And when there's a public distribution of plated plaster-casts, properly inscribed, Back Bay and Brookline line up loyally with their wallets and prepare to unloosen.

On the Financial Toaster Many Times.

"During the past twenty-five years Boston has been put on the financial toaster many times, to the tune of score of millions, but only at smooth-timed intervals has the broiling been done to the accompaniment of incense and hymn music. It is then the grilling is most artistically and thoroughly executed. When holy men, for conscience sake, undertake the regulation of finance, the hardened practitioner sits up to take notice. There is perfect noiselessness and beautiful propriety. Subjects are gagged with social tracts before being put on the gridiron, and their possessions, according to the best precedent, are divided by lot. Protest is unheard of, for victims are either passed on to No-come-backville, in which event the verdicts being couched in 'holier than thou' terms, are not open to suspicion, or they are so thankful for being allowed to get away with a portion of the inherited pelt that they ever peep."

Continuing, Mr. Lawson reviews the formation of the Massachusetts Gas companies under the Kidder, Peabody & Co. auspices. He says the people of State street had previously threatened to have [illegible] at a capitalization over $15,000,000. But he says, "the the hall mark was new [illegible]. The people of Boston can do no wrong. All the former gas kings at the inception of their schemes had been hampered by the strict corporation laws of Massachusetts, which forbid the capitalization of Boston Gas at over $10,000,000. Such a trifle as the law, however, could not be allowed to interfere with a great project fathered by the real people, and with the eclat of a Mayflower anniversary there was brought forth the Massachusetts Gas Companies with $25,000,000 common stock $25,000,000 preferred stock and two or three millions of debts. It was an occasion."

He writes an explanation of this remarkable change in front that the new company was not a corporation but a "voluntary association."

Many and entertaining details is given of the various conferences between Mr. Lawson, the Kidder, Peabody interests and J. Edward Addicks, and there is an account of a meeting between Lawson and Addicks at the Narragansett Hotel in Providence, and of Addicks' famous transaction in Consumers' and Beacon stock, by which he secured $75,000,000 worth of shares of Bay State. Then he comes to the appointment of a receiver, which he recounts as follows:

"Finally, after much [illegible] and bickering, report and denial, it was announced that George Wharton Pepper, a lawyer, of Philadelphia, had been appointed to the receivership of Bay State Gas. Every walk of life has its smug men [illegible] whose name and makeup suggest [illegible] prayers are surely [illegible] for those of the [illegible] present [illegible] he could not get Congress to engrave the Ten Commandments on the faces of all ten-thousand-dollar bank notes for the enlightenment of the poor and lowly masses, subsequently looted the coffers of his institution of a cool three [illegible] escaped [illegible] the [illegible] limitation period. * * *

"Prince of Smug Men."

"As I write I recall my first impression of George Wharton Pepper. Here were all the outward aspects of a glued goodness almost portentous; a head slightly forwarded, as though its owner were habitually in an attitude of prayer, eyes whose remote gaze indicated perpetual thoughts of just ahead, heavenly things, elbows held tight to the side from the carrying of hymnbooks and church reports, and that O-Lord-have-mercy-on-those-who-know-not-Thy-ways expression, the type of man to whom in any auction room the master of the block always turns when offering a gross of damaged 'Thy will be done' mottoes with 'There is surely, at least, one man in this room who places duty ahead of Mammon sufficiently to raise that last bid 62c.' Never shall I forget the first time I saw this prince of smug men.

"As soon as 'Pepp,' as I shall hereafter for brevity, designate this eminent Philadelphia smugger, received his appointment, he employed for his chief counsel (perhaps 'chestnut puller' would be a more fitting handle) a Boston lawyer who from any possible view point, inside, outside, overside, and underside, is the antithesis of a smug man, Sherman L. Whipple, counsel for Barron, of the 'News Bureau.' When I learned that Whipple was to play tongs for 'Pepp,' I began to sit up and take an inventory of the buttons on my coat and waistcoat, particularly those which from being behind and out of eyesight could be snipped off without a 'By your leave.' Also I concluded that Esquire 'Pepp' knew his biz.

Headed for Whipple.

"Sherman L. Whipple has to-day one of the largest practises at the Massachusetts bar. He once accorded me the responsibility of his great success, inasmuch as his first case against me at a time when his business was small was so sensationally fought that ever after when any one came to town with blood in his eyes and a scalp remover in his portmanteau, he headed straight for Whipple. As there is a steady procession of citizens and corporations thus intention-equipped, his clients grew apace. This man has made his reputation on the same basis that the successful expressman who builds up, preempts and holds down a route. He delivers the goods.

"When 'Pepp,' with his peculiar make-up and the flexible job with which he had been endowed, headed for Sherman L. Whipple's law shop I naturally felt about as the country boy did who spied a couple of black flasks in Deacon Robinson's hip [illegible] of which I feel his coat-tails when on the way to town, that there would surely be things doing on his return. It did not take long to ascertain that 'Pepp' was a great man in his own countree,' a member of one of the [illegible] the first families of Philadelphia, and he seemed to enjoy in a particular measure the favor and confidence of Judge Dallas of the Third Circuit Court."

Mr. Lawson reviews the proceedings that followed the receiver's appointment, and recounts his story of what happened before the suit to establish the Kidder, Peabody equities came up before the Supreme Court. He says that he was repeatedly urged to meet H. H. Rogers, to agree with him on what story they should tell on the witness stand, but that he refused to do so, with the result that each contradicted the other and one of them committed perjury.

Addicks's Promise to Pay.

He then devotes a chapter to "The Achievements of 'Pepp,'" of which this is a part:

"'Pepp,' the receiver, finally gave Kidder, Peabody & Co. a clearance of all Bay State claims for the Bay State equities in the Boston companies they had taken away without consideration of their paying Whipple his fees, generally understood to amount to about $[illegible]. For the whole services of his eminent attorney, you ask? Oh, dear, no. Just his services in this particular suit for the recovery of the five to seven millions of Bay State equities. Not so long ago it transpired that 'Pepp' had reached a settlement with Addicks in connection with the 1,500,000 shares of Bay State stock (par value $75,000,000) the Delaware statesman had made away with. Addicks turned back some of the stock and agreed to pay $48,000 in consideration of a release. Forty-eight thousand dollars in cash? you ask, importune reader. No—not cash—that would have inconvenienced Addicks—Addicks's promise to pay.

"Thus far 'Pepp's' brilliant crusade to recover the millions of the unfortunate stock and bondholders of Bay State Gas has resulted about as follows:

"Received from Kidder, Peabody & Co., Whipple's lawyer's fees.

"Received $48,000 from Addicks. I have never been able to learn whether this sufficed to pay the lawyers' fees and expenses connected therewith or to pay the fees alone.

"Indebted to Hewitt estate by loss of suit, $171,000.

Rogers' Suit Came First.

"Enthusiastic at these victories, the Prince of Smugdom and a large force of his legal friends boldly attacked Rogers for his three millions and interest, and myself for the $2,000,000 odd alleged lootings. Rogers's suit came first, and the importance of the Master of 'Standard Oil' was duly regarded by all parties concerned. The trial was held behind closed doors and the press muzzled, with special instructions that there must be no comments on the testimony, Mr. Rogers being oversensitive in regard to such notice.

"The whole case, with Rogers answering almost every question with 'I cannot remember anything but my name,' and Rockefeller and his books anchored in Europe, swung on the point of what the trade was which Rogers entered into with the Bay State when he accepted the trusteeship. As I had negotiated this trade for the Bay State, I had a very clear recollection of what it amounted to, and published the details in my story while the suit was being tried. In addition, I requested [illegible] of the [illegible] Bay State stockholders that I be allowed to win the suit by testifying, but all to no avail. 'Pepp' had no intention of having his case disarranged.

"The Bay State stockholders must therefore content themselves with the knowledge that what is their loss is somebody's gain, [illegible]

"The instalment—and the story—closes with a review of Clarence W. Barron's attempt to [illegible] Lawson [illegible] and a promise to proceed at once with "The Remedy," which Mr. Lawson has so long promised.

MORAN, just before his election.

ROOSEVELT FOR MIGHTY NEW IRONSIDES

Agrees with Spooner That Old Frigate Be Saved and New Constitution Built.

BAY STATE SENDS PETITION OF 30,000

Washington, Jan 20.—A monster petition, signed by 30,000 citizens of Massachusetts was presented to the President to-day, opposing the recommendation of Secretary Bonaparte that the old frigate Constitution be either broken up or made an object for target practice. The petitioners include all of the living ex-Governors of Massachusetts, Mayors, legislators and descendants of the survivors of the Constitution's crew.

The petition was presented in a cedar chest by Eric Pape, the artist, who designed it, and, in the presence of a distinguished company, was laid before the President. The petition is 170 feet long. It was unfolded before a group including, besides the President, Admiral Dewey, Senator Frye of Maine, Senator Spooner of Wisconsin, Representative McCall of Massachusetts and some invited guests.

President Sympathetic.

The petition proper is attached to a striking oil painting, of the Constitution in the historic battle with the English frigate Guerriere, the wording of the document being inserted on parchment. The President and those present spent some time in examining the petition. The President suggested that the old frigate be rigged and equipped as she appeared in her fighting days and sent to Annapolis. Another suggestion was that the vessel be sent to Washington.

In an unmistakable way the President indicated that the vessel ought to be preserved.

Senator Spooner remarked: "I think we not only should preserve the Constitution, but should also construct a great modern battleship, if possible the finest in the world, to bear the name Constitution II."

Favor a New Constitution.

This suggestion was approved cordially by the President, who indicated that it might not be many years before a new Constitution, as invincible as the old, would plow the seas.

Admiral Dewey referred to the days he passed in the Constitution as a naval cadet. "There was no hazing in those days," he remarked casually, "but we had good times." The admiral cordially indorsed the project to save and restore the historic vessel.

At the President's suggestion, the petition as presented will be placed on exhibition in the Navy Department, in connection with a model of the Constitution.

OLIVER BELMONT TELLS OF VISIT BY MANN

New York, Jan 20.—Oliver H. P. Belmont was put on the stand in the criminal libel suit brought by Judge Joseph M. Deuel and Colonel William D'Alton Mann against Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's Weekly, as the first witness for the defense. Mr. Belmont intends to sail for Europe Tuesday and this was the only opportunity to take his testimony. His testimony was of the sensational order, as he told of how Colonel Mann attempted to force him to buy some stock in Town Topics.

The names of Thomas W. Lawson and Count Reginald Ward were also brought prominently in the trial.

He said that Colonel Mann had called on him, had asked him to take stock in Town Topics to the amount of $5,000, and, when he declined, had insisted that Mr. Belmont should send [illegible] to him. This request also [illegible] the colonel had reduced the figure to $2,000, significantly remarking to Mr. Belmont, as he left his office: "It would be wise for you to think the matter over."

This was used by James W. Osborne, counsel for the defendant, to show the animus for the unpleasant paragraphs which subsequently appeared in Town Topics concerning Mr. Belmont, and he contrasted it with the fact that Perry Belmont, his brother, who had lent money to Colonel Mann, was treated generously whenever his name was mentioned in the weekly.

LATE STREET DEPARTMENT HEAD FOOLS FRIENDS

"SUNNY JIM" DONOVAN NOW A BENEDICT

Snapshot by Boston American Staff Photographer.

Given Up as Incorrigible Bachelor, He Weds Sister of Former Fire Chief Webber.

A little more than two short weeks ago James Donovan—"Smiling Jim"—was superintendent of Boston's street department and a "boss." To-day he is neither.

His official position as head of the street department he resigned to Mayor Fitzgerald on January 4, at City Hall.

His position as "boss" he resigned yesterday to Miss Henrietta Louise Webber, sister of the late Chief Webber of the fire department, at the rectory of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. He also gave into the keeping of Miss Webber his name and his worldly goods, and as Mrs. James Donovan she starts to-day with him on a wedding trip to the Pacific coast.

In the eyes of his friends—and they are legion—"Smiling Jim" Donovan was a confirmed bachelor. Marriage was not for him. He would have none of it. He was married to his career and all that sort of thing.

Genius for Surprises.

But this same "Smiling James" always has been a man of surprises. Many times in the past he has surprised his friends and his enemies. Yesterday he added to the list he has given his friends and became a Benedict.

To the last minute Mr. Donovan, as is his wont, kept everybody guessing. The newspapers yesterday morning announced that he would be married at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross at 9 o'clock. Therefore a crowd of his friends gathered before that time to see that there was no hitch in the ceremony.

Nine o'clock came and 9 o'clock went, but neither the bride nor groom appeared. Ten o'clock came, and still no bridal party. Then those who knew the smiling one well murmured "Sold again" and went sadly on their way.

And, in the mean time, Mr. Donovan at 9 o'clock had gone to the old court house and secured the necessary license. Armed with this, he returned to his home, No. 71 Emerald street, arrayed himself in purple and fine linen, leisurely entered a carriage and was driven to Miss Webber's home at No. 111 Hammond street, Roxbury.

His bride-to-be was awaiting him. Together they drove back to the rectory of the Cathedral, eluding those patient ones who were waiting at the Cathedral itself, and, with the assistance of Rev. John T. Mullen, were quickly made man and wife. Only two persons besides the bride and groom were present at the ceremony.

Congratulations for Pair.

From the rectory Mr. and Mrs. "Smiling Jim" were driven to the Emerald street home. Then they went to the Hotel Somerset, where they exchanged a wedding breakfast for the hearty good wishes of a few relatives and intimate friends. After the breakfast they went back to Emerald street.

There, last evening, the members of the Democratic City Committee, of which Mr. Donovan formerly was chairman, foregathered. Felicitous speeches were made, hands were heartily shaken and a host of heartfelt wishes for a long and happy married life were showered on the bride and groom.

To-day Mr. and Mrs. Donovan leave for the West, a trip which all his friends knew Mr. Donovan intended to make, but which they supposed he would make alone. On their return they will reside at the Emerald street house.

ORDERS VOTES COUNTED; CASE BEARS ON HEARST CONTEST

Brooklyn Supreme Court Judge Grants Petition of State Candidate.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Jan 20.—An order handed down to-day by Supreme Court Justice Kelley, in Brooklyn, has an important bearing on the question of whether or not ballot boxes may be opened and the ballots recounted by an unsuccessful candidate who has reason to suspect that the count has not been right.

C. E. Charles Beverforden of Orangetown, Rockland County, N. Y., avers that at the last election he was a regularly nominated candidate for commissioner of highways, and duly elected, but he believes that the returns for all the districts were not canvassed.

A writ of peremptory mandamus was issued by the Supreme Court requiring the Board of Canvassers to reconvene and recount the votes. In his opinion Justice Kelley says:

"The motion is granted. Where, as in the present case, the applicant alleges that the count was illegal, and that this illegality deprived him of the certificate of election and where he positively avers that he intends to institute quo warranto proceedings.

"I think he makes out a case entitling him to an inspection of the ballots under section 3, of the election laws."

The case is in respects similar to the contest of W. R. Hearst for the mayoralty of New York city. His application for a recount was granted by the appelate division and the latter's decision was later reversed by the court of appeals.

BANQUET PLANNED BY YOUNG CATHOLICS

The thirtieth anniversary of the formation of the Young Men's Catholic Association of Boston, which will be observed by a banquet at the Somerset on Wednesday evening, January 24, will draw together one of the most representative Catholic gatherings in the city for some time.

The list of speakers will be a notable one. An ode written to commemorate the occasion will be read, and instrumental and vocal music will be a feature, the latter by soloists from the leading Catholic chorus of the city. Dennis F. Sheehan, a past president of the association, will be the toastmaster of the evening.

REV. FR. GASSON TO LECTURE TO-NIGHT

Another of the Sunday evening conferences which the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., is delivering in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, will be held to-night. The topic will be, "The Seven Deadly Sins."

TO AID THE SEAMEN.

This evening at the Catholic Sailors' Club, 110 Water street, Charlestown, there will be a stereopticon lecture for the benefit of Catholic seamen from the merchant ships and warships in the harbor. The subject will be "Ireland."

NEW HAVEN CITY ATTORNEY TO PROBE DEATH OF EDWARDS

Will Begin Tomorrow Investigating Suspicious Circumstances of Case.

New Haven, Jan. 20.—City Attorney Simpson has decided to investigate the death of Charles Edwards, which Coroner Mix calls suicide. He says he wants to probe suspicious circumstances in the case. He will begin his researches Monday.

John Moran, who, last night, offered $1,000 for the detection of Edwards's murderer, said to-day:

"I have been a careful reader of all the reports concerning the death of Charles A. Edwards, including Coroner Mix's decision, and I am so impressed with the injustice of the verdict that I say this:

"Mr. Mix, in my belief, has yielded to conclusions not supported by his own finding. Such a verdict cannot be reconciled with the statement of facts as the Coroner presents them.

"In view of the conclusion that suicide is not proved and that the indication of murder is irresistible, I offer a reward of $1,000 to the party that discovers the guilty man."

Coroner Mix came in for another fusillade of criticism to-night for not examining Maxey Hiller as witness in the case. When asked why he did not he said:

"When Maxey Hiller came to my office he was very excited. I did not believe it fair that what he said should be incorporated as testimony.

"The next time I summoned him he refused, upon the advice of his counsel, to give any testimony."

The Boston police and the police of all cities and towns in New England have been asked to be on the lookout for the man.

Osborne is twenty-one years old. When he disappeared he had in his pocket a bankbook and papers covering the sale of a Springfield milk route. He wore a dark blue reefer, red sweater and dark trousers when last seen. He was of stocky build, and weighed about 140 pounds.

CREW IS SAVED FROM FLAMES AND SEA.

Seven Seamen Taken from Schooner Kipling by Gallant Men of Steamer Maine.

LIFEBOAT SWEPT AWAY AFTER FIRST RESCUE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Jan 20.—Penned by flames on the deck of the schooner Kipling, after drifting helplessly off the British coast for twenty days, seven of the crew of the schooner were gallantly rescued from certain death and brought here by the steamer Maine from London.

Rescue Fails.

A lifeboat from the Maine put to the rescue of the crew of the Kipling. Every man on the Kipling had safely jumped into the boat and the oars had been [illegible] to row away when the schooner swung around so that her bowsprit was directly over the lifeboat.

Simultaneously a sea rose beneath the boat, carrying it up and crashing it against the bowsprit. The lifeboat swept clear of the schooner, leaving the men clinging to the bowsprit. The crew clambered painfully along the bowsprit back to the deck of their vessel again.

Fire Threatens Lives.

Before the crew abandoned the schooner they had to set her afire. They had spread the decks with tar, and the flames threatened to roast them alive. They could be seen from the Maine fighting the flames. The imperilled men were clustered in a group at the very end of the bowsprit when the life boat got to them. The rescue this time was doubly dangerous, because the schooner had drifted around so that she was head on. A rope was thrown and one by one the helpless men with fire behind them and drowning beneath them, were drawn into the boat.

As the Maine put about to resume her journey the boom of the Kipling pointed slowly skyward and the vessel began to settle. Before the Maine had gotten fairly under way the clouds of smoke and steam grew thinner and thinner, following to the bottom the cargo of bar iron that was dragging the Kipling down.

In presenting his appeal for assistance to the convention, Fow graphically pictured the distressing condition that confronts the miners of his own and other Alabama districts. He declared that for the last [illegible] months families that average four persons had been existing on a weekly sum of not more than $2.50.

THINK FUGITIVE LUNATIC GIRL'S SLAYER.

Believed Minot St. Clair Francis Responsible for Tragedy in New Jersey.

WOMAN VICTIM OF CRUEL ONSLAUGHT

It is believed that the negro who killed Miss [illegible] at Mt. Holly, N. J., last Thursday may have been Minot St. Clair Francis, who escaped from the Bridgewater Insane Asylum a few months ago. The police of Lynn have learned that Francis was near Mt. Holly and the description of the murderer tallies with that of Francis.

A picture of Francis has been sent to New Jersey to be shown to little Bessie Walker, the girl who saw the negro who [illegible].

Miss [illegible] lived in a cottage on the farm of Mrs. Edward Strowbridge, widow [illegible]. Last Thursday [illegible] she was in the yard and her [illegible] Bessie Walker was [illegible] the [illegible] entered the home and robbed [illegible] afterward [illegible] murdering Miss [illegible].

This description of the murderer tallies exactly with that of Francis, although a negro named William Smith has been arrested on suspicion.

Mrs. Strowbridge and Sheriff Nafcross have offered a reward of $500 each for the arrest and conviction of the murderer.

IRISH CHARITABLE SOCIETY'S 169 BUSY YEARS.

Stronger To-day in Numbers and Financial Standing, It Now Plans for Birthday Celebration on St. Patrick's Day

The Charitable Irish Society of Massachusetts will celebrate its 169th birthday on March 17. Seven generations have come and gone since this society was organized, and to-day it is stronger numerically, financially and influentially than it ever was before.

For a century and three-quarters the most prominent men of Irish birth and descent in Boston have been members of this society. It welcomes all honorable Irishmen to its membership. This was not always so. In its inception, the intolerance of the early American days was still so strong upon its founders that it was one of the original rules and orders that all the officers must be Protestants. This rule was abolished scores of years ago.

Unity and Harmony.

"To cultivate a spirit of unity and harmony among all resident Irishmen and their descendants in the Massachusetts Colony." "To aid suffering." These were the purposes for which the society was founded. It has well carried out both of them.

As the years come and go members pass away and new members take their places. There are to-day 625 members, a number not greatly different from the membership for the past generation.

The roll includes many well-known names and some famous ones. The late Mayor Collins was an active member. Hugh O'Brien was a member. Mayor Fitzgerald is a member. Others prominent in the [illegible] Edward A. M[illegible] McLaughlin [illegible] Representative [illegible] Attorney, Augustine J. [illegible] Mayor of Cambridge; John [illegible] of committees [illegible] Dwyer, Assistant District Attorney; Judge John H. Burke [illegible] Thomas [illegible] the Police Commission and James [illegible]van, recently superintendent of st[illegible] this city. There are doctors, lawyers, business men and educators. The [illegible] is as truly representative as any in the State. Augustine Daly is the present holder of the office of president, which has been honored by many of Boston's best known citizens.

Friend to Immigrants.

As its name indicates, the purpose of the organization, primarily, is charity. It relieves the distress of worthy Irish men and women without regard to whether or not they are members of the society. As a matter of fact, it is very seldom in these days, that any member of the organization asks for relief. Especially it is the duty and pleasure of the officers to look after the needs of newly arrived immigrants, to see that they find their friends, to assist them, if need be, to reach a cousin in New York or a friend in Chicago, or perhaps to return home after experience has demonstrated that success does not lie in this Western land.

A woman agent meets all incoming steamers and makes it her business to assist in caring for young Irish girls, seeing that they are not victimized by wicked persons. Incidentally, this agent also looks out for immigrants of other nationalities, if it is in her power.

On St. Patrick's Day.

The social side of the membership is not forgotten. Each month there are meetings at which some subject of general human interest is discussed, the debate following an address by some well-known speaker. These are not confined to Irish [illegible] than the speakers are confined to Irishmen, but are aimed to be of broad scope and educational merit. And once a year, on St. Patrick's Day, there is an annual reception or ball.

Originally there were twenty-six members of the society. Those who are interested in reading of the names of the early residents of Boston will be pleased to read their names: Robert Duncan, Andrew Knox, Nathaniel Walsh, Joseph St. Lawrence, Daniel McFall, Edward Allen, William Drummond, William Freeland, Daniel Gibbs, John Noble, Adam Boyd, William Stewart, Daniel Neal, James Mayes, Samuel Moor, Philip Mortimer, James [illegible], Peter [illegible], John [illegible], Thomas [illegible], A[illegible], [illegible] Clark, [illegible], Thomas [illegible] Walker.

No Break in 169 Years.

The society was incorporated in 1809, and in 1885 was allowed to increase its property from $20,000 to $200,000.

For 169 years there is no break in the records of the organization. There were two periods when there was little to write in those records, for few of the members were in attendance. These were the years of the American Revolution and the Civil War, and the absence of the members was due to the fact that nearly all of them were fighting for their country.

WIT, HUMOR AND PATHOS IN NOVEL THEATRICALS

Talented Amateurs Will Make Irish Character Plays Sparkle

PARTICIPANTS IN IRISH PLAYS AT THE COLONIAL.

NOTABLE MATINEE IN COLONIAL THEATRE JANUARY 25.

A strong compliment to the dignity of Ireland's place in the literary and dramatic arts is conveyed in the coming presentation, in the Colonial Theatre on January 25, of the matinee of four Irish plays under the direction of Mr. Clayton Gilbert.

One of the four plays has never before been given in Boston, and none of them has been presented here on any regular theatre stage. This makes this enterprise the most ambitious one yet for those who are anxious to promote the study of and interest in Irish literature and dramatics in such a critical city as Boston.

The keynote of these plays is their genuine portrayal of the native Irish character—not the cartooned and caricatured creatures of the humorous reciter and the low comedian, but the real living flesh and blood people of the Emerald Isle, with all their Celtic wit, their pathos, their courage and their sufferings.

A Tragedy of the Sea.

Two of the plays, "Riders to the Sea" and "The Twisting of the Rope," were given under Mr. Gilbert's direction before the Twentieth Century Club, in December, 1904. "The Saxon Shillin'" was given at the Celtic Holiday, under the auspices of the N. E. W. P. A. last Spring. "The Lost Saint" is to be given for the first time in Boston on the 25th, and all four will be, for the first time, seen in Boston on the stage of a regular theatre on that date.

"Riders to the Sea" is a tragedy, dealing with the life of the fisher folk on the Western Islands of Ireland. It has for a central figure an old Irish woman, as far removed as possible from the slapstick old woman of the conventional stage. This woman, Maurya, is a fisherman's widow, five of whose six sons, as well as her husband, have been lost at sea. The play deals with the death of the sixth and last of her sons by drowning. Like the rest it is simple, direct and truly tragic. J. M. Synge, the author, spends his summers in the Western Isles, and knows the life which he describes at first hand.

Episode of An Eviction.

"The Saxon Shillin'" is also a tragedy and deals with an episode of an eviction. A young Irishman enlists in the British army, takes "the Saxon shillin'," as the Irish folk themselves call it bitterly. He finds himself one in a regiment sent to assist the police at an eviction in his own village. He is ordered to evict his own family, mutinies, and is shot down while defending his home. In this play Beulah Marie Dix, the talented young authoress—whose latest novel, "The Fair Maid of Graystones," has met with such success—plays the role of "Brighid Kearney."

"The Lost Saint" is a mystery play. In atmosphere it suggests "Everyman." It tells an old Irish legend about a saint, Angus the Culdee, who lived in the ninth century. In this play a school room is shown, and a number of little school children will be played by children from the Dorothea Dix House. The principal part, that of a dull witted boy, over whom a miracle is wrought at the intercession of the saint, is played by Lillian Hennessy. The schoolmaster is played by Theodore P. Koch, and the saint by Mr. Bernard Lambert.

"The Twisting of the Rope" is a comedy, telling how a wandering poet tried to bewitch a country girl and win her from her lover, and how he was baffled by a clever stratagem of her mother. Incidental to this play is an Irish reel. The setting represents a cottage interior of a hundred years ago on the evening of a merry making. The guests, boys and colleens, will dance and there will be a real Irish piper.

The two last plays are by Dr. Douglas Hyde, president of the Gaelic League, one of the founders of the Irish National Theatre, and author of several of its plays.

One hundred and fifty pupils from the Emerson School of Oratory are to take part. Special music from Celtic sources has been composed for the occasion by Henry Gilbert, and special dances have been designed by Ida Ness Wa[illegible].

In "The Twisting of the Rope" Miss Alice Hastings, Miss Marcia Eacker, Elizabeth Strang and Mr. Burton Miller, a prominent member of the Jefferson Dramatic club of Brookline, will be seen in the leading roles.

Well Known Patronesses.

Mr. Miller will also appear in the "Twisting of the Rope" as will Lillian Hennessy, the clever child actress, and Mr. Whitman.

In "Riders to the Sea" Miss Cornelia Hollinshead, a student at Emerson College, takes the leading part. Miss Fay Latham of Minneapolis, Miss Estelle Van Horn and Brayton Byron are also in that play.

Mr. Gilbert is instructor in both the Emerson College of Oratory and the New England Conservatory of Music, and his novel and interesting venture of producing plays in America fresh from foreign [illegible] is being watched with keen interest by his many Boston and New York friends.

On the long and distinguished list of patrons and patronesses appear the names of the following well known in social and literary circles:

CARROLL D. WRIGHT KNIGHTED BY THE KING OF ITALY

Former U. S. Commissioner of Labor Recognized for Contribution as Political Economist—Gift of Gold Cross

Worcester, Jan. 20.—Carroll D. Wright, former United States Commissioner of Labor, now president of Clark College, has been decorated Knight of the Order of Saints Maurizio and Lazzaro by the King of Italy.

Mr. Wright has just returned from New York, where he had attended a dinner given to him by the American Institute of Social Service, and it was at the suggestion of this association that he was knighted by King Victor Emmanuel in recognition of his work as a political economist, especially while head of the Department of Labor at Washington.

The presentation was made by the Italian Vice-Consul, Count Aldrovandi.

The order of Saints Maurizio and Lazzaro is probably the oldest order of chivalry in Europe. The decoration carries with it the [illegible] uniform of the order, and there is an element in the order that would correspond to the old Knights' Templar, who were half warriors and half monks. The decoration itself is a rather large Maltese cross in white enamel and gold, with a wreath of laurel in the centre.

ANOTHER SAILOR DIES FROM SPOTTED FEVER

Newport, R. I., Jan. 20.—Rear Admiral Thomas, in command of the second naval district, reports another death at the training station from spotted fever. Wednesday, Apprentice Seaman Christopher Wagner of Chicago was sent to the hospital, supposedly with pneumonia. Yesterday the case was pronounced spotted fever and he rapidly grew worse. Of the three patients who show signs of recovery not one of them apparently will come out of the hospital in as good health as when he entered the navy.

PANAMA PLUMBERS GO OUT ON STRIKE

Panama, Jan. 20.—The plumbers employed here on installing the city water works system and sanitary system, in connection with the building of the new aqueduct, have gone on a strike, demanding an increase in their wages of from $6 a day to $7.50. They also ask for a shorter working day. The plumbers employed in connection with the canal work are supporting their fellows in the strike.

COHASSET PRIEST FOR EAST BOSTON

Rev. Joseph V. Fitzgerald, pastor of the Catholic parish at Cohasset, has been appointed to the vacant rectorship at the Church of the Assumption at East Boston. Full charge of the large parish jurisdiction goes with the appointment. The East Boston parish combines one of the best and most valuable church and school properties in the diocese.

Father Fitzgerald has been in the ministry for twenty years and practically all of that time has been affiliated with the Boston diocese. He spent a short time in the West, where he went for his health. He was returned about two years ago, and assigned as assistant rector at St. James's Church on Harrison avenue.

DRIVER EARP HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Ormond, Fla., Jan. 20.—The Napier, irrespective of drivers, seems to be fated in the matter of throwing shoes. This noon while Clifford Earp was at the wheel and the racer was going at a clip of more than 100 miles an hour, the right hand rear tire came off. Nothing but the fact that the car was in an absolutely straight line prevented a bad accident.

When Earp reached the garage he found that his rear axle was badly sprung, doubtless from the loose tire.

Earp [illegible] will be going as usual within twenty-four hours. Word was received here this evening that Hemery had reached Jacksonville and that his 200-horsepower Darracq would arrive by express to-morrow.

SEE DAWN OF BETTER DAY FOR IRELAND

Quincy, Jan. 20.—The Quincy branch of the Irish Nation League held its silver jubilee celebration with a firm belief that a better day is dawning for Ireland. John Cavanaugh, president of the branch, although not an Irish-born member of the [illegible] always been at the fore in its work. Of the original officers of the branch, Mr. Cavanaugh is the only one living. The branch was organized with fifty-nine members, and of these twenty-four have died.

WOMAN ADMITS DEBTS OF $37,000

Limerick, Me., Jan. 20.—Miss Mabel Weddall, daughter of a former hotel proprietor in Cleveland, Ohio, filed a petition in bankruptcy to-day. She owes $37,000. Most of it represents notes she signed as a member of the Cleveland syndicate dealing in Southern lands. Her only asset is a $2,000 equity in the homestead here.

REBEL LEADER SAYS 'GAPON TRAITOR.'

Russian Priest Has Become a Snob, Talks of Gambling, He Declares.

HOBNOBS WITH HIS ARISTOCRATIC FRIENDS

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 20.—"Gapon is a traitor," was the remark of one of the leaders of the Russian revolutionist party who was sent to the Riviera for the express purpose of consulting with the leader of the St. Petersburg workingmen in the massacre of Red Sunday, the anniversary of which comes to-morrow. Continuing, this revolutionist leader said:

"He is trying to save his skin and has abandoned us altogether, in spite of his bombastic talk and decrees. His sole object in visiting the Riviera is to approach the Grand Dukes and obtain an official pardon through their influence with the authorities.

"In spite of my credentials, Gapon refused to see me at the hotel, and I was obliged to resort to a ruse to talk with him. I found that six months of publicity and pampering had worked a wonderful change in him for the worse.

"When he first arrived in Geneva after his flight from St. Petersburg [illegible] Red Sunday he was one of us heart and soul. Now he has developed into what you call a snob. He has a great idea of his importance and has become haughty and supercilious.

"I wished as a delegate to talk with him of our cause and future programme, but he put me off with stories about gambling at the tables and his aristocratic friends. Becoming exasperated I asked him some straight questions and his replies were so vague and unsatisfactory that I left him in disgust, telling him that I would report the whole affair to our committee, which I have done.

"You may let the American people know that Father Gapon will have no connection with the Russian Revolutionist party in the future. If he returns to Russia it will be under the protection of the government. He is a dreamer and to us, a traitor."

MILLIONAIRE TO FIGHT VERDICT FOR DAUGHTER

'Front Street' Taylor of Worcester Appeals from Award of $35,000.

AGED FINANCIER OWNS HORSES AND DIAMONDS

Special to the Sunday American.

Worcester, Jan. 20.—The court verdict of $35,607.04 in favor of Miss Florence Clarke Taylor against her father, Ransom C. Taylor, the millionaire turfman, is to be fought by the father. Mr. Taylor, who is known as "Front Street" Taylor, to-day filed his intention of carrying the case to the Supreme Judicial Court.

Miss Taylor is one of Worcester's most popular belles. She sued her father to recover on a note of $30,000, with interest, which she maintained was never paid.

Asked for Guardian.

A short time ago Mrs. Taylor, wife of the [illegible] asked Judge [illegible] of the Probate Court to appoint a guardian for Mr. Taylor. No case was ever tried in the Worcester County Civil Court which attracted such interest among this city's exclusive [illegible]. The request for a guardian [illegible] gossip which was [illegible] when the suit was brought by the millionaire's daughter. She was awarded the verdict by the Superior Civil Court.

Mr. Taylor is the owner of a string of thoroughbred race horses, and he is a patron of nearly every horse meet of any consequence in the East.

Diamonds and Horses.

His specialties are [illegible] and fast horses. He not only [illegible] some of the fastest horses in the State, but also owns several diamonds nearly as large as a one-cent piece. These diamonds were recently [illegible] the papers [illegible] that Mr. Taylor had been [illegible]. Recent developments, however, lead to the belief that the diamonds were taken by members of the family who feared he was not able to care for them.

SAVED FROM CATARRH OF LUNGS SO COMMON IN WINTER BY TAKING PE-RU-NA

Sore Throat Develops Into Bronchitis. Takes Pe-ru-na As a Preventive.

Mrs. Addie Harding, 121 W. Brighton Ave., Syracuse, N. Y., writes:

"I have been a user of Peruna for the past twelve years. With me it is a sure preventative for colds and many other ills.

"Two or three times a year I am troubled with my throat, a kind of raw smarty feeling lasting three or four days and turning to something like bronchitis or croup. I have always had to have the services of my physician two or three times in each case.

"About two years ago, when I felt a spell coming on I tried Peruna to check it, and to my great delight was not troubled with the smothered and choking feeling and never have been since. I can check it every time with Peruna.

"I earnestly recommend it to all. In my home can always be found a bottle of Peruna."

Chronic Catarrh of Throat and Lungs.

Mrs. Virginia Caviana, room 32, Cambridge Block, Portland Ore., member of Companions of Foresters and Degree of Honor, (branch Woodmen of the World), writes.

"I was a chronic sufferer with catarrh of the throat and lungs for a long time before Peruna was recommended to me.

"On the advice of a friend I gave Peruna a trial, although I thought at the time that it would be just like other medicines and do me no good.

"I was pleased to find that I was mistaken and my improvement began in less than two weeks and continued until at the end of four months I was entirely well and certainly looked like another person.

"I had gained nearly fifteen pounds, had a splendid appetite and am indeed grateful for what your medicine has done for me. Success attend you."

Peruna is a safeguard,—a preventative,—a relief for all the catarrhal ailments of winter, whether acute or chronic.

If you, who read this, are suffering from a cough or a cold, buy a bottle of Peruna and take it according to directions. It will relieve you.

LAWSON PLANS BIG FAIRS AT MARSHFIELD.

Contributes $5000 and Appoints Active Committee to Promote Event.

TO MAKE IT IMPORTANT AFFAIR OF NEW ENGLAND

Marshfield, Jan. 20.—Through the power of Thomas W. Lawson, president of the Marshfield Agricultural Society, it is expected that the annual Marshfield Fair will become again one of the events of New England's fair season.

Mr. Lawson, who was to have presided at the annual meeting of the society to-day, telegraphed that he was unavoidably detained in Boston, but he sent word that he would use every endeavor to make the Marshfield fair the gala event of the year. He has already donated $5000 to the society, and it is understood that he will take a personal part in planning its fairs. He has appointed a working committee consisting of some of the brightest [illegible] society to assist him in his ideas. The ancient fair grounds have to be renovated from their dilapidated condition, practically rebuilt to meet the demand of the present generation.

To Improve Race Track.

Next Summer the premium list will be enlarged to a sufficient proportion to bring exhibitors from all portions of New England. The track, which has always been a four-cornered affair, will be altered to the regulation half mile course, and purses hung up for the trotters that will attract horsemen with the best horses on the racing circuits.

Excursion rates will be made with the railroads [illegible] expresses will quickly bring the crowds from not only Boston but the other cities in a radius of 100 miles.

The Marshfield annual fair is the oldest institution of the kind in America. Long before the South End fair in Boston, in the early fifties, the Marshfield fair had been in existence.

Allowed to Stagnate.

Other fairs on the Cape were organized, like the big Brockton and Taunton fairs, and grew to be noteworthy in every particular, but not an effort was made to advance the annual festival at this town.

The radical change that is about to take place [illegible] over a [illegible] ago. Several wealthy Boston men bought country homes in this neighborhood, and soon became interested in the fair.

There were 175 at the dinner to-day and at the close they were entertained by a very instructive talk on the gypsy moth by A. H. Kirkland.

BASKETBALL GIRLS IN WORCESTER AFTER LOWELL

Worcester, Jan. 20.—Manager Miss Mollie Cassidy of the noted Aletheia girls' basketball team of the Worcester Classical High School is anxious to arrange a championship game or series of games with the equally renowned girls' team of Lowell High School.

She tried to arrange a game or series last year but failed. The Aletheias play five girls on a team and under men's rules, while the Lowell team plays seven on a side and under girls' rules.

Miss Cassidy, Captain Miss Ruth Potter and all the other members of the Aletheia team are willing to play one half with five players and the other half with seven. They offer also to play one game in a neutral hall, in Boston for instance. Or, if three games are played, to have one in Lowell, one in Boston and, if there is a third game necessary, to play it in a neutral hall.

The Aletheias played eleven games last year and won ten of them. They claim the State championship, which the Lowell girls also claim.

The Aletheias say it is "up to" the Lowell girls.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

MME. BERNHARDT DISPLAYS HER MARVELOUS ART AT ITS BEST IN THE CLASSIC ROLE OF PHEDRE

GREAT TRAGEDY BY RACINE GIVEN AT MATINEE

"La Femme de Claude" Presented as the Evening Attraction—Thousands Thrilled by Work of Celebrated Actress

By Ernest L. Waite.

Yesterday was a golden day in the histrionic calendar of Boston.

It was a Bernhardt day, one to be cherished long in memory. Thousands saw the greatest of tragediennes in two of her strongest and most popular plays, "Phedre" in the afternoon and "La Femme de Claude" in the evening.

Women predominated at the matinee and their bright gowns [illegible] picture in the great [illegible] welcomed Bernhardt with [illegible] as she glided into view through the picturesque doorway of the Grecian palace, supported by her nurse and confidante, Oenone.

In her graceful robes of creamy white and gold, her glistening veil falling about her golden hair, her bared arms coming now and then into view only to disappear beneath the sparkling flimsy fabric, she appeared in reality to be what she was portraying—half goddess, half woman.

Pale, thin and weak, she seemed almost ethereal as she cried:

"Let us go no farther. I can sustain myself no more. My strength abandons me."

Told Her Story of Love.

She sank into the throne chair, a pitiable picture. Then, in pathetic appealing voice she revealed the love which was destroying her peace of mind. While she had been persecuting her stepson Hippolytus she had learned to love him.

So the play begins. It is founded on the ancient Greek myth of Hippolytus, son of the hero Theseus, who is beloved by Phedre, Theseus's wife. It is practically the only example of the pure classic French drama which Bernhardt plays. Its date is fixed far in the prehistoric era when god and man alike walked the earth, and was written 250 years ago. It is a classic tragedy in verse by Racine. It is practically without action and passes in a single scene.

It was as Phedre that Bernhardt first stirred Paris, and those who saw her yesterday will not wonder that she did so.

As she sat in the throne chair she seemed the embodiment of all the graces, but it was all one color scheme. It needed a contrasting effect to relieve it, and this the actress secured through the black scarf and the browns and saffrons in the dress of Oenone, who stood by her side. Another touch of color was given by the large turquoise rings she wore.

Her self-possession was wonderful. Even in the agony of her discovery that love was what was slowly sapping her life, she could gracefully and apparently carelessly push aside a branch of the tree which got in her way.

With seeming unconsciousness she raised an arm and let it fall again in order that her draperies would arrange themselves more gracefully.

Portrayal of Emotion.

Bernhardt has been nightly proving her claim to being the greatest tragedienne, but she has never in Boston played a tragedy which required such marvellous elocutionary skill as does "Phedre."

Volubility is one of its chief characteristics, for Racine, although a mighty poet and skilful playwright, never learned the art of substituting pantomime for volubility in the expression of emotion.

Because of this, elocution is a paramount factor in his tragedy of "Phedre."

At the head of all elocutionists of the modern stage stands Bernhardt, and she has surrounded herself with a company trained in the same school as herself.

What wonder then that [illegible] with its tirades and impassioned [illegible] was endowed with life and made real.

The scene between [illegible] and Hippolytus in the second act is [illegible] strongest ever devised by a French dramatist. Hippolytus, horror stricken at the confession of the Queen's love, starts from her. He is her stepson, and [illegible] (his father) is yet alive. Seeing that her love is not reciprocated, the Queen implores him to kill her, to lend her his sword, that she may slay herself, and she snatches it from his girdle.

Both Mme. Bernhardt and M. Max handle this scene with [illegible] regarded in France as their [illegible]. Never once does [illegible] the bounds of theatrical propriety [illegible] on at high pitch and with [illegible] passioned gesture.

Again in the fourth act, when Phedre first becomes aware that Hippolytus loves Aricia and not herself, is her tremendous power exerted.

The Voice of Poetry.

The tragedy progresses thrillingly unto the inevitable end—the death of Hippolytus and herself. She does not seem to bear the pangs of dissolution, but rather does the soul of the artist leave the body on the wings of her spoken music, and so borne and sustained and ever rising, mingles at last with the air she has stirred by her enchantments and is lost in those harmonies [illegible] when a genius speaks and which we, as we listen, call the voice of poetry.

M. Max rises to a great height in his impersonation of Hippolytus. His work is hampered only by his evident fondness for melodramatic diction, and his persistent explosiveness in the impassioned scenes.

To M. Piron as Theramene and M. Krauss as Theseus every praise can be given. In the scene between Theseus and his son marked attention was given to all the details of movement and gesture, and the scene was made real.

In Role of Cesarine.

Mme. Bernhardt [illegible] played the role of Cesarine in Dumas's drama "La Femme de Claude." This gave her opportunity to display a different phase of her character from that in any play in which she has appeared during the week. It gave her an opportunity also to don modern costume, in which she appeared even younger than at any other time.

[illegible] by Mrs. Fiske [illegible] for strong [illegible]

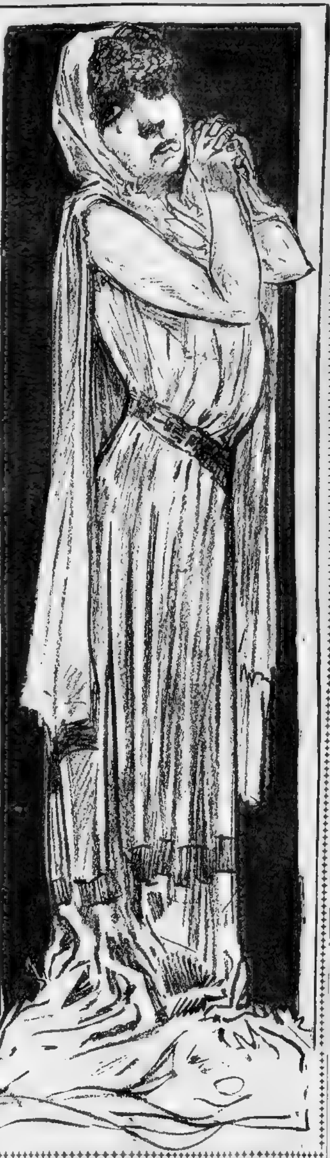
In this play, also, was afforded to Mme. Bernhardt the opportunity to display a [illegible] which she wore throughout the three acts.

In the finale of the second act, she rose to a great dramatic height. The passion and fire in her scene with Claude, her endeavor to rekindle his love and her fears lest he know all of her recent acts, required much finesse.

She made Cesarine a woman without a redeeming feature, mental or spiritual. She again proved her wonderful advancement in emotional control.

A Company of Stars.

Her support was excellent. M. Decoeur's



MME. SARAH BERNHARDT AS PHEDRE.

Claude was far better done than his Jean Gaussin in Sapho, and that was good. The Antonin of M. Guide was made lifelike in its youthfulness and in its weakness under the charms of a woman of the world. The Cantagnac of M. Chameroy was perfect. More than a little praise must be accorded to Mme. Jane Mea for her Edmee, and she honestly earned the spontaneous applause she received.

In fact, Mme. Bernhardt has certainly brought over to America a company of stars, who are revealing capabilities such as we rarely see in this country. They make their characters individual, lifelike [illegible]

The Boston engagement of Mme. Bernhardt will occupy one more week. She will repeat some of her successes of last week, and in addition, will give two great tragedies which she has not yet presented here. The repertoire is as follows: Monday, Adrienne Lecouvreur; Tuesday, Magda; Wednesday matinee, Camille; Wednesday evening, La Tosca; Thursday, Sappho; Friday matinee, Camille; Friday evening, Phedre; Saturday matinee, Fedora; Saturday evening, La Sorciere.

Heart-Broken Mother Writes Mayor Fitzgerald to Hunt for Daughter in Boston. Fears Her Mind Is Affected

A [illegible] was [illegible] Mayor Fitzgerald yesterday from Mrs. Katherine [illegible] Bald of No. 2121 [illegible] street, Philadelphia, [illegible] to have the [illegible] nineteen-year-old daughter, Harriet [illegible] a beautiful artist's model [illegible] from home [illegible] a year ago.

In God's name we appeal to you as a high executive of Boston, asking if you will not immediately have this photograph placed in the hands of your chief of police and detectives to see if you cannot find our long lost daughter.

If you are a father and have a daughter of your own, you will know how much the parents of this girl are suffering at the present time. By God's help I am sustained. Unless my daughter is restored to me soon I fear the shock may have a most serious effect.

She was never known to have done an act that would disgrace her parents or herself. A day or two before she left home she complained of pain in the back of her head, upon which five [illegible] quickly formed.

As her [illegible] met with reverses and [illegible] was seriously troubled she may have strayed away. God only knows where.

Accompanying the photograph is this description: Nineteen years old, five feet six inches tall, weight 106 pounds. She has light hair and brilliant complexion, blue eyes and unusually dark and heavy eyelashes. When she left home she wore a three-quarter length tan coat, black velvet hat, white shirtwaist and black marten fur collar and muff. Her right middle finger is slightly deformed.

The report of the marriage of Miss Allen and Mr. Duryea [illegible] in Louisville, where it leaked out after five months. The ceremony was performed on August 16 by Rev. Frank W. Hardy, assistant rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church. The witnesses were Mrs. Sarah Allen, Miss Allen's mother, and America Wagner, the actress' colored maid.

While in Syracuse Miss Allen was asked if she were really Mrs. Duryea, but she refused to discuss the subject. She would not deny that she was married; neither would she affirm it.

"I know positively that Miss Allen and Mr. Duryea were wedded in Louisville in August," said a lawyer who is immediately connected in a professional capacity with Mr. Duryea. "It is quite a romance. Mr. Duryea has been an ardent admirer of Miss Allen, both as a woman and as an artist, for a long time. She had rejected his suit several times, but Mr. Duryea persisted and finally she consented. Louisville suggested itself to them as the most suitable and convenient place for the ceremony, owing to its being in Mr. Duryea's native State, of which he is both fond and proud.

"I cannot say why no one excepting Mrs. Allen and Miss Allen's maid were taken into their confidence. I presume it was because of Miss Allen's professional engagements for this season, which had already been made and could not be cancelled, excepting at a great loss of money and much hardship to those with whom she is connected in a business way. This is all I can tell you about it."

Children Saw Pin.

The affidavit of Mrs. Cook is in effect the same as that of her husband, she telling about seeing the pin in Tucker's cap. When seen by a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter yesterday, Mrs. Cook told of Tucker wearing the pin. Her two children, George and Mary, also spoke of seeing the pin, and described it as being of different colors with a crown on top of it.

"In Feb. 1903," said Mrs. Cook, "we moved to the house on Kaposia street, Auburndale, and not long after Charles Tucker and his wife, Grace, moved into the same house and occupied the second suite. They were an affectionate and loving couple and never to my knowledge spoke an ugly or cross word.

"I had often noticed that Tucker wore a Canadian stickpin in his yachting cap. I remember the pin very well—that is the general shape and color effects, and particularly that it had a crown on the top.

"Also, Mrs. Grace Tucker—his wife—once showed me a picture of a group of young men among whom was her husband, and in the picture he had on a yachting cap, in the front of which was stuck a pin like the one I had previously seen him wear.

"My two children, whom Tucker was very fond of, remember the pin well and can describe it much better than I can. They both remember the crown and color [illegible]."

"I remember the pin," interrupted her little daughter Mary. "It was a Canadian one, and had a crown on it and it was blue and red." The boy George also described the pin in the same manner as his sister did.

PARENTS STILL SURE SON WILL BE SAVED FROM ELECTRIC CHAIR

Great hope for the future cheers the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tucker who at their cosy home in Auburndale patiently await the decision of the court regarding the petition of their son Charles Louis Tucker for a new trial.

"I do not see how all this new evidence can possibly be ignored," said Mr. Tucker in speaking of the case last night.

"Massachusetts courts have always stood for justice, and it seems to me that if ever justice was demanded it is in this case."

"Your belief in Charles' innocence has never faltered?" he was asked.

"Never for a moment!" he exclaimed emphatically, his voice trembling with emotion. "Why, I know he is innocent. There has been a great mistake made somewhere, and in some way it must be righted. I can never understand how the jury reached that verdict.

Visits Son To-day.

"I know my son never committed that crime."

To-day Mr. Tucker will visit his son in the East Cambridge jail, taking with him the regular box of home goodies which has weekly been prepared by the mother.

Mrs. Tucker will probably not accompany [illegible] on his visit. She saw Louis [illegible] Wednesday.

"He [illegible] just as cheerful as ever, although [illegible] expects that the verdict of the [illegible] should be rendered as soon as possible," she said.

"[illegible] has never fretted over his confinement [illegible] he has had the constant hope [illegible] must come out right in time."

"I wanted to be able to tell him the court had granted his petition when I visited him," said his father, "but that is impossible now, so I can only take him the same message his mother and I have been carrying to him for nearly two years—telling him to keep hoping."

SI'S MULE MAUD IS CAUSE OF A RUNAWAY.

San Francisco, Jan. 20.—Si's mule, Maud, it must have been, for no other civilized animal could have caused so much trouble with so little difficulty.

The mule merely stood in the road and hee-hawed.

Mrs. A. H. Smallman, of No. 229 Devisadero street, was out driving, accompanied by Mrs. M. Hoge, a friend from the East. She had driven through the park and was continuing onward to make a call at the residence of Mrs. A. C. Campbell, J street and Forty-eighth avenue.

Just as the women were approaching the latter corner Maud stood in the road and laughed out tremendously her wild and merry hee-haw.

Perhaps the mule had at that instant kicked Si clear over the adjoining houses, a supposition that is borne out to some extent by the circumstance that nothing could be seen of the unfortunate man in the immediate vicinity of the mule when the hee-haw laughter occurred. Neither was Si's wife with her wheelbarrow anywhere about, but probably she had gone to the good man's rescue, and so her absence is further reason for believing that Si had been kicked over into the next Assembly district or somewhere out of sight.

Mrs. Smallman's horse evidently reads the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, for it recognized Maud at the first glance and wouldn't take any chances. The horse reared and plunged, then whirled about and started on a desperate run for home and safety.

The buggy was upset and both of the women were thrown out. Mrs. Smallman was considerably bruised, but Mrs. Hoge escaped with only slight injury.

FASTS 41 DAYS, THEN GETS HUNGRY

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 20.—"Yes, I'm eating again. It was an accident, though."

Sherman M. Stauffer, a dentist, who about six weeks ago started to make Dr. Tanner's fasting record look small, made this admission to-night.

"I finished my fast on last Tuesday evening after completing forty-one days," said Stauffer. "I met with an accident and I was compelled to eat. I had hoped to reach the [illegible] mark. I don't think I [illegible] to go after my records after this."

Stauffer announced at the start that he intended to "fast until he got hungry."

10 MEN CAPTURED IN PRIZE FIGHT RAID FINED HEAVILY.

Thompsonville, Ct., Jan. 20.—Judge J. P. Davis, in the police court to-day, had little pity on the men arrested in the prize fight raid at Hazardville, and assessed the ten who were captured fines aggregating $815.84. The principals in the fight, "King B[illegible]" Ames, of Haydenville, Mass., and Harry Gilman, the clever little Boston fighter, were fined $35 each and costs, a total of $41.31. A travelling man, who gave his name as Bert Kemtner of New Bedford, and who was a guest at Grise's Hotel, where the fight took place, was let off with a fine and costs amounting to $16.63. Frank Allen of Springfield pleaded not guilty. He said he had called at the hotel to visit his girl and was not at the fight. He was found guilty and his story cost him $20 extra, for he was fined a total of $16.63.

A prominent jewelry store and restaurant proprietor of Springfield, and a hotel keeper of Northampton were among those arrested.

STATEHOOD BILL DOOMED, SAY "REBELS."

"We Have Them Licked," Declares Republican Insurgent House Chief.

SPEAKER CANNON FREELY PLIES THE PARTY LASH

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Some of the Republican "insurgents" of the House held a meeting to-day to plan their campaign against the administration measure for joint statehood of Arizona and New Mexico.

[illegible] Representative Babcock [illegible]

"We have [illegible] off [illegible] statehood [illegible] feated."

An effort [illegible] and administration [illegible] compromise to-day resulted in a failure. Representative Miner of Wisconsin, a lieutenant of Chief Insurgent Babcock, called upon Speaker Cannon and said that the fight would be called off if the leaders would agree to have a provision in the bill which would allow the citizens of the two territories to vote separately upon the question of joint statehood.

Fight to Finish.

Speaker Cannon decisively refused to treat with the insurgent representatives, saying that the fight would go on to a finish. Chairman Hamilton and his Republican associates on the committee on territories went over the programme this afternoon but no changes were made. Delegate Rodey, of New Mexico, addressed the commission for an hour and a half in favor of joint statehood.

It came from Speaker Cannon to-night that the administration is willing to allow a certain number of Republicans from the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States to play off the reservation as this would give them better chances for re-election this Fall. But, the Speaker says, the organization from Middle and Eastern States must get in line and stand for the party programme.

This order is direct and while no threats accompany it, the insurgents who are a bit weak kneed may be expected to vote with the powers that control appropriations and patronage.

Vote Next Wednesday.

Several of the insurgents are now suggesting that the administration knows joint statehood will be beaten, and that it will be a good party move to bring the bill out and let it be voted down. The purpose of this, the insurgents say, is to make political capital of the next congressional campaign, when the orators can dilate upon revival of an independent spirit and action in the House of Representatives.

The Democratic and Republican whips are now working to have all their men in the House next Wednesday, when, it is now understood, the first and decisive vote of joint statehood will be taken.

Paris, Jan. 20.—M. Casimir-Perier, ex-President of the French Republic, has been awarded a gold medal for his work in advancing the hygienic conditions of life for the poor in France and for his activity in promoting municipal philanthropy.

This medal, which is awarded by the "Assistance Publique," or Department of Public Charity, is very seldom given, one of the requirements of its bestowal being thirty years of distinguished philanthropic work.

NO THIRD TERM; CRY AGAINST ROOSEVELT.

Jacob Riis's Address Believed to Reveal Ambition of the President.

SPEECH SETS CAPITAL CITY BY THE EARS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The whirl that was given the political faro wheel at Toledo yesterday at the hands of the President's personal and most intimate friend, Jacob A. Riis, is assumed here to have been "inspired." It is asserted that the "inspiration" came directly from the White House. The announcement that the President was looking for a third term has never been doubted here, for those in close touch with the ways of the President have asserted for many months that this is the ambition that has [illegible] Mr. Roosevelt [illegible] domination of the New York machine and given him the incentive to stretch out his [illegible] for the control of the party.

The Riis speech has set the city by the ears. Now that the President's real intentions are known it is asserted that he will have a very hard row to hoe in Congress. The insurgent party was not built up against him along political lines. The movement was purely one of sectional interests. This will now be used as a nucleus from which will be evolved a party within a party, an insurgent camp, the slogan of which will be "no third term."

Speech Inopportune.

The speech was inopportune, for coming at a time when the executive is daily criticized for reckless riding over the tenets of national ethics, it will serve but to combine the closer the elements that are arrayed against him and will add to their numbers from among the Republicans in both the Senate and the House who are opposed to a third term for any man.

The friends of the President take a very strong position upon the question. While they will not stand to be quoted, for fear of the wrath of the executive, they assert that Mr. Roosevelt can assume the position as candidate for the reason that he has been elected but once by the people, although he has been President nearly two whole terms. Yet he was the successor of the lamented McKinley only as the result of a deplorable accident, that he has not been a candidate twice and that if he wishes to assume the office again he might very properly do so without their being any delicacy as to his having to break the unwritten law of the land—a law that has been revered since the days of the first President, that no man should hold the presidency three terms. The Riis speech is but another evidence of the attitude of the President toward the institutions of more than a century, and for which he has been grilled by both the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Riis Speech "Inspired."

It is conceded here that Riis would never have used the [illegible] of words that he is credited with without the sanction of the President before hand, for the reason that Riis knows the President better than anyone else and would not place himself in the position of talking "through his hat."

In the hotel lobbies to-day nothing else was talked of. In the lobbies of both chambers of the National Legislature members stood in groups parleying and asserting their views. The general cry from one end of the capitol to the other was NO THIRD TERM.

HAIR TURNS GRAY ON WILD TRIP

Baltimore, Jan. 20.—The British steamer Gresham arrived at Old Point Comfort from Sunderland, England, thirty-one days out and sixteen days overdue.

When Captain E. M. Thompson left England he had dark brown hair, but when he arrived at Old Point Comfort his hair was silver gray. The vessel encountered severe storms from the time of sailing. Waves washed over the decks, carrying everything portable overboard. One wave dashed over the bridge, carrying away the ship's compass and nearly drowning the man at the wheel.

PLAYS THE BRIGAND ON A MOTOR CYCLE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Aix, Jan. 20.—Trabucco, the up-to-date bandit of Provence, has been condemned to ten years' hard labor for highway robbery. For many months the police have been on his track, but were unable to catch him, as he rode a swift motor cycle, pursued and held up wealthy inhabitants of the district driving to and from the country or town and jumping on his cycle sped off again at a tremendous speed.

Lately, however, Trabucco had committed burglaries, and it was while breaking into a house that he was caught, his trusty motor cycle having been seized by the police as it stood outside the hedge ready to aid in his escape.

WHAT DO YOU CARE? YOU'VE GOT YOUR HEALTH.

Great Natures Do Not Despair at Disappointment—They Look for Something Else to Do.

The broad-gauged man of to-day does not get blue just because things don't always come his way unless there is something the matter with him. If he "falls down" on one proposition he immediately starts to look up another. He always looks forward and keeps on hustling. A man with his health and faculties has plenty of opportunities and the man who gives up or even feels like it has either a small nature or some physical weakness.

Dyspepsia certainly puts the best of men out of condition for work of any kind. You cannot blame the dyspeptic for getting blue. The very nature of his disease is most depressing and calculated to deprive him of ambition, energy and hope. There is hope for him, however, certain and sure.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are recognized throughout the length and breadth of the land as the one cure that's safe and sure. Their unbounded popularity—resulting from the thousands and thousands of cures they have effected, prove beyond the shadow of a doubt their greatness as a cure. Wherein lies their greatness? In the very fact that they are Nature's own simple remedy. They do the exact work in exactly the same way that the digestive fluids of the stomach do because they are composed of exactly the same elements and possess the same properties. They relieve the weak and worn out stomach of its burden of digestion and permit it without let or hindrance to rest and grow sound and well. The stomach will get well quick enough in its own natural way if it is let alone. That is what Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do. They not only let it alone themselves but make the food taken into the stomach do the same.

You can satisfy yourself of the truth of this statement by putting the food you would eat into a glass jar with sufficient water and one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. The process of digestion will be taken up and carried out just as the gastric juice and other digestive fluids would do it. Their action is natural and they cause no disturbance in the digestive organs. In fact you forget you have a stomach when they begin to do their work, so mild and natural is the operation. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50c. a box.

MAIL CLERKS OF UNCLE SAM TO HAVE DANCE.

Committee of 100 Invites Governor and Mayor to Coming Fete.

PLAN FUND FOR SICK AND DEATH BENEFITS

Once a year the Postoffice Clerks' Mutual Benefit Association gives a ball. This year the date is set for Tuesday evening February 6, in Mechanics Hall. The arrangements are well in hand and practically completed. Those invited include Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., the members of his staff, Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston and other State and city and postal officials.

A concert program will be given from 8 to 9 o'clock, and at the latter hour the grand march will be started. The hall will be decorated with bunting and flags and from their depths electric lights will constantly flash.

The reunion this year is in charge of a committee of 100, with D. J. Hartnett as chairman, W. H. Driscoll, secretary and D. J. Driscoll, treasurer. In their work these men will be assisted by an executive committee composed of the following: J. E. McLaughlin, chairman; A. H. Callis, E. F. Evans, J. C. Coleman, C. A. Caroleman, N. D. Scully, M. J. Keane, J. F. J. Countie, P. J. Foley, W. J. Downes, J. A. Barry, J. T. Ryan, D. J. Costello, M. W. Fallon and C. J. Fo[illegible].

In the course of a year the association is called upon to distribute a large amount of money for sick benefits and a still larger amount for death benefits among its members. The membership includes practically all the clerks in the postoffice, and Postmaster George A. Hibbard, a member, is the most loyal friend the men have.

The association was formed in 1883. Postal clerks receive no salary during absence for sickness, and on account of this the steps were taken which resulted in the formation of the association.

Providence, Jan. 20.—Captain Peter Christianson of the coal barge Powell, unloading here, fell dead from heart failure in Thomas Guyan's liquor saloon, No. 225 Richmond street, this afternoon. He lived with his family at No. 752 South Front street, Philadelphia.

BIG VARSITY GUARD IS FRESHMAN PRESIDENT.

Teddy, Jr., Gives Way to Burr in Freshman Election at Harvard. Young Roosevelt Refused to Accept Honor.

Francis Hurdon Burr of Chestnut Hill, the famous varsity guard, is the man selected by the freshman class of Harvard to be president of the class in place of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.

Before the class meeting young Roosevelt was slated for the presidency, the highest social and good fellowship honor a Harvard freshman can win.

Roosevelt declined to run, however, and the choice then fell to Burr.

Burr is the man who plays football "with a smile."

And it won't come off.

Burr is big in body and big in heart, and he wears a pleasant smile. That is his normal phiz. But when he gets into the football togs the smile assumes a rather grim expression, peculiarly [illegible] to his opponents. As one of the Yale tackers remarked about him:

"Burr plays like the deuce and gives an exasperating smile on a foul."

Burr's smile is a little broader just now because he is elected president of his class. He doesn't think he deserves the honor—for he is a modest young man. But his classmates think the election is all right.

Burr is a splendid athlete, naturally being on the football team. He is prominent in the younger social set of Chestnut Hill.

GIRLS WIN FIGHT TO MAKE JAPS "GO"

They Strike Until the Orientals Are Put at Another Job.

San Francisco, Jan. 20.—Fifteen girls have struck on the ostrich farm at South Pasadena because of the employment of Japanese. The girls work on the feathers, and they refused to teach the Japs the business, knowing it would be but a short time before the little brown men would absorb the business. The manager investigated the matter, and after promising that the Japs would be taken off that particular work the girls were induced to return to work.

LIVING IN ROME DEAR AS IN NEW YORK

Rome, Jan. 20.—Americans intending to keep house in Rome this season will find that the cost of their provisions depends upon the weather. When the hot wind blows from the south they can get lamb at ten cents a pound, but when the north wind blows they have got to pay fifteen cents a pound for it.

LITTLE TOM COBURN AS "NOD"

FAC-SIMILE OF DINKEY BIRD POSTER.

Wynken, Blynken, Nod and many others of the dearly loved characters by Eugene Field will be seen in the production of "The Dinkey Bird," to be given at the Tremont Theatre next month. This is a spectacular musical play for the benefit of two children's charities of Boston.

The part of Nod, the little Dutch boy, will be taken by Tommy Coburn, who so successfully impersonated the Clown Rat in the production of "The Pied Piper of Hamlin" and Little Tommy Tucker in the "Mother Goose's Jubilee." This lad is a remarkable child comedian. His work as Nod is said to be worthy of any professional, yet at the same time he is natural and childlike.

Special music has been written for "The Dinkey Bird," and songs to words by Field, by De Koven, Chadwick and others are introduced.

The story of "The Dinkey Bird" is that Wynken, Blynken and Nod have sailed off in their Wooden Shoe to find the Land of Wonder Wander, where the Dinkey Bird is singing on the Amfalula Tree and where no one ever grows old but stays just a little child.

They are coming back with the big ship "Flyaway Horse" to take all the children to that beautiful country. In the second act the children are on the Island of Dilapidated Toys, the home of Lady Button Eyes, who has invited the voyagers to visit her on the way to the Land of Wonder Wander.

Here they find their dearly loved dollies, wooden soldiers, trains and books and Noah's arks. The play closes with a tableau—the arrival of the children at the Land of Wonder Wander.

MOTHER A SUICIDE, GIRL TRIES THE SAME DEATH.

Constant brooding over the suicide of her mother two months ago caused Miss Catherine Weed, a pretty and accomplished young woman [illegible] of Deer Isle, Me., to drink [illegible] bottle acid in an attempt to end her life. She was taken to the Cambridge Hospital, where it was said last night that unless complications set in she will recover.

Miss Weed left her home a week ago and went to Cambridge to visit a friend, Mrs. W. J. Hodgedon, at No. 11A Howard street.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Hodgedon called her, but received no response, and went into the room. She found the girl almost unconscious on the bed. An empty two-ounce bottle lay beside her. [illegible] the girl had taken carbolic acid. She was then hurried to the hospital.

What Sulphur Does.

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

THE HIDDEN MARRIAGE

A Romance of Beacon Street and the Slums of Boston

Synopsis

JUDGE STEPHEN CATHCART was shocked beyond measure when he found that Olive Graham, on trial before him for murder, was his own daughter by the woman he had married as a boy, and whom his mother had told him was dead within a few weeks of the marriage. The girl was acquitted.

CHAPTER X.

[illegible] American, Jour[illegible] American.

AND the bitter poignancy underlying her words struck Stephen Cathcart like an accusation.

All the impotent resentment against circumstances, rankling in her mind, seemed merged in the cry. Why was she always to suffer for others' sins?

He stood very dumb. He read in her face that the very choice offered to her had seemed an added wrong. Yes, he had, [illegible] she was [illegible] yet to himself [illegible] though he believed he was but [illegible].

"Oh, I know you sent a message that I was to decide," she cried, "only have you not already made your decision? Your scheme of reparation does not include that bare act of justice to my mother or to myself—that which is the only real reparation. What you said to my mother told me that—in which direction your wishes lay. If your words meant anything, when you said the decision should rest with me, I have chosen. I claim that or nothing."

Stephen Cathcart's eyes suddenly fell on the [illegible] him coldly from the [illegible] the wall, the dead wife whose reputation the girl's decision would not spare.

CHAPTER XI.

The Way Out

FOR a brief space the judge did not speak. He stood looking sadly into the girl's face with its hard expression.

"Yes, Olive," he answered at last, quietly, "I said that you were to choose. And if I thought that perhaps you might be willing to forego your right—your undoubted right, for my marriage with your mother was absolutely valid, and she would have been my acknowledged wife all the years since that marriage but for the treachery that led me to believe her dead. If I thought, hoped you might be willing to continue to bear the name by which you have been known, it was to spare the stain on the memory of the woman I led to the altar [illegible] myself free, and on her living relatives all the inevitable pain and scandal. You would still have been as much the object of my affection and care, Olive."

"Oh, don't think I'm not sorry for her whom you speak of! Only am I to consider her before my mother, who for twenty years has suffered?" the girl cried. "For twenty years she was left with the belief you had wronged her; during those twenty years she had seen you rising into eminence—with too much woman's pride to seek you out, to make any claim, to give one sign. Is it nothing to her now, do you think, when you speak of reparation—the reparation that is one of money? Is it nothing to her that even now she may not take her husband's name, share her husband's home? Oh, it's for her I'm thinking chiefly, my gentle, patient mother. I can't bear to see her claims brushed aside because of the dead whose ears the scandal would never reach! For myself—"

She paused and gave a little bitter laugh.

"For myself, I think all I've had to undergo has hardened me, deadened me to feeling, to care much about anything now."

Stephen Cathcart looked at her with an aching pity. He could understand her bitterness—what wonder if she were hardened? Her words had touched him deeply.

"Olive," he said suddenly, "I want you to read this letter before another word is spoken—a letter I was on the point of sending to my hitherto acknowledged heir. At least it will show you how much you and your mother have been in my thoughts."

For a Memory

Olive's face had changed as she read the letter; he saw her mouth soften and grow tremulous.

"Oh, forgive me," she cried, "if I have seemed hard and resentful. The kindness in every word of this letter shows me I misjudged you. Only it seemed so hard that my mother—"

"Olive, I am glad you spoke so honestly," he said. "But there is another way that has been in my thoughts—it is not what you have claimed yet, perhaps, is the best way of all. My child, I want you with me, I want to win my daughter's love, believe that even though I am asking what may be past believing. If I went through the marriage ceremony with your mother again she would bear her husband's name, share his coming years, and you would be with me, my home yours, my daughter always," he said. "Such a course gives your mother all you wish for her, and the sacrifice you would make in foregoing to claim your name—it would there be no compensation to an unselfish nature, in the knowledge that you are safeguarding the memory of a dead woman who was wronged too? What do you say?"

Her Glad Tidings

"Father, father!" she cried, suddenly breaking into a flood of tears, conquered by his appeal, "can you doubt what my answer is? A name is such a little thing. I should be your daughter really, and I should see my mother happy, at the cost of pain to no one. Oh, I should be selfish indeed if I did not say yes!"

Very gently he took her face between his hands and kissed her.

"Olive," the judge said, "I am going to change your tears to smiles. Read this," and he put Catmell's telegram into her hand. "It affects you. If only that corroboration of your story had been forthcoming earlier your ordeal would have been less heavy."

She read it wonderingly; then a look of wild gladness broke in her face.

"Oh, how much this means to me! You can't guess how much!" she cried. "And this news will be made public?"

"Yes, widely public."

"Then all those who didn't believe me innocent before will surely believe now," she cried. "It is such wonderful news. I want to go and tell mother at once, to tell her the other news, too. It will gladden her so!"

He smiled into the eager face.

Their New Lives

"Yes, go to her; and, Olive, take this message to your mother—your mother whom I loved so dearly—that we three begin again our new lives together. I would go with you, only I feel overwrought tonight. Oh, it is nothing—nothing," he added quickly, as she cast a quick, anxious glance into his tired face. "I will come myself to-morrow to my wife and child." His voice trembled a little. "My clerk, Sangster, will fetch a cab for you."

He rang the bell and gave instructions. In a few minutes Sangster returned: there was the sound of wheels below.

"Good night, Olive, my dear," Sangster was surprised to see the Judge kiss the girl's face. Stephen Cathcart added softly, as if to himself, "How like the bride of twenty years ago!"

He turned away suddenly. Sangster caught the look of intense emotion in his face. The old clerk turned and sat[illegible] half passed her going through the door, stood watching her go down preceded by Sangster. At the end of the stairs Olive turned and looked up at him with a smile, and he waved his hand. Then he walked slowly back into the room, and as though overcome dropped into a chair. But there was a smile on the tired face. The sunshine had been late in coming into his life, but his daughter had brought it.

He heard the cab wheels move away; Sangster returned. The old clerk looked anxiously at his master, sitting there with the firelight on his face.

"Oh, I'm all right, Sangster," his master said, reading the glance, "a little overwrought, that's all. I have had much to try me. I want you to take that letter to Mr. Rinslaw by cab. I wouldn't intrust it to any one but you."

Sangster took the letter that would mean so much to Mordaunt and walked softly away. At the door he turned to look back anxiously into the room. Then quietly closed the door, leaving the Judge alone.

ALLEGES MASSEUSE RUINED HER FACE; WANTS $1,000

Fitchburg, Jan. 20.—"Your honor, she never had much of a complexion to begin with," declared Margaret E. Rock, a masseuse, in Judge Gallagher's court to-day in response to the allegation made by Mrs. Sarah Houghton that she had ruined her skin while treating her. And the fight was on.

Mrs. Houghton declared that after treatment in Mrs. Rock's massage establishment her skin assumed numerous pimples and blackheads. She asks $10,000 damages. Mrs. Rock came back at her with the retort courteous, to the effect that her aforetime patron never had a skin free from blemish.

By agreement of counsel the case was submitted without argument, the opposing lawyers being apparently willing to rest their respective cases on the expert decision of the court. Judge Gallagher's decision is awaited with interest by Fitchburg dames.

BIG DEALS MARK WEEK IN REALTY.

All Classes of Property Are in Good Demand for This Season

HEIRS SELL ESTATE IN FAMILY FOR 250 YEARS

Activity and strength developed in the real estate market early in the week, and continued well to the close. A feature was a large number of high priced properties which were transferred. All classes of property were in good demand, suburban, farm, as well as city properties. It had [illegible] that the realty business would prove active so early in the year, and in consequence the dealers are well satisfied with the situation.

[illegible] and residence pro[illegible] has been effected [illegible] wn real estate [illegible] the transaction, the owner of all the property formerly owned by the John D. Small estate. The amount involved was not made public [illegible] much above the total assessed value of the property, which was over $[illegible]. The title was given by Edward S. Pigeon et al., trustees. There are several estates concerned, as follows: Nos. 26 Tufts street, 56, 64, 68, 72, 86 and 88 Water street, and a tract of vacant land, also on Water street, containing [illegible] square feet; also the properties numbered 52 to 56 Taunton street and 24 to 40 High street. The last named comprise some of the best brick blocks in Medford. Also included in the deal were properties on Main, Swan, Union, Winthrop and Holton streets, and the prop[illegible] No. 2 Mystic avenue.

Big Deal in Medford.

The firms of Joseph Joseph & Co., and the Railway & Manufacturing & Supply Company [illegible] located in South Boston, have taken a long lease of the entire [illegible] street, Cam[illegible] part of the plant of [illegible] was negotiated [illegible] Weed & [illegible] Exchange.

[illegible] through the office of Edward T. Harrington & Co., for the sale of the estate numbered 29 Eden avenue, West Newton. The property, which is located opposite the estate of the late Seth Davis, consists of an attractive eleven-room house, with [illegible] square feet of land, and [illegible] assessed for $4,000. [illegible] of Middleboro purchases for his own occupancy and will [illegible] remodel the house.

Everett and Winthrop Sales.

Through the same office George A. Brown has purchased of the Andover Savings Bank the estate No. 15 Locust street, Everett. This is the estate referred to in these columns two weeks ago and is assessed for $8,200. The house was erected some few years ago at a cost exceeding $12,000. Mr. Brown has re-sold the property to a party who has already commenced to make extensive changes and improvements, and will occupy as a home when completed. This firm has sold for the Winthrop Shore Land Company of Boston a lot of land on [illegible] avenue, Winthrop, containing 8,250 square feet, with a frontage of fifty feet. The purchaser, Calvin P. Lowe, intends to build a very attractive residence upon the property which will be ready for occupancy about August 1, 1906.

One large transaction which was made was that in which the three three-story and one four-story brick buildings numbered 21 to 43 Leverett street, corner Causeway street, have been sold to Henry Hollander of the firm of Hollander Brothers by the John Fleet heirs. This estate had been the property of the Fleets for about 250 years and contains 6,011 square feet of land assessed at a valuation of about $61,000, of which sum $50,100 is on the land. Many attempts have been made by prominent real estate men in the past to purchase this valuable property. Simon Silverman of No. 28 School street and Robert Silverman of No. 1 Beacon street represented Henry Hollander and John L. Wakefield of No. 19 Milk street represented the Fleet heirs in the transaction.

Agreements have been signed for the sale of the Franklin E. Bigelow farm of ten acres, located on Bolton street, Marlboro, overlooking Fort Lake. A Bostonian buys for a summer home, will equip with all modern improvements and make extensive alterations. It is one of the finest located estates in [illegible] of the city, and consists of a house over 100 years old and the usual farm buildings. Edward T. Harrington & Co. were the brokers in the transaction.

The house and stable are very imposing and stand on two acres of ground. Edward T. Harrington & Co. were the brokers in the transaction.

RICH SOCIETY MEN WED WORKING GIRLS IN TWO ROMANCES

POOR WORKING GIRLS, WED BY BOSTON SOCIETY MEN

Boston Society Surprised When Leroy Fay Wins Miss Jennie Murphy, and Frank B. Sanborn, Miss De Courcey.

Two romances, both resulting in the marriage of poor working girls and wealthy society men, have just become known. Leroy Fay, of No. 198 Commonwealth avenue, has taken for his bride Miss Jennie Murphy, a beautiful young woman who earned her living as a domestic on the Berghan estate in Weston. Frank B. Sanborn, Jr., son of the "Sage of Concord," has married Miss Mary De Courcey, who was until her marriage a stenographer in the offices of the Massachusetts Mining Company at No. 9 Beacon street.

Mr. Fay is well known among the younger Boston clubmen. He has lived in the home of Mrs. William Matthews, No. 198 Commonwealth avenue, since he was a boy. He and Miss Murphy were married last Thursday.

Mrs. Fay Gibson Type.

Mrs. Fay is a brunette of the type made famous by Gibson. She is tall, with dark hair and eyes, classic features and a magnificent figure. After coming to Boston from Nova Scotia, ten years ago, she secured employment in the home of Mrs. Stephen M. Crosby, No. 264 Marlboro street. She went to the Berghan estate later, and it was there that young Fay first saw her. He met her in the grounds as he was riding, and determined to learn who she was. Upon discovering her identity as a domestic he did not alter his determination, and he resolved to woo and wed her if possible.

He took no one into his confidence until he had won her promise to be his wife. Then he told his foster mother, Mrs. Matthews. Mrs. Matthews wisely decided that the young man—he is thirty-two—was old enough to know his own mind, and prepared to welcome the bride when he should bring her home.

"I have never seen Miss Murphy, but I know she is a charming girl," said Mrs. Matthews to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "Mr. Fay has lived with me for years. When he was a poor boy, an orphan, my husband and I took him into our home. We have never been sorry for it. He has never disappointed us in any way.

"He told me last Thursday that he was going to marry Miss Murphy. I was willing he should marry her. If she pleases him as a wife, certainly it will please me.

"It is no one's business whether he married a servant or a wealthy girl. Mr. Fay is old enough to know his mind and I have every reason to believe he is making a good choice. They will return soon, and when they come I shall do everything in my power to make a home for the bride until their own house has been furnished."

Married in Cathedral.

The marriage of Frank B. Sanborn, Jr., was another surprise. The first known of it was the published announcement. The many friends of Mr. Sanborn asked "Who is Mary De Courcey?" They learned that she is a native of Bucksport, Me., is twenty-six years old, and is a remarkably pretty girl.

As the son of the Concord essayist, philosopher and friend of Thoreau, Emerson, Longfellow, Whittier and other famous men, young Sanborn has occupied a prominent place in society and his wedding has attracted great interest.

The marriage was solemnized last Wednesday in the vestry of the Holy Cross Cathedral. The father of the groom was one of the few persons at the wedding.

Mr. Sanborn, who is thirty-four, met Miss De Courcey for the first time about three years ago in the office where she was employed. It was the old story, it is said, of love at first sight, and a few acquaintances of both Mr. Sanborn and Miss De Courcey have know for some time that they were engaged. It was reported that the Sanborn family, while not wholly opposed to the match, were far from enthusiastic in regard to it. Miss De Courcey was comparatively poor and of a different religious faith from Mr. Sanborn, she and all her family being devout Catholics.

WIFE SAYS DUKE KICKED HER FROM BED.

Accuses Head of the Tobacco Trust of Violence and Drunkenness.

New York, Jan. 20.—Sensational counter charges against James B. Duke, head of the Tobacco Trust and characterized by John D. Rockefeller as one of the world's greatest constructive merchants, were revealed to-day in an examination of the papers filed by his wife, Lillian Annette Duke, in Trenton, N. J., against whom he recently brought suit for divorce.

Mrs. Duke swears her husband clubbed her and kicked her.

The answer denies specifically and absolutely Duke's charges against his wife with reference to Colonel Frank Huntoon, a well-known New Yorker. In addition to this denial, the answer enumerates charges with specifications of extreme cruelty, abuse, assault, neglect and attentions to other women.

Drunkenness is another charge which the wife makes, alleging that two women, Mary and Margaret Smith, employed by Duke in his Somerville, N. J., residence, participated with him in excessive drinking.

The charges which Mrs. Duke makes may be enumerated as follows:

1—Extreme cruelty on the part of her husband, specifying that on their wedding journey in Europe he compelled her to take nine trips in open vehicles, exposing her to rain, hail and snow, using harsh and abusive language when she objected, and causing her to lose twenty pounds in weight.

2—Further charges of extreme cruelty, specifying that Duke kicked her out of bed, clubbed her with a crutch, choked and shook her, and called her vile names.

3—Intoxication, specifying that Duke came home every night intoxicated, the liquor he drank inflaming his brutal spirits.

4—Duke would not allow her to see her friends.

5—Duke compelled her to associate on terms of social equality with Mary Smith at the residence in Somerville, N. J.

EDNA MAY STOPS FIRE PANIC AT COLONIAL.

Slight Blaze Under Stage Scares Audience, but Charming Actress Reassures Crowd.

During the closing half-hour of the last act of Edna May's comic opera production "The Catch of the Season" at the Colonial Theatre yesterday afternoon, fire was discovered directly under the stage among the great piles of stage material stored there. A slight puff of smoke came out into the auditorium through one of the doors used by the orchestra.

A few persons sitting in the orchestra stalls hurriedly left their seats and started toward the nearest exit. Others followed. Soon several score were filing out of the theatre, not panic stricken, but feeling for the time being better at ease in the open air. The majority returned when assured there was no danger.

Miss May Calms Crowd.

Miss Edna May, who was on the stage when the smoke came through, advanced to the footlights and said:

"Please do not get excited. Really, there is no danger."

She stepped back, and resumed her dialogue. A number of persons stopped to listen to the actress's appeal. Many of them sat down at once.

The firemen found a small fire in the storage or "property" room had been extinguished by a stage hand, and there was nothing to be done. There was no break in the performance, except that caused by the brief appeal of Miss May. The play continued to the end.

Chief Mullen's Statement.

Acting Chief of the Fire Department John A. Mullen said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter:

"At about 4.30 o'clock an alarm was rung in from the automatic fire alarm box at the Colonial Theatre. Engine 26, Chemical 2 and Ladder 17 responded, with myself and District Chief Sennott in charge.

"When we got to the theatre we found the hall full of smoke. There were people in the lobby and auditorium and those in the theatre were on their feet. The stage was full of smoke, but the show was still going on.

"We found that there had been a fire in a box of excelsior under the stage, and that the stage shifter had put it out with a hand extinguisher. There was no damage, but for a time there was considerable excitement."

Isaac B. Rich, manager of the theatre, in an interview with a reporter last night, said:

"There was not much of a fire and but little excitement this afternoon. The fire started under the stage where we keep our properties. Of course the smoke came up through the floor of the stage and scared the audience a little, but there was no panic. Some of those left their seats but the show kept right on, and in a few moments those that had left came back and sat through the show, which finished a few minutes after five o'clock."

MARKET MAD WITH PRICE MANIA

Speculative Fever Now Controls Stock Exchanges and Danger Signals Show.

Wall Street seems at last to have completed the construction of its Frankenstein. For a few weeks its assistance and inexhaustible resources will doubtless be enjoyed by its creator, but already an uneasiness and nervousness on the part of the builder give hint that the work has been too well done.

The most remarkable stock exchanging and speculative situation that the country has ever known has created this gigantic financial monster. But now there is some reason for the belief that instead of being a gentle, docile creature which will do its master's bidding and be content in the rendering of faithful service, it is likely to change into a terrible octopus whose far reaching arms will clutch and crush as many as it can of those who gave it being.

There are indications that the leading financial interests have gone too far in their uplifting of security values. The prices of stocks, week after week, have reached record-breaking levels, and the week just past brought no exception to the rule of the preceding periods. New high records cannot be reached every week for ever.

Goldfield

Reports from the mines of the Goldfield & Eastern Mines Company show a steady increase in the value of the ore now being taken from the new lead.

The mine superintendent states that with a mill capable of crushing two hundred tons of rock daily, and with other portions of the mine properly opened up, it would be but a short time when the stock of the company would be worth many times its par value.

A low estimate on the production of a mill averaging 100 tons of ore a day, at an average assay of 95% low grade and 5% high grade ore, would make:

95 tons Low Grade Ore at $12 per ton, $1,140.00
5 tons High Grade Ore at $75 per ton, 375.00
Making a Total Daily Production of $1,515.00
at a cost of
95 tons Low Grade Ore at $3.50 per ton, $332.50
5 tons High Grade Ore at $7.00 per ton, 35.00
Total Cost, $367.50

Or, a net profit each 24 hours of $1147.50, and for the year—300 days — $344,250.00, which would allow a payment of 20% dividend on the entire capital stock of the company.

Still further, should the Goldfield & Eastern Mines Company never be able to pay more than 6% on the par value of shares sold at the present price, it would mean 6 cents a year on every 5 cents invested, or in larger figures $120.00 on every $100.00 invested, thereby insuring an investment of considerable importance.

Goldfield & Eastern Mines Company stocks are now selling at

TREMENDOUS COPPER STRIKE

BIGGEST COPPER VEIN RECENTLY FOUND IN SOUTHWEST.

Discovered in Mocking Bird Mine Owned by Dividend Mining & Milling Co.

7 PER CENT 5-YEAR GOLD BONDS INCREASE IN VALUE AND DEMAND INCREASES RAPIDLY.

"The greatest strike of copper ore that has been made in the Southwest in years," is the report from the Mocking Bird Mine, one of a group of 53 properties owned by the DIVIDEND MINING AND MILLING COMPANY.

The first news of this tremendous strike was received in this city two weeks ago, and Friday Pres. J. M. Bryson returned from Estey City, New Mexico, where he went to investigate the startling telegram from his miners announcing the strike.

Pres. Bryson declares after a personal examination, that the copper ore is the richest he has ever seen, and that experienced mining men declare that the newly discovered vein is the largest and the richest of any recent discoveries in the Southwest.

Pres. J. M. Bryson of the Dividend Mining & Milling Co., who has just returned from a personal examination of the big Copper Vein.

"In the main tunnel of the Mocking Bird Mine the vein had averaged about six inches in width for 200 feet," said Pres. Bryson, "but the superintendent and his men, in working, went 24 feet further, where they found the defined walls, where the vein widened to seven (7) feet, and experienced miners declare that in sinking the next 100 feet that the vein will widen to 50 feet.

"This strike has caused the biggest sensation that the Southwest has had in years, and the superintendent was so overjoyed that he took the ore to El Paso and challenged the owners of any mine in Colorado, Arizona or Old Mexico to produce ore as rich as that taken from the mines of the DIVIDEND MINING AND MILLING COMPANY.

"One great feature of this strike is that it gives us a mine having sufficient iron for fluxing purposes, which most mines have to purchase. With copper at 16c a pound, the ore itself is worth $79.20 per ton, shipped in cars of 30 tons each."

Assay made by Custom Assay Office, El Paso, Tex., Jan. 9, 1906, by Critchett & Ferguson.

This certifies that the sample assayed for the DIVIDEND MINING & MILLING COMPANY of Estey City, New Mexico, from the 7 foot vein of the Mocking Bird mine assayed 27.10 per cent copper and 24 per cent iron. Figuring copper at 16c per pound the value per ton is $79.20. Less freight and mining charges $9.20, the net profit is $70.00, or for a car of 30 tons $2100.

7. 5-YEAR GOLD BEARING BONDS.

The news of this tremendous strike will certainly cause a ready market for the 5-year 7 per cent. gold-bearing bonds of the DIVIDEND MINING AND MILLING COMPANY.

The money for these bonds is to be used in mining the ore and in separating and marketing the same. This work will be begun as soon as the first allotment of $75,000 in bonds is sold. With every bond of $100, 100 shares of common stock of a par value of $100 will be given absolutely free. The COMPANY will withdraw the bonus of common stock with the bonds as soon as the $75,000 has been raised.

MILL AND SMELTER.

Back of the bonds is all of the property of this Company, including improvements, which have already cost over $100,000. The company has created a sinking fund, which will be held by the American Loan & Trust Co. of Boston, Trustees, into which 10 per cent. of the gross sales of copper will be placed to redeem this issue of bonds. This is a most extraordinary offer, and is one which conservative investors may place their money with perfect safety, knowing that they will receive a tremendous profit for their investment.

It should be remembered that as soon as the first $75,000 has been sold and paid for that the mills will be started, and that the work of separating the valuable metals from the ore will be begun.

Subscription to these bonds may be made immediately to the Company's office in Boston; reservations for a certain number of bonds may be made by letter, enclosing 20 per cent. of their par value, the balance to be paid upon delivery.

Do Not Miss This Opportunity.

It should be considered carefully that every dollar that the Company receives from the sale of the bonds is to be used in starting the property producing copper.

It should also be remembered that each purchaser of a $100 bond will receive his original investment of $100 at the end of 5 years, together with 7 per cent. interest on his money, and he will then own his original common stock or holdings in the Company which the Directors believe will be worth several times its par value.

Do Not Delay—Write at Once.

Every person who is looking for an opportunity to make money on an investment should write or call to the Company for further particulars. Address THE DIVIDEND MINING & MILLING CO., Suite 65, Journal Bldg., Boston, Mass.

Signs of Inevitable Crash as Result of Inflated Values Unheeded by Traders

MONEY

they are certainly doing so. But the fact that their intrinsic values justify high prices does not mean that the values are unlimited. The present level of stock prices seems to be a proper one. If legitimate exchange of stock would prevail, this level could be maintained with some degree of security to investors. But there is a speculative furore in Wall Street such as has never before existed. Speculators are simply maddened in the rush for fortune, and will give ear to no word other than that predicting still further advances.

The bull movement has already far exceeded any other ever inaugurated, and shows no sign of immediate cessation. When the exhaustion caused by it finally comes, there will be a collapse which will bring financial ruin to a great many. Stocks made net gains last week after it had seemed that they could advance no farther. They are likely to repeat this performance during the coming week, and perhaps the next and the next week. There is an end to all things, however, and the more conservative of the stock traders are already preparing for it. The note of warning has been sounded in several quarters, but it is doubtful if the sound is heeded until it has grown to be the roar of the collapse of the speculative structure.

There is no danger lying in wait for the actual holders of standard securities. The general prosperity of the country is too great for any decrease in actual values. The danger lies in fictitious values. The new year has seen nothing but a continuation of advancing prices but it will yet see something very different unless more normal conditions prevail. It is not necessary that stocks should advance all the time. Investments can be made at any price. Trading can be done with profit on smaller price-changes either way. Those who operate in Wall street should be satisfied to let well enough alone and begin now to use some degree of caution.

On Firm Ground Now.

This applies to the copper shares as well as the railroads and the so-called industrials in general. There is no cause for denying, however, that stocks at present are on an absolute value basis. Even the great financial minds are perplexed to account for the combination of speculative fever and irresistible strength of securities combined. The unbounded prosperity of the nation is the only explanation they can make. It has caused the most astounding investment seeking as well as speculative activity that has ever prevailed.

In this situation copper is playing a more and more important part. A great part of the public's money is going into copper. Copper mines are being found, bought and financed day after day. The Amalgamated, gigantic as it is, with its Anaconda, Boston & Montana, Butte & Boston and other great mines, has not control of more than a fraction of the world's copper output. Calumet & Hecla sells at over $700 per share, more than seventy times its par value. Copper has made more fortunes than any gold mine that ever was worked, not excepting the marvellous Comstock in the days of Mackay, Flood, Fair and O'Brien, the "Big Four," who made about $200,000,000 each, in four years.

Copper was not thought much of fifty years ago. Times have changed with customs. From all parts of the world comes demand for copper, and then for more copper. The increase in the use of electricity is the principal cause. As the age of invention advances, as master minds devise more and more complicated machines to be controlled by electricity, as public traffic is growing more and more a matter of electricity, and as even the private citizen is coming to use all the electricity he can pay for, the need for copper increases. The mints of the world, too, are consuming thousands of tons of copper annually.

These various demands are met, for the most part, by the copper mines of the United States. The bull market in copper, therefore, is easy to explain. The New England public seems to have gone copper-crazy, and seems determined to overreach itself. The high price for the metal and the great demands for it justify the higher prices for copper shares. But there is no class of stock so vacillating as that of the coppers. When a crash comes it will begin with the coppers.

Anaconda Booms Again.

Anaconda and Amalgamated were again the most prominent issues, last week, among the copper shares, although Parrot, Copper Range and North Butte were strong in Boston. Anaconda made a further net gain last week of $7 25 per share, closing yesterday at 273. The stock touched 2[illegible]5 during the day (it was the opening figure) and at that point was within three points of the record price. The stock is now in small floating supply, and there are even reports of a corner in it and hence the violent changes in price during one day's trading are easily accounted for. Amalgamated did not make a net gain for the week, but it held firmly the advance that it has made in the past four weeks, about which time it crossed par. The closing yesterday was at 113¼.

The growing ease in the money market is an important feature of the situation. Cash is returning from the West in large volume, and leading bankers are of the opinion that the tendency of rates will be towards a still lower level for several months. The recent decided change in the money market should be highly beneficial to the Boston and New York stock markets, in the matter of facilitating stock operations and of increasing activity. The New York bank statement yesterday was again favorable, showing that the surplus reserve increased $3,[illegible] to $16,764,575. Three weeks ago it was only about half a million dollars.

The stock exchanges both in New York and Boston yesterday suffered a temporary reaction due largely to profit taking, and the majority of issues lost from the high points they had reached. The trading in Reading common and Steel preferred was the feature aside from that in Anaconda and Amalgamated. The closing prices were irregular. Reading gained 3⅝ points to 157⅛, 92,600 shares changing hands. St. Paul gained 3½ to 190½. Steel preferred was up 1⅜ to 112⅝ and the common gained ⅛ to 46. Pennsylvania was active, gaining ⅝ to 146⅝. American Smelting was off ⅝ to 171⅝. Colorado Fuel & Iron lost ½ to 72¾. Erie ⅛ to [illegible]0⅛, Southern Pacific ⅛ to 70, Tennessee Coal & Iron 1 to 150, and Union Pacific lost ¼ to 158⅝. Total transactions amounted to 880,000 shares.

Boston Market Active.

The great activity and strength which marked dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange Friday were continued yesterday, but recessions came in the late trading, and prices showed a net loss as the result of the day's dealings. The failure of Greene Consolidated to respond to the general strength and activity of the copper shares puzzles the traders. The directors will meet on Tuesday and probably declare the regular dividend of 40 cents per share. The recent advance in American Agricultural Chemical common is believed to be the result of a New York movement. Boston interests are at a loss to explain the character and cause of the buying, unless it was by people identified with the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company.

Allouez lost ½ to 4[illegible] as the net result of the day's trading. Bingham lost ¼ to [illegible]⅜. Copper Range was off 1 to 85, Osceola ½ to 104, North Butte ⅞ to 88⅛, Parrot dropped 2 to 42½, Tamarack 4½ [illegible] 107½, United Copper gained ⅛ to 65, Utah lost 1 to 67⅞, and Greene Consolidated lost ⅝ to 29. The market had a firm tone, and the reaction was regarded as natural and temporary.

CHEAP MONEY ATTRACTING PUBLIC BUYING.

New York, Jan. 20.—All indications are that the call money rate will drift to very low levels in the next few days. The Bank of England is expected to reduce its discount rate on Thursday. Bankers in New York are prepared to see two per cent. money before the end of the week. Cash is flowing to the big banks at such a rapid rate that unusual means must be adopted to keep it employed. The cheap money is appealing to the public, and stocks do not look so high as they did when the rate was above 100 per cent.

The way the commission houses are doing business indicates a keen desire on the part of the public to get stocks. Many of the largest houses that have been doing a conservative business are planning for days in which the total transactions will reach the 4,000,000 share mark. New wires are being run, larger rooms are being provided for customers and easy chairs are being bought by the wagon load.

The campaign is assuming gigantic proportions, and, with a strong pool working in every stock on the list, sensational results must be certain. The only doubt is as to the ending. The public has been warned so much to limit its market commitments to what it is able to take care of in times of trouble, that it may do so, thus disappointing those who believe there has got to be a panic.

Copper and steel markets are good, and there is no reason to expect any change in direction of the wave of prosperity.

Douglas Copper, Amalgamated and-

Viewed in any light that may be shed on the question an investment in the First Mortgage 6% Convertible Gold Bonds of the Douglas Copper Company is pre-eminently safe and sane and sound.

Stripped even of the convertible provision which clothes them and enables them to be exchanged dollar for dollar for the company's stock at par during the full year 1907—stripped of that convertible option, the great value of which can only be measured by the yard-stick of the large dividends the stock will soon commence paying—stripped of all other considerations, the naked bonds alone compare favorably in every way with banking, railroad, municipal or government bonds, farm mortgages or any other so-called and supposedly "gilt-edged" securities.

The bonds alone, yielding as they do a fully guaranteed 6% income—netting at the present price of 123, less 2% for cash, a return of about 5%—stand for something safer and otherwise superior to the general run of securities battledored and shuttlecocked in and around the various stock exchanges of the land.

Take Douglas 6% interest-bearing bonds and consider them just as they are and entirely apart from the great potential value they stand for by their privilege of being converted into stock.

Compare them with Amalgamated, the great holding company that was organized six years or more ago, with the declared intention of controlling the copper production of the world. What has that ambitious, over-reaching corporation done for the men and women throughout the land who put their—in many instances—hard-earned and hard-saved dollars into the swollen and raging flood of its $155,000,000 capitalization?

At its organization it promised unwary investors permanent dividends of 8%, and this is the record of how it failed to make good:

1900	8%	1903	2%
1901	7½%	1904	2%
1902	2½%	1905	6%

Twenty-eight (28) per cent. for six years—an average of 4 2-3%. What about the men and women who banked on Amalgamated's assurance of regular 8% returns?

For weeks and weeks Amalgamated has been under the fierce spotlight that beats around the throne of speculation.

It has been the line against which bulls and bears struggled in the tug-of-war. It has been the storm centre into which roared winds of high velocity and from which went forth fierce, beating tempests and flood.

A gory battleground it was—a roped arena—an ensanguined stadium—where gleaming gladiators contended in a battle royal for the victory.

And from the amphitheatre a large part of the world looked down breathless and tense upon the contending factions.

Desperately the spectacular speculative game went on. Slowly and surely the price of the stock was forced up—up—up—to par and beyond it, and the promise was given and the prediction made that the price would be advanced to 125

Following the boosting of the price to around 112, came the annual dividend day of Amalgamated. It was a day of great expectations. Investors of Greater America turned their eyes toward it inquiringly.

"What will it pay? Will it be 2 or 4 or 6, or the promised permanent 8%? Will there be anything above that to help make up for the four long, lean, weary years of short dividends that have gone before?"

These were the questions that were anxiously asked, and they were answered in many different ways

Thursday the fatal day came. That mountainous mass of overcapitalization got busy. It knew that great things were expected of it, and there were groans and throes and all the agonies of parturition. The mountain labored, and at last it brought forth a 6% mouse.

It was a larger rodent than had been brought forth in the three preceding years, but it looks measly and mean beside the 8% fellows that were promised as the years sped by.

And so far from lost dividends on the promised basis of 8% ever being made up in the future, it takes not a prophet to tell that the day has passed forever when a dividend rate of 8% will be reached again on Amalgamated, to say nothing of it ever being established as a permanent figure for disappointed and buncoed holders of its stock to look forward to every year.

Just as futile as it is to ask the mill to grind with the water that has passed, is it to ask the manipulated corporations to pay the dividends they have passed in whole or in part.

At the prevailing quotation of 114 the stock of the wonderful Amalgamated copper mine holding company that commands such a large share of the world's attention pays the investor but little better than 5%, as based on the size of Thursday's dividends.

And, judging Amalgamated by its checkered record, I want to place myself on record as saying that the 6% interest-bearing bonds of the Douglas Copper Company at 123—with the convertible clause stricken out and entirely rendered void—still represent a safer and a better investment than the STOCK of Amalgamated with its full participation in the declared net profits of that great and glorious creation of latter day finance as it is financed.

Six per cent. is very properly looked upon as a huge return for the management of overcapitalized corporations to make to their stockholders. And as a result of the cutting of a melon of such immense proportions the day following was celebrated by the manipulators in boosting the stock to 114, or nearly three points

The reported declaration of Mr. Henry H. Rogers, the president, that the price of Amalgamated would be put at 125, and that the public could then unload on him if it wanted to, seems in a fair way of an early realization. When that time comes the STOCK of Amalgamated will be selling at above the price I am now quoting the CONVERTIBLE BONDS of the Douglas Copper Company at.

The difference in the value of the two in favor of the man or woman who invests in Douglas is so immeasurable as to make a comparison absurd.

March 1st the next semi-annual coupon of 3% is due and payable on Douglas bonds, 2 1-3% of that amount having at this time already accrued.

The Douglas Copper Company in extending the convertible provision of its bonds so as to cover the full year 1907 has acted with rare generosity towards the holders of its securities.

Under the extension of this privilege to cover another year, which was done voluntarily by the company and without outside influence or suggestion, the bondholders can realize interest upon four more of the coupons attached to their bonds—aggregating 12%—and still be in a position to convert them dollar for dollar into the valuable stock of the company at its par value, $5 a share.

While the holders of Douglas bonds are awaiting the completion of the Southern Pacific Railroad extension that will connect the mines with the outside world; while the smelter is being gotten in readiness for operation, from which date the large earnings of the company will begin, after which investors can the more intelligently and reliably determine for themselves the great dividend possibilities of the stock, while the company is getting ready to produce copper for the market from the vast and rich ore reserves it has been blocking out for the past three years; while this is being done the BONDS ALONE will be netting their holders as good or better returns than the STOCK of uncertain Amalgamated.

While the attractive value of Douglas bonds consists in the fact that they are convertible into stock which, it is believed, will eventually pay as much as 100% annually to investors, the security that stands behind them gives them the strength of Gibraltar

The bond issue consists of $600,000, the money from the sale of which is applied to the building of a custom smelter on the line of the Southern Pacific extension, four miles from the mines, to which a connecting spur will be run by the railroad company, the smelter to have the capacity of treating 1,000 tons of ore a day and converting it into copper for the market.

Every bond sold under this issue is certified to by a responsible trust company and cannot exceed the specified amount of the issue by a single dollar.

Every bond sold under this issue is secured as to principal and 6% interest by a first mortgage on the entire assets and earnings of the Douglas Copper Company, consisting of the following:

First—Ore-bearing lands in the original holdings with nearly a mile of mineral outcroppings and, on account of the well-known deep-seated nature of the deposits in that region, possibly capable of being worked to a mile in depth. So great is the abundance of its ore, lying as it does in what all copper authorities agree to be the richest copper mineralized section of the globe, experts say that the mines can be successfully worked for centuries to come.

Second—Over 125,000 tons of ore blocked out and ready for the smelter. This available ore reserve, calculated on the low basis of $32 a ton, has a value of $4,000,000, or of itself alone OVER SIX TIMES THE VALUE OF THE BOND ISSUE.

Third—Town site, buildings, extensive and expensive mining machinery, plans, surface improvements now on the property, worth many thousands of dollars.

Fourth—A large tract embracing approximately 20,000 acres of rich agricultural and timber lands, lying adjacent to the mining property.

Fifth—An extensive tract of undeveloped anthracite coal lands known to be of exceedingly great value.

Sixth—All additional properties that have been acquired or may hereafter be acquired by the company, many of which are immensely rich in mineral values and by so much add to the wealth and strengthen the position of the company.

The price of the bonds at 123, less 2% for cash, when the same shall have been converted into stock, gives the stock to the investor at a cost of $6.02 3-5 a share.

Never at any period in its history has the stock of the Douglas Copper Company sold at less than its par value. One hundred cents on the dollar it has at all times and under all circumstances commanded

And while I am selling the convertible bonds at a price which makes the stock cost investors only $6.02 3-5 a share, the self-same stock has been selling for many weeks on the New York curb market for around $6.50 to $7.50 a share.

Yesterday's quotations in New York and Boston papers show it to be selling at $7.00 a share—an advance of over 12% over the price I sell the stock at through the convertible feature of the bonds.

Were I influenced in any way by the course of the stock market I would today be selling Douglas bonds at from 130 to 150 instead of at 123, since the equivalent of a $100 bond, as represented in 20 shares of stock, are selling on the New York curb at from $130 to $150 and have recently been listed on the London Exchange and are selling at the same figures to English and European investors.

From the data I have on hand I am abundantly justified in announcing as my earnest and steadfast conviction that Douglas stock will continue its upward trend—will go to $8, $9, $10 and $12 a share, and by the expiration of the convertible period of the bonds will be selling actively on the Boston, New York and London markets at from $15 to $20 a share.

It has been very gratifying to me to observe that there has been no disposition whatever on the part of Douglas bondholders to convert their bonds into stock for the purpose of selling it and taking, as they can do, from 20 to 40% in profits out of the market.

That shows what a conservative class of investors now hold Douglas bonds—investors and not speculators. Twenty to 40% profit, and that in the short period of eight months since I undertook the flotation of the Douglas bond issue, offers a great temptation to speculation. It speaks volumes for their conservatism that they have withstood it and clung to their possessions.

And that reminds me of a good joke on himself that a gentleman who called to see me at my office this week favored me with.

He bought 50 shares of Calumet and Hecla at $6 a share. When the price rose to $9 he chuckled to himself and said he would turn his money over and take the profit that was offered him

"The profit was sufficient," said he, "to give me an outing, so I went off on a protracted hunting trip into the Maine woods.

"When I got back Calumet and Hecla was soaring like a kite at $232 a share. I had jumped over the dashboard and now I couldn't catch on to the tail end of the band wagon, and I have not been able to catch up yet."

No wonder that he repeats, "It might have been." For the day came when his original investment of $300 was worth the small fortune of $45,000, as the stock which had at one time, in some instances, sold as low at a dollar a share, made the grand ascent to $900 a share, having paid 200% in dividends last year and having paid as high as 400%.

History has a way of repeating itself. The old saying holds good that there are as good fish in the sea as have ever been caught out of it.

No man who values his reputation for intelligent prophecy and for sane and truthful utterance would have the hardihood to risk it on the assertion that the record of Calumet and Hecla, with its ninety-odd millions of dollars in dividends to its credit, would ever again be equaled. And yet, after all, why not?

The ore values of Douglas have by actual smelter reports been shown to be NINE times those of Calumet and Hecla, the great Michigan mine carrying NO gold and silver, while Douglas is showing marked manifestations of the more precious metals, especially gold

Again, the Douglas Copper Company, being able to employ skilled Mexican miners at 50 and 60 cents a day, while Calumet and Hecla must pay its miners to do the same work $3 50 a day upwards, its cost of operation will probably not run more than ONE-FIFTH or ONE-FOURTH of that of the Michigan mine.

The ores of the Douglas Copper Company run from $25 to $660 a ton, the higher value being due to extensive high-grade gold veins disclosed in the 500 and 600-foot levels. It has made right along far more valuable strikes than the unconfirmed wonderful strikes of Anaconda, on the strength of which the latter set the copper world on fire and boosted its stock 400% on a single run of the market.

The foundation of the company's great 1,000-ton smelter has been laid, this being one of the heaviest items of the cost of construction. The location of the smelter is on the line of the Cananea, Yaqui River and Pacific Railroad, which is being extended from Guaymas on the Gulf of California, 125 miles away, past the Douglas mines, by the Southern Pacific

The railroad has completed the work of construction half way between Guaymas and the Douglas station, where its smelter location is. It is pushing the work at the rate of a kilometer (three-fifths of a mile) a day. It is under contract with heavy forfeiture to reach the Douglas station by July 1st, but at the present rate will be there by the middle or latter part of May.

When the road reaches the Douglas station the heavy equipment for the smelter, which has been ordered, will be shipped in and installed without delay. A connecting spur will be run by the road out to the mines, and by the early fall it is thought that the company should be operating the first unit of its smelter, and with the production of copper begin the payment of dividends.

There are two classes of investors. One class invests for the best income it can secure consistent with the safety of its invested principal. The other class invests for speculative purposes. One buys securities that were made to keep, to keep. The other buys securities that were made to sell, to sell, in the hope of taking a profit while the other fellow is not looking. The men and women who have bought the bonds of the Douglas Copper Company help compose the first class. They have bought those convertible bonds with the purpose of exchanging them in due season for the company's stock, which they will have and hold and cherish and bequeath as a heritage of bounty and love to their children and their children's children to the third and fourth generation.

—C. F. KING.

President and Mining Engineer Theodore Douglas and Consulting Engineer Gustave M. Gouyard have agreed on the mine paying dividends as based on the production represented in the different units of the smelter, as they are completed, as follows:

250 tons daily	25%
1000 tons daily	100%

As these figures were based on ore having a value of about $25 a ton as found in the upper levels, which average has since been doubled, trebled and multiplied even more as the lower levels have been reached, it would appear that the estimates of these two mining engineers, both of international reputation, are well within bounds.

The Douglas Copper Company mines are located at Cocorit, Sonora, Mexico. In the state of Sonora, 200 miles north, is the Greene Consolidated group, among the world's largest copper producers and perhaps destined to take second, if not first, place

The Douglas Copper Company, realizing its great opportunity and stimulated by the fact that the Southern Pacific and Harriman interests are getting control of valuable mines and lands in that section, along the route of its road, by purchase and long options, is buying up valuable mining properties all around it, while they may still be had cheap. These become the common property of its shareholders.

The extension of this settled policy may result in the years that are to come in the state of Sonora having another and a sister group of mines which will rival the great Greene Consolidated.

The near approach of the semi-annual interest day on March 1st, when 3% will be due and payable on the bond coupons, makes it advisable to make an immediate investment in these bonds.

An immediate investment is advisable because the price of 123 flat represents the lowest quotation at which Douglas bonds will ever be obtainable

An immediate investment is advisable because Douglas bonds stand for stable and steadily appreciating values and because the present price of 123 will not prevail long, the quotation being subject to a material advance at any day

The bonds are in denominations of $100, $500 and $1 000 each, with coupons attached, making them interest-bearing at the rate of 6% annually, payable March 1st and September 1st. They are convertible at the option of the holder at any time during the full year 1907 into stock of the Douglas Copper Company at par, $5 per share, for the full face value of the bonds, each $100 bond being convertible into 20 shares stock, each $500 bond into 100 shares stock and each $1,000 bond into 200 shores stock. At the present quotation a $100 bond costs $123, a $500 bond $615 and a $1,000 bond $1,230. Terms of sale are as follows: 25% of amount of subscription with order, 25% in 30 days thereafter, 25% 60 days thereafter and final payment, 25%, 90 days thereafter. Where full payment is made with order, 2% may be deducted, making the net cost of each $100 bond $120 54, each $500 bond $602.70 and each $1,000 bond $1,205.40.

Send me your securities having a market value, which may be yielding but little or no return. I will sell them at the present highly inflated prices without making any charge for so doing and convert the proceeds into Douglas bonds, which represent an investment without a superior in this country.

Make all checks payable to my order, and address all communications to me personally.

AVALANCHE OF BILLS SENT TO BAY STATE LEGISLATURE

Objects of Some of the 1000 Bills Before the Legislature:

Establishment of a city college for the higher industrial training of the youth of Boston.

Establishment of juvenile court in Boston, where minors shall not be compelled to associate with hardened criminals.

To prevent the laying of railroad tracks at grade on Lewis and Webster streets, East Boston. (Aimed at the Dock Trust.)

Amendment to the liquor law allowing hotels within 400 feet of a public schoolhouse to sell intoxicating liquors.

Establishment of a system of pensions for employes of Boston who have served twenty consecutive years.

Construction of a boulevard along the Charles River, and behind the residences on Beacon street which now back upon the river.

In the Senate and House yesterday 1 017 bills for new legislation were filed.

All records for previous years were smashed. In the Senate there were 222 petitions for new legislation, and in the House there were 7[illegible]. The bills cover practically everything from the prevention of club barbers shaving after one o'clock on Sunday to the election of United States senators by popular vote.

In this mass of matter before the Legislature there are many important matters. Of vital interest to Boston is a petition of the School [illegible] for the establishment of an industrial college in Boston where the youth of the city may be given industrial education free of all cost.

Another petition [illegible] signed by the School [illegible] is for the establishment of a [illegible] where minors who are [illegible] may be [illegible] that their parents [illegible] possible. The object of [illegible] prevent the con[illegible] association in the [illegible] defenders.

In view [illegible] for revision of the liquor laws [illegible] presented by Representative [illegible] for an amendment [illegible] that premises licensed [illegible] may go [illegible] within 400 feet of [illegible] of peculiar interest [illegible] the Hotel Touraine [illegible] and several saloons which were [illegible] a short time ago [illegible].

Six Bills on Liquor Laws.

There are six [illegible] affecting the liquor laws now [illegible] Legislature. Some of these were filed yesterday. They call for modification of the screen law, modification of [illegible] semicolon law to allow [illegible] to sell liquors after 11 o'clock [illegible] amendment to [illegible] ineffectual the protest of an [illegible] licensed innholder has [illegible] two years in succession in one locality and several other bills which affect in [illegible] ways the liquor situation.

A bill aimed at the Dock Trust has been presented by Representative Douglas of East Boston. [illegible] is to prevent the laying of railway tracks at grade in Lewis and Webster streets, East Boston, where the National Dock Trust has been granted a franchise by the Boston Board of Aldermen. Some time ago allegations of graft in the Board of Aldermen over the granting of the franchise caused an investigation by the Grand Jury of Suffolk County, and resulted in one of the biggest scandals that has aroused the people of Boston in many years.

A petition, signed by Senator John T. Schofield, Representative James H. Mellen, of Worcester, and Representative M. H. McEttrick, of Boston, asks that the Committee on Education be directed to confer with the State Board of Education for the purpose of formulating a plan for the unifying and completion of our common school system by the founding of a college or university so that our educational system may meet the needs of the youths of both sexes, and enable the humblest to acquire an education that will fit them, as well as possible, for the vocation in life they may choose.

Mayor Wants Boulevard.

Mayor Fitzgerald introduced a bill calling for the construction of a boulevard along the Charles River, in line with a recommendation made by him last week.

The Mayor has been making a quiet investigation relative to the status of the property owners to be affected by the proposed boulevard. He found that of the 18[illegible] property owners whose houses front on Beacon street and back upon the Charles River, eighty-three are non-residents, one lot is owned by the University Club, one by a church and the remaining 104 are owned by persons who pay taxes in Boston.

The Mayor and school committee's petition for a juvenile court calls for the establishment of a court where "minors charged with the commission of some offence against the laws of the Commonwealth or the ordinances of the city of Boston shall be treated, not as criminals, but as misdirected and misguided persons, more in need of all encouragement and assistance than of punishment, and that their treatment by the court should approximate as nearly as practicable that which they should receive from their parents."

Affecting Life Insurance.

Representative Davenport of Malden filed a petition prohibiting life insurance companies from allowing expenses of management to exceed the amount of the premiums received during the year. The bill also provides that no insurance company doing business shall allow its investment expenses to exceed one fourth of one per cent of its assets. The Insurance Commissioner is given authority to examine all companies regarding their expenses of management and investment and has the power to revoke charters if he finds evidence warranting such action.

Another bill was filed requiring insurance companies to file a detailed report of their affairs, so that the public may have full knowledge of the annual profit and loss of each company. The report must be sworn to and filed with the insurance commissioners by April 1. Companies failing to comply with the law shall lose their right to transact business.

Another bill provides that the funds of an insurance company shall be invested only in securities in which the laws of this Commonwealth allow savings banks to invest.

On Practice of Medicine.

Dr. Henry E. Spaulding petitions for more stringent laws governing the practice of medicine and asks that the law be amended so as to permit only those who have received diplomas from medical colleges, approved by the Board of Registration, to be licensed to practice medicine in this State.

James M. Curley petitions for legislation authorizing the city of Boston to hire not more than 100 beds in private hospitals at $5 a week for the use of needy tuberculosis patients who are residents of the city.

Representative McEttrick introduced a bill aimed to prevent the illegal employment of children, a matter touched upon by Governor Guild in his inaugural message. The petition asks that truant officers shall report illegal employment of children to the District Attorney for criminal action, and gives the truant officers the power immediately to take from work any child so employed. Parents who knowingly permit children to be employed shall be punished by a fine.

George J. Raymond of Boston and Representative James H. Mellen of Worcester petition for a law compelling every company furnishing electricity for light and power to set a price not exceeding the cost of production, plus ten per cent.

SEEKS CONTROL OF BOSTON STREETS BY STATE.

Representative Edwin T. McKnight, Republican, of Ward 21, Boston, yesterday introduced into the State House of Representatives a strictly Republican party bill which, if passed, will abolish the present offices in the City of Boston of Superintendent of Streets and Street Commissioners and concentrate their powers in a Board of Public Works whose members are to be appointed by the Governor and approved by his council. In explanation of his measure, Representative McKnight said last night to a reporter of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN:

"The present financial condition of the City of Boston and the wastefulness and extravagant expenditures of the public money is due [illegible] to the incompetent politicians who have been appointed to these offices."

According to the terms of the McKnight bill, which has been termed by the "Home Rule" element in Boston politics, "the Republican reply to the citizens as a result of the recent municipal election," the Governor shall, on July 1, 1906, appoint the three members of the new Board of Public Works for the City of Boston.

One of the members is to be appointed for a term of three years, the second for two years, and the third for one year. Thereafter, the term is to be three years.

The Governor shall designate who shall be chairman of the board, and he shall receive a salary of $5,000, the other two members each receiving $3,000 annually.

THREE MEN BREAK OUT OF JAIL, ESCAPE.

Dover, N. H., Jan. 20.—Sawing away the iron bars of their cells and scaling an eighteen-foot wall, three prisoners broke from the jail here to-night and made good their escape. Word was immediately sent to the Boston police, where it is thought the men will go, and to all other cities and towns in this section of New England.

The men are John Rogers, twenty-six years old; William Harmio, twenty-five, and [illegible] Zelie, twenty-two. They were held for the February term of the [illegible] court on charges of burglary. [illegible] George W. Parker discovered their escape a short time afterward and immediately sent out searching parties. Several posses have been organized and are scouring the woods and farm houses. The men have neither hats nor coats to protect them from the cold.

Two of the escaped prisoners called at the home of William E. Whitley on Paine street a short time after their escape, and asked for coats and hats. Whitley recognized them as prisoners, and started to notify the authorities, but the men became suspicious of him and disappeared into the woods.

AMUSEMENTS.

SHE'S ONE OF THE BEARERS OF "GOOD NEWS"

SAND

Is the stuff to have handy when you hit a slippery rail. Take care, however, that it doesn't get into your bearings. If it does it will put crimps in your gear and take the polish off your shafting. We haven't struck any very long stretch of bad going of late, but we are never shy a supply of non-[illegible] in case the wheels start to slide without [illegible] progress. If anybody happens to oil a bit of our track, either on trouble bent or through lack of care, they'll discover that we won't tarry long on their account. You'll say, "I guess that is going some" if you snap your watch on the show.

AT THE OLD

HOWARD

THIS WEEK

"The Monarch of Monologists,"

JAMES THORNTON

Yes, "Jim" is to be with us once more, after an absence of several seasons. My, but won't you be glad to see and hear the man who wrote "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and other famous ballads. He will sing a couple of new songs that are sure to rank with his greatest successes, and will also tell some stories in his inimitable way. Those who know say he is doing the best and most entertaining act of his career.

THREE SISTERS

Herzog Camaras

We are not depending on dope when we tout this to you as superior to any acrobatic act ever presented by women. A routine of phenomenal feats of strength, skill and daring performed by a trio of pretty, graceful and shapely girls. A turn that puts other female physical culture specialists on the [illegible] list.

Fiske and McDonough

You have seen many odd acts at the Howard, but we'll stake our last guarantee that you've never seen one that [illegible] this any dust. O. T. Fiske and Nellie McDonough are two corking good performers, and their novel bit of comedy sketching, "Good News," is worthy of them.

Carlin and Otto

A pair of Dutch comedians and dancers who can [illegible]. You can play them to win, [illegible] show and can cop the coin all three ways. [illegible] the leaders in their line on the variety stage to-day.

Hayman and Franklin

A good thing we're pleased to have on the list, [illegible] comedian and parodist, [illegible] "The Matrimonial Agency," [illegible] a certain sure harbinger of happiness. [illegible] new parodies.

MUSICAL SIMPSONS

Here's a harmonic novelty that we're banking heavy on to make one of the hits of a bill that should [illegible]. It is possible you may think you have heard xylophones and drums played before, but when you hear the Simpsons you will realize for the first time the possibilities of those instruments.

DANCING MITCHELLS

"Terpsichorean marvels" is a title that is theirs by right. [illegible] a style that suits the Howard's patrons [illegible] a little fussy about dancing [illegible]. They are acrobats as well as dancers and [illegible] twists and twirls that will make your eyes bulge a bit.

EVELYN FONNER

One of last season's favorites whom you will be happy to welcome back. She's a wonder as a winner as smooth as they make 'em.

ORVILLE PITCHER

His burnt cork specialty is full of good things, including a stump speech that sparkles with the brightest wit, and some selections on the "[illegible]."

McDADE and WELCOME

When it comes to mixing pedalisms, vocalisms and witticisms they are the boys who can make all the other mergers hump to hold the pace they set.

THE HEALYS

Their mixture of song and dance is IT. They'll never be caught with any green goods, for they handle nothing but the real stuff.

BENDERINO

A curious contortionist in a compound of curves. He can equal any eel in limberness.

The Howardscope

Will show a series of the latest motion pictures, including "The Boarding School Girls at Coney Island," a great comedy film.

THE BURLESQUE

We haven't steered you wrong about our bunch of beauties as yet, have we? They have always made good, and more, haven't they? The whole town is on the trot after them now and the pace seems likely to increase to a gallop at any time. They have a new burletta with which to get you going and coming this week, called

A FULL HAND

It would take a book to tell you about it from cocktails to cordials, so you'll have to play the [illegible] until your chance comes [illegible] for the front row and [illegible] proposition to pick [illegible] the bevy of beauties, [illegible] it is the fairest and [illegible] shapely bunch of [illegible] ever seen on the Old Howard stage. A pretty strong statement, but the girls will back it up.

This Sale Will Continue Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of This Week Big Savings Are Certain

We Announce Our First Before Stock-Taking Sale as the Greatest Bargain Event of the Year

IT IS a colossal exposition of seasonable merchandise of the most reliable kind at savings that have no precedent in New England. Extraordinary price-reductions have been made on absolutely every article advertised, and it is indisputable that goods have been marked from 25 to 50 per cent. lower than the figures quoted during the week past.

We request close study of the hundreds of bargains described, feeling sure that convincing evidence is given of our desire to bring all stocks down to the minimum, previous to counting them up. All small lots have been marked at ridiculously low prices. All goods that have moved slow because of backwardness of the season have been drastically reduced.

"SEPARATION FALSE"-MRS. DEPEW.

Little Likelihood of Senator's Return to Congress This Session.

ESTRANGEMENT RUMOR SURPRISE TO FRIENDS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Jan. 20.—Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, who is stopping at the Grand Hotel, Cannes, wires the following to the AMERICAN bureau here:

"The report from New York of my separation from Senator Depew is baseless and false. I authorize you to kindly deny it positively."

This is the first intimation of any rumor of a reported estrangement, although Mrs. Depew has been abroad for a considerable time.

New York, Jan. 20.—It is not probable that Senator Depew will be seen in his seat in the Senate chamber again this session. This, notwithstanding the telegram sent him by Senator Platt, and a telegram which is alleged by the friends of the junior Senator was sent simply to call attention to the condition of his confrere.

"It is very essential that you should be here on Monday morning in the Senate" was the message received and read by Senator Depew in one of his lucid moments, and he answered it, saying he would be on hand.

It is announced at his home No. 24 W. Fifty Fourth street that it was his intention to start for Washington Monday. Should he attempt to go to the Senate he will be accompanied by two physicians who will superintend his removal as soon as his unfitness to remain has been demonstrated.

It is even believed that his physicians will not permit him to make the attempt to appear on the floor of the Senate.

Dread of Sick Man.

As a matter of fact the ordeal of once more appearing among his colleagues after the disclosures made during the insurance investigation is one dreaded, even feared by the sick man.

Senator Depew did actually start for the Senate a week ago while in Washington. It was Monday morning and he had assured his niece, Miss Paulding, and his physician that he wanted to go. His coachman was instructed to drive so as to arrive there promptly at noon, the hour when the Senate is called to order, but as the carriage was driven up to the east entrance, the Senator called out weakly from within:

"Drive out through the Mall and then through the parks for an hour or so. Then he reached home completely prostrated.

Hurt by Petition.

Senator Depew is said to be deeply hurt at the statement that the nephew of Secretary of War Taft, now in Yale, had circulated a petition that he be dropped as a fellow of the Yale University Corporation. Nothing will be said at the home of the Senator, but an old friend, who is thoroughly familiar with the affairs of the sick man, had this to say concerning the matter:

"No petition in a matter of this sort is necessary. Senator Depew's term expires next April, and he has already let it be understood that he will not expect to be re-elected. Before next April he will signify this fact so clearly as to leave no doubt of his intention.

"Secretary Taft has two nephews in Yale, W. S. Taft, a senior, and Howard Taft, a sophomore. Both are sons of Henry Walter Taft, a brother of the Secretary. I cannot believe that either has taken any such action as that indicated.

It is now known that Senator Depew is suffering from attacks of aphasia, which recur so frequently as to make it inadvisable to leave him to himself for even a few moments.

At the home of the Senator, however, "Lester," the son, said there was absolutely no truth in the statement that his father was suffering from aphasia.

"Father has been under the care of a doctor for a cold. It is not an alarming ailment and father will be well enough by Monday to return to Washington."

HETTY GREEN DUPE OF 'QUEER' COIN MAN COULDN'T PAY FARE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Jan. 20.—Tell it softly. Hetty Green, richest woman in America, shrewdest feminine financier in the world, accustomed to handling all kinds of money during her more than half-century of life, has had a counterfeit coin passed on her.

The amazing story came out to-day in the office of the public service corporation in Hoboken when Mrs. Green paid the transportation company five cents on account of a fare for which conductor No. 97, Charles Krell, trusted the wealthy woman last Thursday.

When the said Mrs. Green boarded a car near her place of residence at No. 1208 Washington street, she was asked for her fare, five cents. She handed a half-dollar coin to the conductor.

"Sorry, madam, but I can't take that. It's not good."

Mrs. Green then searched in her pocket book, but found she had no more money.

"I guess you can trust me for a ride to the ferry," she said. "You can ask the postman sitting opposite who I am. He will tell you my credit is good."

The letter carrier vouched for Mrs. Green, and Conductor Krell rang up the fare, paying the nickel out of his own pocket.

BACCARAT A GAME OF SKILL

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Ghent, Jan. 20.—The Court of Appeals has decided that baccarat, played with one board, is a game of skill, not chance. The judgment was rendered in the case against M. Marquet, lessee of the Kursaal, at Ostend, who was charged with an infringement of the gambling laws.

GIRL CRUSHED BY RUNAWAY HORSE ON COLUMBUS AVE.

GIRL HURLED TO STREET BY MAD RUNAWAY.

Caught in Path of Frenzied Animal That Races Away After Fright by Passing Trolley—Driver Also Thrown Knocked down on Columbus avenue by a runaway horse, Marion Clarke, of Portland, Me., aged twenty three, is lying seriously injured at the home of friends she was visiting at No. 212 Columbus avenue.

The accident occurred at 8.30 o'clock last night. Miss Clarke was crossing West Newton street and did not see the runaway until too late to escape. She managed to throw herself out of the way of the horse's hoofs, but was struck by a wheel of the carriage, and thrown heavily to the street.

Luckily she fell clear of the wheels, but she was painfully injured and suffered a severe shock. She was carried to a nearby drug store and later to the home of her friends.

The horse and carriage belonged to Warren Dodge of Roxbury. The horse became frightened at an electric car on Massachusetts avenue, near Falmouth street. Mr. Dodge was thrown out but not severely hurt. The horse rushed down Falmouth street to Norway, through Norway to Huntington avenue, across to West Newton street and then to Columbus avenue. He ran nearly a mile before being captured on Columbus avenue by Fred H. Lyons of Somerville, who spoiled a suit of clothes, overcoat and hat in stopping him.

New York, Jan. 20.—Announcement was made to-day of the formation of a company to be known as the Friede Globe Tower Company, which has for its purpose the erection at Coney Island, on Surf avenue, of a tower 700 feet in height and 300 feet in diameter.

This colossal structure will be designed and constructed to contain a pedestal roof garden to be placed 150 feet above the ground, including a restaurant, theatre and roller skating rink, an aerial hippodrome 250 feet above the ground, a [illegible] cafe and dance hall 300 feet above the ground, a palm garden 400 feet up in the air, and an observatory platform at 500 feet, while higher will be housed a branch of the United States Government weather bureau, including the largest revolving searchlight in the world. It is estimated that more than 7,000 tons of steel will be used in the structure, which is to be fireproof. The cost is placed at $973,500.

DIDN'T KNOW GUN WAS LOADED, KILLED WIFE

Charge Nearly Blows Woman's Head to Pieces.—Man Arrested.

Gloversville, N. Y., Jan. 20.—John Bila, a resident of Johnstown, N. Y., shot and instantly killed his wife with a shotgun at their home in that city to-day. It is understood Bila and his wife were joking about the former's returning from hunting without any game after two trips, and Bila, thinking the gun was empty, levelled it at his wife's head and pulled the trigger, which exploded a shell and the charge nearly blew the woman's head to pieces. He declares that the affair was purely accidental, as he did not know the gun was loaded.

Bila was placed under arrest, charged with murder.

"North, East, South and West, there is but one place in our country to-day, that is the heart of America. There was time when reforms sprang up in different sections to die out. The vampires of graft would be driven away to return again. The vision is now brighter. Reform promises to become universal. The question being asked is, will it last? The answer is, 'Yes, it will.'"—Governor Folk at Merchants' Association Banquet.

BUSINESS MEN'S DINNER BEST IN HISTORY

Nearly 400 Association Members Listen to Speeches on Burning Issues.

GOVERNOR AND MAYOR AMONG THE SPEAKERS

Best of City's Mercantile Life Represented at Brilliant Gathering.

At the greatest annual banquet in the history of the Boston Merchants' Association in the Hotel Somerset last night a gathering of four hundred of Greater Boston's leading business men listened to speeches of absorbing interest on one of the burning issues of today—the subject of political reform, delivered by two of its most distinguished exponents, Governor Joseph Wingate Folk of Missouri and Mayor John G. Weaver of Philadelphia.

The gathering, in its speakers invited guests and association members, was representative of Boston's best business life.

Other Noted Speakers.

The speakers, in addition to Governor Folk and Mayor Weaver, were the Hon. William T. Tilden of Philadelphia, who was Mayor Weaver's right hand man in his reform campaign; Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., and Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

The invited guests were George H. Lyman, Collector of the Port of Boston, Postmaster George A. Hibbard, President William F. Dana of the State Senate; Speaker John N. Cole of the House; Rear Admiral Albert S. Snow, Commandant Charlestown Navy Yard, Colonel William S. Stanton of the United States Engineering Corps, President John F. Crocker of Boston Chamber of Commerce, President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University and Ex-Postmaster-General Thomas L. James. President Amory A. Lawrence of the Boston Merchants' Association presided.

Score of Women.

Fully a score of women were seated in the gallery during the dinner, and the speech making that followed. Frequently they joined with the diners in applauding the sentiments, especially when Mr. Tilden told of the part taken by the women of Philadelphia in the fight against the corrupt political machine in that city, and declared:

"A woman's husband will be just as good as his wife demands him to be. If she is determined, her husband will be a good citizen."

One of the greatest outbursts of applause of the evening, in which the women also joined, occurred when Mr. Tilden said:

"I don't know whether Boston needs redeeming, but after hearing Mayor Fitzgerald, I am convinced the dawn in Boston has come. If he lives up to that speech as John Weaver has lived up to his, then Boston will be redeemed."

Regret was felt at the absence of Charles J. Bonaparte, Secretary of the Navy, who had accepted an invitation to speak at the banquet but was prevented by the illness of Mrs. Bonaparte.

Previous to the banquet there was a reception at 5.30 o'clock in the main parlors of the Somerset. Those on the receiving line in order were: President Amory Lawrence, Governor Guild, Governor Folk, Mayor Weaver, Mr. Tilden and Mayor Fitzgerald.

President Lawrence, escorting Governor Folk, headed the line to the banquet hall.

Decorated in Evergreen.

The banquet hall was decorated mainly in evergreen. Four immense spheres of evergreen, studded with lights in the shape of flowers, were suspended from the ceiling. A bank of palms was in the rear were on every table.

President Lawrence sat at the centre of the speakers' table, with Governor Folk on his right, Mayor Waver on his left and the other speakers and invited guests and several distinguished citizens occupying the remainder of the forty seats.

The banquet numbered fourteen courses of the speakers' table. Floral centerpieces With the coffee and cigars President Lawrence congratulated New England and Boston on the past year of prosperity. He then led up to the subject of the evening with the words:

"But, as has been verified in the experience of men since the world began, uninterrupted prosperity has too often brought in its train extravagance, luxurious living and a lowering of ethical standards, with consequent demoralization.

Governor Guild said:

"I congratulate you on the success of this sterling institution. It is a privilege to give to your distinguished guests, especially to the Governor of Missouri and to the Mayor of Philadelphia, more than the greeting, the high [illegible] of Massachusetts. The time to [illegible] belongs not to us of Massachusetts but to you. I might say with greater measure of truth, all time belongs to you. Governors and Mayors of States and cities pass, and shall pass and the memory of their titles may vanish as last year's snows, but long as virtue and conscience control the human hearts, men shall still turn to history for the inspiration of the record of achievement for the righteousness that exalteth a nation there eternally written about the names Joseph Folk, John Weaver."

Mayor Fitzgerald, introduced on behalf of the city, said in part:

Mayor Fitzgerald's Address.

Mayor Fitzgerald's address was in part as follows:

"About a year ago I had the honor of attending an exercise which was not only remarkably felicitous on its personal side, but unique in its significance. It was the conferring of a gold medal, previously awarded only to educators and professional men, by a university of the Middle West, upon a public-spirited and broad-minded merchant of Boston, a member of your association. I felt, as did others who were present, that this recognition, in the person of Mr. Fitzpatrick, of commerce as a calling not inferior in dignity and importance to the learned professions, furnished a precedent which other institutions might imitate with advantage. And a few months later one of our own splendid institutions of learning, Tufts College, awarded degrees to two other representative Boston merchants in the persons of Mr. A. Shuman and Mr. John Shepard.

Nowadays we hear much of the connection between business and politics. But we know that, if there are illicit relations and secret understandings which will not bear the light, there is also a legitimate interdependence between the two. This more honorable relation is recognized in the presence here this evening of the Governor of Missouri and the Mayor of Philadelphia, one a Democrat, the other a Republican, but each a victorious rebel against [illegible] rule and a champion of honest government.

"Governor Folk and Mayor Weaver, in your battle for a higher and nobler civic ideal I pledge the unswerving loyalty and constant sympathy of the people of Boston, upon whose streets was spilt the first blood of the Revolution and who from those first days down to the present have insisted upon the highest standard in their public service, a city whose whole history is redolent with the story of noble purpose, splendid [illegible] unsullied honor."

Folk Denounces Grafters.

Governor Folk, in his introductory remarks, dwelt on the moral awakening now sweeping the country, and urged the importance of the average, good citizen taking part in civic and national reform. He said in part:

"The greatest obstacle that has been in the way of representative government, the greatest hindrance in the progress of righteousness, has been the inactivity of the average good citizen. When these disregard their obligations to their city and State they leave control to undesirable elements. These demand of those elected that they be served even if the public interests suffer. If an official refuses to prostitute his trust he is put under the ban of their disapproval and forever after that disbarred from holding public office, that is, if these elements have their way about it, and they generally do; but once in a while the whirlwind of public indignation sweeps them aside for a time.

"The strength of the lawless element may be great, but it is as nothing when it comes in contact with the public conscience thoroughly aroused.

St. Louis showed this in a most emphatic way when the corruptionists there

I would rather have the lawless openly against me than on my side in any political fight—I would rather have their enmity than their good will.

A new standard has been established; new, yet old—just honesty, that's all.

The people do not oppose wealth; wealth in itself is a blessing; but they do object to the abuse of wealth.

Grafting is defined thus—one who preys on the people, either against the law or under the law. It may or may not be lawful.

"BIBLE IS BECOMING OBSOLETE," SAYS PRESIDENT HALL

Worcester, Jan. 20.—In a lecture before the Weeks Institute at Clinton to-day President G. Stanley Hall of Clark University said that the Bible is becoming more and more obsolete every day. He deplored this fact and declared that the Bible is not read in the homes as it should be. In explanation of this idea President Hall said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter:

"There has been a number of questioners' question lists, printed, and sent broadcast within the last few years to high school and Sunday school students to test their knowledge of the Bible. All the answers have shown the students to be defective [illegible] knowledge. The reason seems to be the diminishing of home [illegible] school influence.

"The number of children, to-day, who have a full knowledge of the Bible, compared with the number of children when the Bible was read at home more than it is to-day, is growing less and less.

Professors of literature, even in colleges, have complained that students who have matriculated show an amazing ignorance of the Bible. It has been [illegible] discussed in the last ten years whether or not a knowledge of the Bible should be one of the requirements in English for entrance to college. I am of the opinion that it should be, for to my mind the Bible was translated when English was virile and vigorous."

LOBBY'S KNELL RUNG IN LUCE BILL.

Somerville Representative Tells of Dangers That Often Threaten State.

BAKING POWDER TRUST SCANDAL JUST AVERTED

Publicity the Real Preventatives from Fate Like That in Missouri State.

Representative Robert Luce of Somerville, author of the bill introduced into the State Legislature during the closing hours of the past week which is intended to throw the light of publicity on all the doings of the men and women who tramp the corridors of the State House on Beacon Hill in the interest of corporations, great and small, local and foreign, last night told to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN how revelations made during the life insurance investigation in New York were in a measure responsible for showing the loopholes in the present anti-lobbying law of the State; and told, also, for the first time, how the decent members of the State Legislature, in the absence of an anti-lobbying law, had banded themselves together and prevented a raid on the Legislature by the lobbyists of the rival baking powder interests, such as the same men had caused in Missouri, where legislators were bribed right and left.

Threatened With Scandal.

"I do not desire to intimate that there is an orgie of graft in Massachusetts," said Mr. Luce. "Less of it exists here than any other State I know of. But at times there is an improper expenditure of money here. I am going to give you one glaring specific instance which has never, I think, been published.

"Massachusetts very narrowly escaped the baking powder scandals which in Missouri proved the making of Folk. The 'cream of tartar' and the 'alum baking powder' interests have fought battles in practically every Legislature in the country, it being the attempt of the 'cream of tartar' people to obtain legislation prohibiting the sale of alum. They came here with a bill three or four years ago, and it was necessary for the alum people, through their representatives, to meet the issue. There was opportunity, yes more, there was invitation to spend a large amount of money, and the alum representative averred that in no other State House entered by him was the opportunity to do it presented quite so quickly or so boldly as here.

"The Massachusetts method of handling such cases is in so marked a contrast to Missouri that I think we may indulge in a little pride. The facts were laid before the Speaker and half a dozen responsible members of the House, whereupon, without any scandal or public knowledge, the measure was killed. The measure had favored the cream of tartar people.

"In Missouri, on the contrary, it developed that high State officials had been bribed and a wretched state of affairs was disclosed.

"It is worth while pointing out the evil of soliciting employment of constituents from public service corporations. This had become a nuisance when two years ago the Legislature added to its rules one imposing the penalty of exposing before the bar of its house any member who should so recommend a person for employment.

"This has served a purpose, being used by members as an excuse for turning down applicants, but does not stop the practice itself. It is still the practice of corporations to employ friends of legislators.

Publicity the Cure.

"The new bill does not prohibit all these practices but requires a public knowledge of the transactions. The new legislation considers that when such employment is given legitimately there is no objection to a public knowledge of it, and so the treasurers of public service corporations are required to make annual oath upon these points.

"The graft bill aims particularly at the army of lobbyists who are neither members of the Legislature nor registered agents. It is one thing for corporations or individuals to hire counsel to appear before committees and another for unattached grafters to prey upon the public and the business men. These lobbyists trade on both knowledge and conjecture and there is no redress for their victims. They go to State street, for example, and claim a knowledge or control of the prospective voting upon a bill when often times they have no real influence."

TEA FOR $9 A CUP; CHARITY THE OBJECT

Paris, Jan. 20.—At a charity bazaar, for the benefit of an orphanage for the daughters of actors, authors, musicians and artists, which was held at the Ministry of Marine, tea was sold for 25 francs a cup, with milk and sugar at 10 francs extra each, or a total of 45 francs, or $9 a cup. The stalls were managed by prominent Parisian actresses, and a lively business was done.

Madame Le Bargy presided over the tea table and demanded the extortionate prices quoted. Eve Lavallierre, whose impertinent eyes are the despair of the gilded youth of the capital, dispensed face powder at the rate of 100 francs for a box no bigger than a walnut. Mlle. Polaire, the ugliest actress in Paris, accepted nothing less than banknotes for a pound of candy, and Mlle. Dieterle disposed of lottery tickets at prices which threatened bankruptcy to the buyer.

HUB LEADS IN AID TO CATHOLIC WORK

Boston takes first place in the list of contributions to the Society of the Propagation of the Faith, of which Rev. James A. Walsh is the director, according to the report of the society for 1905. The gift of the late Father Scully makes this possible. Without reckoning this gift, Boston takes second place, the contributions being $37,424.28. Lyons, France, is at the head of the list, with Nantes third.

SENATOR PROBES FOR PHILIPPINE GRAFT

Washington, Jan. 20.—Senator Culberson, of Texas, is after "grafters" in the Philippines, of which there have been many grave rumors within the past fortnight. He wants the official microscope applied to Philippine affairs, for the past charges that have been bruited about are that Government employes have been the chief grafters.

The Senator has before the Senate a resolution looking toward the receiving of data of government employes who hold any interest in the various public improvements that this government has been [illegible] ing of late.

$30,000 IN GILT EDGE PAPER GONE.

Bought for Provident Company Before Doors Were Open. Where Are They?

VALUABLE ASSETS CANNOT BE DISCOVERED

Thirty thousand dollars' worth of absolutely first class securities are said to have been purchased for the Provident Securities and Banking Company within a year after the organization of the company and before it had opened its doors for business.

These securities are not among the company's assets.

This money, received from the sale of the stock of the company, was taken, it is said, by General Samuel Dalton, the president of the company, in person, to one of the largest banking houses in Boston. General Dalton said that he wished to purchase with the money gilt-edged bonds or other securities which could be placed in the vaults of his company as assets. The purchase was made and the securities turned over to the Provident company.

Positive of Purchase.

In the report of Henry A. Wyman, counsel for the Savings Bank Commissioners, who made the first examination into the affairs of the bank after it had been closed, no mention was made of these securities.

Charles S. Weed and Alfred S. Hall, who were appointed custodians by the court, are said to have found no trace of them. Not one of the men who were interested in the bank has mentioned them in any way.

The men who made the statement that General Dalton had purchased the securities and turned them over to the company were thoroughly conversant with the affairs of the company in its early days. They are positive that the securities were purchased, but of their final disposition they know nothing. They admit that the need of ready money may have caused the securities to be converted back into cash within a few months.

If the securities were purchased, they have disappeared.

No Security Put Up.

The receivers will open offices in the Exchange Building and will go to work at once to find out the exact standing of the company. One transaction which they will unearth will be connected with a $10,000 note of the Great Western Salt and Soda Company of Utah, discounted by the Provident company.

They will find that, in all probability, this note, on which a suit is now pending in the Superior Court, will be paid by the indorsers, one of whom at least is good for the amount, and already has paid another $10,000 note of the Great Western company which he had indorsed.

They probably will not find, however, any record of the way in which Lorenzo W. Burlen, treasurer of the Provident company, figured in the matter of the discounting of the note, as that was not spread upon the records of the bank. The books of the bank probably will not show that Mr. Burlen, after the note had been discounted, no security being put up, went to the office of men interested in the Great Western Salt & Soda Company, asked for and received 5,000 shares—par value $1—of the stock of the Great Western company which had been promised him at or just before the time the note was discounted.

BILL TO FACILITATE CIVIC CONTROL IS FILED.

Two bills of sweeping interest to the citizens of Boston, yet radically different, were filed in the Legislature yesterday. One of them seeks to facilitate public ownership of public utilities in Massachusetts cities by allowing the people to vote upon the question at any election. The other seeks to take the control of Boston's streets away from the city and give it to a state appointed commission.

The petition to facilitate city ownership in gas and electric lighting plants was filed by Representative O'Brien of Worcester. One of its most important provisions is to enable city councils to do away with the two annual votes for purchase of such plants, making one vote sufficient instead.

The petition asks that cities have the right to construct, purchase or lease and maintain gas and electric light plants, provided a majority of the voters of any city so decide at any regular or special election held, when such a question is submitted to the voters. It is signed by Henry Sterling, the labor leader; J. T. Auerbach and A. J. Johnson.

The other bill was introduced by Representative Edwin T. McKnight, of Ward 21, Boston, and is a strictly party measure. If passed it will abolish the present offices in the City of Boston of Superintendent and Street Commissioners and concentrate their powers in a Board of Public Works whose members are to be appointed by the Governor and approved by his council.

According to the terms of the McKnight bill, which has been termed by the "Home Rule" element in Boston politics, "the Republican reply to the citizens as a result of the recent municipal election," the Governor shall, on July 1, 1906, appoint the three members of the new Board of Public Works for the City of Boston.

One of the members is to be appointed for a term of three years, the second for two years, and the third for one year. Thereafter, the term is to be three years. The Governor shall designate who shall be chairman of the board, and he shall receive a salary of $5,500, the other two members each receiving $5,000 annually.

MILITIA DELEGATES GATHER AT CAPITAL

Association Will Discuss National Guard Measures Before Congress.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Delegates from every State in the Union are arriving to participate Monday in the annual meeting of the Interstate National Guard Association. The meetings will continue three days. The association will discuss the measures now in Congress for the betterment of the militia, particularly the Dick bill, providing for the appropriation of $1,000,000 with which to equip the militia and build rifle ranges.

CHAUSSON WINS TRIUMPH IN SYMPHONY.

Great Work of Gifted Young Frenchman Heard Here for First Time.

IT DIFFERS WIDELY FROM D'INDY'S MUSIC

By Kent Perkins.

Devoid of startling features though it was, the twelfth Symphony concert of the season last night, from its first to its last tone was a thing of superlative beauty and the great audience, for whom Mr. Gericke, his players and Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, the piano soloist, served the varied banquet of harmony, will long remember it gratefully.

Beginning with Mendelssohn's overture, "Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage," in which first the vastness, the depth, the overpowering silent might of the ocean and then the rush of a ship through a piping breeze to a joyous harbor are marvellously portrayed, the programme went to Beethoven's piano concerto No. 5 in E flat major, whose alternating splendor and delicate loveliness were expressed with consummate skill and feeling by both orchestra and solo player.

After this in Liszt's symphonic poem No. 4, "Orpheus," the yearning call of Art to its ideal, held fast in the chains of evil and suffering, was heard in its setting of deeply moving harmonies.

Climax Came With Chausson.

As a climax to the procession of harmonic delights came Ernest Chausson's symphony in B flat major, op. 20, which was heard for the first time here.

Chausson until his untimely and tragic death was an associate of Vincent D'Indy, the "apostle" of the modern French school of music. He belonged to the coterie of younger French composers who followed the ideals of Cesar Franck. His manner of following those ideals is vastly different from that of M. D'Indy. The latter condemns and spurns emotion to which alone music can appeal and seeks for "intellectual" expression through rythm and dissonance as well as harmony—a physical and mental impossibility.

Chausson's symphony of last night was steeped in emotion and roused it in his hearers by the most direct and sincere appeals through melodic themes that had [illegible] and [illegible] embellished with harmonic detail that helped in coherent expression of moods and feelings.

In all these respects it was wholly unlike D'Indy's work.

Hid Prevailing Note of Sadness.

Like most of Chausson's music the symphony contains much melancholy, a sombre sense of disappointment and loneliness that comes close to despair. Wonder is expressed that Chausson, who was rich and in a worldly sense care free, should have expressed so much sadness in his music. Why is this strange? Since the world began have riches ever been able to purchase peace of soul? Is it not quite possible that much of the young Frenchman's melancholy was due to his own realization of this fact.

Whatever his definite idea in writing his symphony may have been, it is plain that through it melancholy struggles with joyous content. In the first movement the contest is even; in the second was, ashen despair gains the upper hand, but in the last, after a valiant, soul-stirring fight, spiritual peace mounts upward in soaring triumph above encircling clouds and beyond shining stars. In the final magnificent choral there is a hint of the stately Gregorian chant so strong as to make it seem natural to believe Chausson means to say that only in religious faith is spiritual peace possible to men.

But that is only a guess. It is as near as anyone can come to the "intellectual" in music.

REMOVAL OF WOMAN SCHOOL TEACHER IS PROTESTED.

Many people in West Roxbury are taking an interest in behalf of Mrs. Achsa Merrill, a teacher at the Henry Vane Primary School, in the Robert Gould Shaw district. There is a movement on foot to remove her from her position.

Mrs. Merrill has been a teacher in Boston twenty-six years and eight months. She has been a contributor to the teachers fund, which would entitle her to a pension after thirty years of service. The recommendation to the School Board asking that she be requested to resign recites that she is inefficient, and suggests her removal for the good of the service.

Should she be removed she will lose all interest in the pension to which she would otherwise be entitled in a little more than three years.

On receipt of the recommendation an inquiry was started by the School Board. This body will probably give a public hearing on the petition.

CONGRESSMEN NOT BID TO ALICE'S WEDDING.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Some Senators and members of Congress will be left out when the invitations for the Longworth-Roosevelt nuptials are sent out. The ceremony cards are now being prepared and will be delivered a short time in advance of the wedding date, February 17.

The present calculation limits the cards to ninety, to be distributed among relatives, close family friends, the highest government officials, ambassadors, clergy and the higher army and navy officers. By the time these names have been entered there will be little show for the Senators and [illegible]. Their only hope lies in the reception for which some 5,000 invitations [illegible].

Miss Roosevelt's engagement ring was bought in this city. It is a cluster ring of diamonds. Already local jewelers are receiving orders for wedding gifts to be presented to Miss Alice by her many friends. Among the most notable so far secured here is a massive silver vase and several gold trays.

A majority of wedding gifts bear the trade marks of well-known New York firms, but purchases are already reported from Philadelphia and other places. Most of the Longworth and Roosevelt families will confine their presents to diamonds and jewelry, and the total value of Miss Roosevelt's presents will amount to a large fortune.

Secret service men are considering measures for protecting the gifts that will begin to reach the White House as the wedding day approaches.

CHINESE STUDENT AT AMHERST AND DAUGHTER OF SIR CHENTUNG TO WED

MISS LIANG CHENG TO BE BRIDE OF MR. JEN.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Miss Liang Cheng, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, Chinese Minister to the United States, is engaged to be married to Mr. Jen, a Chinese student at Amherst. The date for the wedding, which will take place in China, has not been set.

In selecting a husband from her native country, Miss Liang Cheng did not follow the precedent established by Yung Kwai, secretary of the Chinese Legation and official interpreter. Mr. Kwai selected an American wife in the person of Miss Edith Burnham of Springfield, a beautiful and accomplished woman, who has shone most distinctly in Washington society.

Not only are Mr. and Mrs. Kwai well known in the Capital, but their four children are equally in favor. Never did four tiny tots, American-Chinese, receive more attention than these, as in the costume of the country of their father, they help their mother to entertain the many guests at their home.

Notwithstanding the charm of the home life of Mr. and Mrs. Kwai, Miss Liang Cheng followed the wishes of her father and selected a man who, while imbibing American ideas at an American college, is yet most prominent in the Celestial Kingdom. Her husband-to-be is now a student of Amherst, the college from which the present minister from the land of the Yellow Dragon graduated several years ago.

Made Debut in Society.

Mr. Jen entered this year, being a member of the class of 1909, and will be married while a student. Not that he is not well versed in the ways of his native land, but he is desirous of learning all that he can be taught in the United States in order that he may be better fitted for the high and honorable position which he will soon reach.

The bride-to-be came to this country not many months ago and made her debut in Washington society this Winter. She enjoys the distinction of being the first high-born Chinese girl who has ever entered American society. She is mistress of the Chinese legation and has not yet adopted American dress. She speaks very little English, but she is desirous of mastering the language as soon as possible.

So far she has adopted American shoes and gloves, and while her bridal costume will be of the style of her country she will still wear the adopted footwear and hand gear as a part of her trousseau.

"I am afraid the American girls won't like me if I criticise them," said Miss Liang shortly after her arrival in this country. "Already I find that I like them very much, although I cannot understand their eagerness to discuss the subject of dress. Almost the day of my arrival in this country questions about my style of dress began to be put to me, as though that was the most important of all subjects. My main object in coming to this country is to obtain an English education. The girls of China do not desire notoriety. We prefer the appreciation of our home people rather than the approval of the public."

Like the children of Mr. and Mrs. Kwai, Miss Liang lives very simply, according to Chinese ideas. Her clothing all comes from her native land. She has already imbibed many American ideas and likes rag time music as well as ice cream. In this, she is, again like the Kwai children. Like them, also, she has tutors of English at her home here, and also like them she is an enthusiastic student.

Choice Food Delicacies.

Among the ante-nuptial presents which the bride-elect has received are many delicacies from her native kingdom. These were given to her by members of the Chinese Imperial Commission which came to this country to study the educational and industrial conditions. Arriving at San Francisco, their entourage to Washington was marked with receptions and entertainments of the most marked kind. This commission, in charge of Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks of Cornell, representing the United States Government, had about 750 pieces of baggage, and 300 of these contained foods fit only for Chinese of the highest caste.

When they arrived in Washington they presented much of this to their Minister for his daughter. There were packages of choice smoked hams, with the feet of the hog still sticking to them. Chinese pots filled with preserved ginger and carefully packed in wicker baskets were much in evidence. Then there were boxes of birds' [illegible], Chinese vegetables, [illegible] combs, pickled [illegible] and brains of strange birds.

RECOVER BODY OF LANDSLIDE VICTIM

Haverstraw, N. Y., Jan. 20.—The body of William Cobne was recovered to-day by excavators seeking the victims of the recent landslide. The bodies of Bartley McGovern, Abram Dias and John McMurray were partly uncovered when a mass of the earth bank gave away, burying them again.

ACCUSED OF THEFT FROM HARVARD STUDENTS.

Fred W. Lindsay, Rounded by Police in College Dormitory, Will Also Be Charged with Passing Worthless Check

Charged with larceny from Harvard students, Fred W. Lindsay, a well-dressed young man whose stock in trade appeared to be a plausible "hard luck" story and a glib tongue, was arrested last night by Inspector Hurley of Cambridge in a room in Reed's Hall, Harvard dormitory.

According to the police, Lindsay's method of operation was to represent himself to Harvard students as a student of another college and to solicit from them loans of various amounts to enable him to reach home. This home, it is said, he has given as Lynn and Fall River.

Notice in Crimson.

Inspector Hurley caused to be inserted in the Harvard Crimson, a notice calling upon any student who was approached by Lindsay to hold him and summon the police. Last night Lindsay went to the room in Reed's hall occupied by Wellington Rankin and Fred Atherton. He told them he was an Andover student, stranded in Cambridge and that he needed a small sum of money to get to his home in Lynn. Recalling the notice in the Crimson, the two young men detained him and telephoned for the police.

Discharged From Concord.

Lindsay was discharged from the Concord reformatory about two months ago. Among the charges which will be placed against him is that of passing a worthless check for $20 on F. G. Allnutt, No. 6 Boylston street, Boston.

When searched at the station house, a large number of checks on different banks were found. He is twenty four years old, five feet seven inches in height, dark hair, round, smooth shaven face. He is well dressed, wearing a dark suit, paddock overcoat and a white vest.

CANADIAN OFFICIAL'S BODY NEARS HOME

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 20.—The British battleship Dominion, from Cherbourg, France, with the body of Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, Canada's Minister of Marine, who died in Paris, was in communication by wireless with Cape Race at 9.10 o'clock tonight. The Dominion was then 200 miles off the station and wired that she would arrive at Halifax at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

SCORES SECRET PROBE FOR GRAFT.

The five members of the Chelsea Board of Aldermen who have been investigating themselves and other aldermen in Star Chamber hearings as a result of charges of graft made by Alderman William S. Young, will continue the sittings this week and hope to be able to make a report to the full board soon.

At a meeting of the board on January 15 Alderman Young asked that the ratification and appointment of all public officials be held up for a week, and in the course of his speech he charged that graft had been rampant in connection with the election of the city solicitor, city auditor and members of the Board of Assessors. A committee of five aldermen was appointed to investigate. On the committee are Alderman William A. O'Brien, William S. Young, Clarence E. Gates and Horatio R. Delano.

Alderman Young informed a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter that he is tied hand and foot and gagged as well by the committee of investigation so far as giving out information is concerned.

"I have never used the word 'bribery' in my charges, but I suppose that word and the word 'graft' mean practically the same thing. Just how far this thing is to go or how far it has gone I cannot say. I am in honor bound not to do so until the hearing is completed.

"Then I pledge myself that if this entire matter is not given to the Board of Aldermen in open session, with every word of testimony which has been given, I will see to it myself that this is done. It is a duty I owe to myself. Only in this way can I be vindicated.

"I have been vilified and accused of not minding my own business. I maintain that I am minding my own business. For five years, and this is the sixth year, I have been on the Board of Aldermen. My eyes have been open all this time. Each year I have taken an oath to do my duty to the best of my ability and knowledge and for the best interests of the city of which I am an official. That is what I am trying to do."

TWENTY-ONE A MAGIC NUMBER IN LOTTERIES

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Jan. 20.—The lotteries held lately in Paris, and there has been an extensive series, have shown one curious result. The total of each winning number has been 21.

In the Pompadour lottery the prize went to No. 1,027,147. A winning [illegible] in the municipal lottery was won by No. [illegible]. In the Press lottery $200,000 was won by the number 9,660, and $20,000 by the number 13,188. The number which won $5,000 on December 5 was 435,504.

TWO DOCTORS RYIDED BY POLICE.

"Old Dr. Bailey's" office at No. 48 Howard street and Dr. James E. Frothingham's office at No. 11 Alston street were again raided by the police last evening. The police were searching for evidences of illegal practice. They made neither seizures nor arrests.

Sergeant Carr, Special Officer Murns and a detail from the Joy street station made the raids. They visited the Frothingham office first. In the parlors of the office was a lawyer, who advised Mrs. Frothingham, the only other person present, how to act. Mrs. Frothingham made Sergeant Carr read his warrant through. After that she allowed the men over the premises, but nothing was found to arouse suspicion.

Old Dr. Bailey's was [illegible] upon. The police had to force an entrance. A man who gave his name as "Dr. Perry" and a colored maid were the only persons present. After looking around the police went away empty handed.

PLAYS THE BRIGAND ON A MOTOR CYCLE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Aix, Jan. 20.—Trabucco, the up-to-date bandit of Provence, has been condemned to ten years' hard labor for highway robbery. For many months the police have been on his track, but were unable to catch him, as he rode a swift motorcycle, pursued and held up wealthy inhabitants of the district driving to and from the country or town, and jumping on his cycle sped off again at a tremendous speed.

Lately, however, Trabucco had committed burglaries, and it was while breaking into a house that he was caught, his trusty motorcycle having been seized by the police as it stood outside the hedge ready to aid in his escape.

WHISTLE FOR HEALTH IS THE LATEST FAD

London, Jan. 20.—We are to whistle for health. So says the latest of the health faddists. Every morning and at intervals during the day we are gravely to purse our lips (no little will be necessary for many of us, or we shall laugh), and whistle the burden that we love.

On the other hand, another health faddist has been telling us that it is the noise of London which kills off a London family in three generations. Now to many there is no more infuriating noise than whistling, so invalids are asking how the faddists can agree.

If any trace of kidney disease shows itself, get a bottle of WARNER'S SAFE CURE; it will purify and strengthen the kidneys, kill the disease germs, prevent the serious complications that are bound to arise, and restore perfect health.

SUFFERED INTENSELY

Mrs. Estelle Clayton, a noted Canadian society woman, says: "We have used Warner's Safe Cure in our family for several years. It cured my husband of backache and kidney trouble, and Warner's also cured me of a serious cold that settled in my back and kidneys and which caused me intense suffering and pain."—Mrs. Estelle Clayton, 554 Adelaide St., Toronto, Canada.

Thousands, both men and women, have kidney disease and do not know it. It is hereditary. You should make a test of your kidneys at once and satisfy yourself as to their condition. Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism, rheumatic gout, inflammation of the bladder and urinary organs are caused by kidney disease neglected.

KILL WORKMEN TO MAKE ROOM IN PRISONS

Russian Officers Shoot Rebels After Brief Court Martial.

CRUELTIES INFLAME REVOLUTIONISTS ANEW

St. Petersburg, Jan. 20.—Workmen employed in the government works are being shot after brief trials by court-martial, in order to make room for more prisoners in the prisons, which are now crowded to overflowing. It is reported that the victims selected for slaughter are led out three at a time and executed before the eyes of their comrades.

As soon as one batch has been dispatched three other prisoners are lined up in the same spot and shot. Firing has been heard at the scenes of execution continuing without cessation.

The military has also resorted to beating girls brutally as a means of punishment.

Stories of the cruelties which are being practiced have become noised about and they have greatly inflamed the revolutionists, who are planning reprisals.

TROUBLE IS IN SIGHT OVER MOROCCO.

Rising Feeling of Distrust Between Envoys Succeeds Early Harmony.

FRENCH AND GERMANS PLAY CLEVER GAME

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Algeciras, Spain, Jan. 20.—Behind the screen of amiability that envelops the relations of the envoys of the powers to the Moroccan conference, a rising feeling of distrust is observable, due, seemingly, to the unwillingness of both France and Germany to define their positions beyond reaffirming now somewhat wearisomely their adherence to the open door, the sovereignty of the Sultan and the integrity of his territories.

The French delegates, in conversation with their opponents, have been unable to learn precisely what is the position of Germany, nor apparently have the German representatives ascertained the joint intentions of France and Great Britain.

Extreme caution and lack of confidence have begun to destroy the favorable atmosphere for negotiation which was created by the courtesies and assurances of the first days.

There is a feeling among the Ambassadors of the less interested powers that trouble is in sight. The Moroccan delegates have become conscious of this, and take satisfaction therefrom.

MRS. HENRY WHITE A ROMAN HOSTESS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Rome, Jan. 20.—The most imposing diplomatic function given in the Eternal City for many years was the reception held by the new American Ambassador and Mrs. Henry White at the Palazzo del Drago, just previous to Mr. White's departure for Algeciras. All the streets leading up to the Embassy were blocked and many guests had to wait three-quarters of an hour outside the Palazzo gates.

White, red and gold furnished the color scheme of the decorations. Miniature bay trees in profusion lent a dull green to the decorations, which was very effective. Count Luigi Primoli, the Court Master of Ceremonies, was in attendance to introduce the Roman guests to the Ambassador and Mrs. White. The Ambassadress wore a Worth gown of white satin, with a diamond coronet on her gray hair. The flower of the Roman aristocracy was among the guests, several of the Queen's ladies-in-waiting being present. Princess Giovanelli was present in white and gold, and wore the famous Giovanelli coronet of pearls, which she dons only upon very extraordinary occasions.

Among the Americans present were Mrs. Marion Crawford and her daughter. Miss Crawford wore a frock of cream colored crepe de chine, and wore at her belt a bunch of magnolia blossoms.

She is now about to appear in Vienna, playing in German the same role in "Adversaire," which she played last Summer in English.

YANKEE WOMEN LEAD BRITONS IN TRIUMPHANT APPEAL TO VOTERS

LEADING FIGURES IN THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

LIBERALS GET 7 OUT OF 8 SEATS.

Yesterday's Returns Increase the Majority Against the Unionists in Parliament.

WELSH LEADER RETURNED BY INCREASED MAJORITY

By Publishers' Press.

London, Jan. 21.—The returns from only eight elections were announced last night. Of the eight seats thus filled the Liberals captured seven by increased majorities.

The Conservatives gained a victory in the division of Saint Andrew's, Edinburgh, but this was more than offset by the Liberal successes elsewhere. The increased majorities given in Liberal districts show that the Liberal cause has not lost any of its popularity.

The most important contest settled yesterday was in the Caranavon division, where D. L. Loyd George, president of the board of trade, and leader of the Welch party, was triumphantly re-elected. Notwithstanding that he faced the most violent kind of opposition, Mr. George increased his majority from 296 in the last election to 1,224.

Liberals, 261. Conservatives, 114; Nationalists, 84, Laborites, 35.

One of the most notable features of the British election, aside from the overthrow of the Balfour cabinet and the sweep made by Joseph Chamberlain in Birmingham, is the big gains made by the Socialist Labor party. Out of ninety eight candidates in this party, forty have already been elected, and it is expected that fully fifty will be among the victors when Parliament assembles. Factory hands, mill workers, glass workers, colliers and other tradesmen are in the list elected.

Joseph Devlin, Irish Nationalist, has captured West Belfast. From time immemorial Belfast has been a Unionist stronghold, with the exception of the few years when the seat now won by Devlin was held by Thomas Sexton.

American blood and American energy has figured prominently in the elections. American women took the lead as enthusiastic workers, and in each case the man in the case has come out victorious.

Aided by American Wife.

Joseph Chamberlain, the Unionist free trader, who swept Birmingham, found great strength in the support of his wife, an American. Mrs. Chamberlain was a Massachusetts girl, born in Salem, and the daughter of ex-Secretary of War Endicott of that city. Her maiden name was Miss Mary Endicott. At the urgent request of his supporters, Mr. Chamberlain consented to ride through his constituency with his wife, a thing which he had never been known to do before on a day of polling. They were accorded a grand reception by the workingmen, who form the bulk of his constituency.

In contrast to this was the rowdyism in Birmingham, where Mrs. R. L. Outhwaite, wife of Chamberlain's opponent, was the victim of a mud-slinging melee.

Mrs. Cornwallis West, another American, the mother of Winston Spencer Churchill, one of the elected Liberals, was another woman who went forth and espoused the cause she favored. Her enthusiasm more than anything else was the feature of her efforts. In her efforts she had the opposition of Miss Balfour, daughter of former Premier Balfour, who went down in an inglorious defeat. Mrs. West was a New York girl before marriage, being Miss Jennie Jerome when Lord Randolph Churchill took her to England as a bride.

Former Boston Man Wins.

Another American elected in the ranks of the Liberals in London, is Dr. Stopford W. Brooke, formerly of Boston, Mass. Dr. Brooke was eleven years ago a Unitarian minister in Boston, and preached from the pulpit of the First Church. Dr. Brooke married a Boston girl, a Miss Ellis.

J. H. Seaverns, a Liberal, who was elected from the Brixton division, Lambeth, London, was formerly a Boston man. He is a graduate of Harvard University and is now a naturalized British subject.

Lord Willoughby de Eresby, an Irish Nationalist to be elected, took his bride from America on December of last year. She was Miss Eloise Breese of New York City.

The strength of the Labor party comes as a shock to people who have always thought of conditions in New Zealand as impossible to realize in any other country in the world. They may soon see the same kind of laws passed here in England as those which have made reformers in all parts of the world point to the Australian colony as the model English country.

LADY CURZON GETS QUAINT BABU NOTES

London, Jan. 20.—Lady Curzon brought with her from India many quaint specimens of "Babu" letters. Here are a couple which were addressed to Lady Curzon and received at the Allahabad Memorial Hospital for Women from grateful relatives of patients.

"Dear She: My wife has returned from your hospital cured. Provided males are allowed at your bungalow, I would like to do you the honor of presenting myself there this afternoon, but I will not try to repay you—vengeance belongs unto God. Yours noticeably."

"Dear and Fair Madame: I have much pleasure to inform you that my dearly unfortunate wife will be no longer under your kind treatment, she having left this world for the other on the night of the 27th ultimo. For your help in this matter I shall ever feel grateful. Yours reverently."

Reval, Esthonia, Jan. 20.—The members of the "temporary government" were arrested, including a lawyer, M. Pasha, who is the candidate for the Esthonian party for election to the National Assembly.

KAISER PICKS OUT HIS DANCE LEADERS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Jan. 20.—Lieutenants Count Erich von Pfeil and William von Leres are receiving the condolences of their friends at court. They have been appointed "Vortanzer," or leaders of the dance for the ensuing year.

The post of Vortanzer is no sinecure and young men in high society live in fear and trembling lest the choice of the Kaiser should fall upon them. The Vortanzer has to attend all the balls of the season, not only those given at court, but all those which are given by the diplomatic corps as well. They also have to make all the arrangements for the court balls, lead the cotillons, oversee the matters of precedence with regard to the dancers at the Imperial Palace and so on.

It is a very strenuous position and one which is heartily dreaded by the young men of the capital.

CASTRO ARMING FOR FRENCH CLASH.

Strengthens Defenses of Venezuela, Garrisons People and Feeds Troops.

GREAT INDIGNATION OVER TAIGNY AFFAIR

Washington, Jan. 20.—A dispatch from Willemstad, Curacao, says that active preparations are being made by the Venezuelan government to strengthen the defenses of the country in view of the rupture of diplomatic relations with France, and the threats of reprisals made by the French government. All the people are being garrisoned and supplies are being furnished to the troops.

In diplomatic [illegible] at Caracas the greatest indignation is expressed over the action of President Castro in refusing to allow M. Taigny, the French charge d'affaires, to [illegible] again on Venezuelan soil after he had [illegible] board the steamer [illegible] at La Guayra to obtain his correspondence.

Advices [illegible] that the Venezuelan people [illegible] received the announcement of the breaking off of diplomatic relations with France with the utmost [illegible].

Three French [illegible] now off the Venezuelan coast with [illegible] naval demonstration as answer to President Castro's treatment of M. Taigny, the French representative, and two additional warships will [illegible] as soon as they can make the trip across the Atlantic.

The [illegible] of the situation is greatly increased [illegible] which has recently reached here regarding the attitude President Castro now appears to be assuming toward Mr. Russell, the American minister, which may make it necessary to dispatch an American warship even nearer the Venezuelan coast than has already been planned.

President Castro, it is said, will be given to understand that any treatment of an American representative such as that accorded M. Taigny will not be tolerated by the United States.

The only cause which can be assigned here for President Castro's attitude toward Mr. Russell is that the former insists upon regarding as personal rather than official the efforts which Mr. Russell, acting under instruction from Washington, has made to assist in a peaceful settlement of the Franco-Venezuelan troubles.

Electro-Vigor, Dry Cell Body Battery.

The Only Dry Cell Body Battery in the World. Requires No Charging. No Vinegar or Acid. Guaranteed Not to Burn, Blister or Shock. Warranted for One Year, it will last a lifetime.

A DRY-CELL BODY BATTERY. ELECTRO-VIGOR is a Body Battery made up of separate dry cells. It is easily, comfortably worn next to the body during the night or during the day. It surpasses anything of its kind ever known, and is the only electric Body Battery that will give out for hours at a time that blood building, nerve feeding force which is the basis of all health. ELECTRO-VIGOR is not like old fashioned body batteries or electric belts. There is no charging to [illegible] no vinegar or acid [illegible] to bother with. ELECTRO-VIGOR is a body appliance that continuously gives continuous currents of warm exhilarating life force to the sick parts—and with no shock, no unpleasant sensation. ELECTRO-VIGOR is Nature's own way of healing, of bringing relief to the suffering—and cure to the diseased organs. You feel better just as soon as the Battery is applied.

FEEDS THE WEAK PARTS. There is a reason for every pain or ache you ever have. And back of the weak, sick organ itself—back of the nerve that controls, back where the life food comes from—electric force is formed. Just as the combustion of coal in the fire box gives out heat that creates steam that runs the engine, so in the same manner does the breaking up of food in your stomach give forth gases that generate electric heat that feeds and nourishes the Nerves that control your body. Now it is plain that if an organ fails to do its work right this is a warning that the supply of life matter is running short. Scientists have long since proved that electricity is the basis of all human vitality. So if the organ gets sick it isn't to blame—neither is the nerve that supplies its energy, but the lack of fuel which electricity alone supplies.

BUILDS UP BY CREATING. Here is where the great use and marvelous power of ELECTRO-VIGOR comes in as a [illegible] for it creates new force that supplies the demand of the Nerves that control the weak organs. Drugs fail because they only stimulate. There are no injurious effects from ELECTRO-VIGOR because it is nature's own remedy. Every organ is given new life and vigor and you will feel new, for you will be new. ELECTRO-VIGOR gives immediate relief and positively cures when my directions are followed. Don't neglect the call of the weak organ a day longer. Give it the strength supplied by ELECTRO-VIGOR. If it is Rheumatism, Weak Back, Lumbago, Indigestion, Constipation, Liver or Kidney Trouble, or just tired, wrecked nerves, ELECTRO-VIGOR can cure you, make you well and happy. Simply let me prove it. Send in the coupon.

If you have used an Electric Belt and are not satisfied I will allow you a liberal discount for it in exchange for Electro-Vigor.

Electro-Vigor is the only dry cell body battery in the world. Beware of imitations.

To Get More Strength from Your Food

LOTS of people are starving with a full stomach.

You know, it's not how much we Eat, but how we digest, that makes us Strong, or Brainy, or Successful.

When the Bowels are filled with undigested food we may be a great deal worse off than if we were half starved for want of Food.

Because, food that stays too long in the Bowels decays there, just as if it stayed too long in the open air.

Well, when the food decays in the Bowels, through delayed and overdue action, what happens?

The millions of little Suction Pumps that line the Bowels and Intestines then draw Poison from the decayed Food, Instead of the Nourishment they were intended to draw.

This Poison gets into the blood and, in time spreads all over the body, unless the Cause of Constipation is promptly removed.

That Cause of Constipation is Weak, or Lazy, Bowel Muscles.

When your Bowel-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise to strengthen them—not "Physic" to pamper them.

There's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowel-Muscles.

Its name is "CASCARETS," and its price is Ten Cents a box.

Cascarets act like Exercise on the Muscles of the Bowels, and make them stronger every time they force these Muscles to act naturally.

The stronger these Muscles propel the food, the stronger does the friction of the food act on the flow of Digestive Juices.

The more of these juices that act on food, the more Nutriment does that food turn into, and the richer nourishment do the little Suction Pumps of the Intestines draw out of it.

It needs only one Cascaret at a time to stimulate all the Bowel-Muscles enough, without purging, discomfort or loss of nutrition.

So, if you want the same natural action that a six-mile walk in the country would give you, (without the weariness) take one Cascaret at a time, with intervals between, till you reach the exact condition you desire.

* * *

One Cascaret at a time will properly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue, thus proving clearly its ready, steady, sure, but mild and effective action.

A coming Headache can be warded off, in short order, by a single Cascaret, and the cause removed.

Heartburn, Gas-belching, Acid-risings in the throat, and Colicky feeling are sure signs of Bowel trouble from food poisons, and should be dealt with promptly.

One Cascaret will stop the coming trouble, move on the Bowel load, and free the Digestive Juices, if that one Cascaret is taken as soon as the first signs are noticed.

* * *

Don't fail to carry the Vest Pocket Cascaret Box with you constantly.

All Druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year, for six years past.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Co., and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC." 717n

RIVAL AUTO SHOWS BOTH SUCCESSFUL IN NEW YORK.

Manufacturers Have Practically Sold Out A[illegible] and Dealers' Pockets Are Fairly Bulging [illegible] Money

New York, Jan. [illegible] manufacturers and in fa[illegible] public [illegible] automobile show [illegible] all the [illegible] work.

So far as business goes there is only one story to tell. The manufacturers have practically sold all, or most of their output, and as for the dealers, their pockets are fairly bulging with checks and orders.

Both shows have been successful beyond the fondest hopes of their managers, and this year's exhibitions have proved beyond argument that no one building in New York is large enough to hold the automobile trade, and that it is up to the Automobile Club of America to hold another show next year, irrespective of their fight with the licensed association.

Drawback to Shows.

A rather bad feature of the two shows, to which attention has been called before, is the absence of any seating accommodations for the public.

All the space is taken up with cars and accessories, and the result is that crowds of men and women, who have absolutely no intention of buying a car occupy the comfortable cushions in the cars, as they have no other place to rest, and while they form a picturesque background for the machines, it is doubtful if they have helped the sale of cars.

Outside of the other attractions in the Armory the pictured reproduction of the Vanderbilt road race in the Armory Theatre was well worth going to see.

Car after car, including that of Hemery, who won the cup, and Lancia, who just missed doing so, come along in the picture as though they were going to leap out of an illuminated square and rush over the spectators. Every visible detail is there, the tremendous skidding at the turns, the leaping and bounding over the irregular stretches and the whirlwind speed where the going is good are reproduced in detail. It is a glimpse at what has been termed the sport of kings, and it is not a disappointing one.

The progress made this year in the building of steam automobiles is such as to warrant a prediction that this power may be coming back, as its advocates for several years have asserted. All of the steamers now made are represented at the Armory, though they are fortune-favored to the extent of belonging neither to the "licensed" or the "unlicensed" branches of the industry.

Scored a Hit.

Foremost, of course, is the White, which for some years has seemed the solitary success in a field of failures. With its new down draught arrangement, permitting as handsome a side entrance body as is anywhere to be found, it scores a decided hit.

A new comer in the steam field is the Johnson Auto-Carriage, which is an immense Limousine, with exceedingly substantial lines, and evidently well designed power plant. A four-cylinder vertical, single-acting engine, longitudinally placed under the hood, with poppet valves like those of a gasoline engine, supplies the power and is a decided departure in automobile engineering. The condenser is on the roof.

The builders of the Lane steamer, a famous steam runabout in the heyday of its type, some years ago, exhibited a conventionally designed touring car that seems certain to meet with large demand.

HARVARD FRESHMEN WON IN A WALK

TIGERS EASY FOR CRIMSON IN BASKETBALL.

Minus the services of O. D. Vanderbilt their captain, who was injured in Princeton's game with Yale Friday night, the Princeton basketball five went down to defeat in the Hemenway Gymnasium yesterday afternoon before the prowess of the Harvard team to the score of 36 to 8. The game was a virtual slaughter. Toward the very end of the game Harvard let up and Princeton scored 5 of her 8 points.

Captain Griffiths of Harvard was easily the star of the game. His work was phenomenally fast and his shooting strong. There has been a steady advance in the play of the Harvard seven since the very first of the season. McLean, the third baseman on the Nassau nine, played the star contest for Princeton. The work of Amberg and Burnham also stood out prominently. Summary:

BRAE BURN PLAYERS TOO MUCH FOR MILTON TEAM

In a hard fought and exciting ice hockey game at Cunningham Pond, Milton, yesterday afternoon, the Brae Burn Country Club defeated the Milton Hockey Club by a score of 4 to 1.

The players were greatly handicapped by the soft ice and the water on the rink, which made fast hockey almost impossible. Brae Burn started off with the better of Milton and before the first half was over was in the lead, 2 to 0. Milton braced greatly, however, in the first of the second half and McKay scored for them in a scrimmage.

Towards the end, however, Brae Burn made shot after shot for their opponent's goal, and finally scored on a long shot by Leonard. Walt, followed this up with another score.

Walt, Leonard and Walworth put up the best game for the victors, while Fuller, Boylston and McKay excelled for the losers. The summary follows:

WON'T TRY TO MAKE POOL SELLING LEGAL AT PROVIDENCE.

Providence, Jan. 20.—The National Horsebreeders' Association, which has been formally notified by Governor Utter that it cannot have pool selling on its grounds during the proposed meet at Narragansett Park, will not take advantage of the suggestion to try to have the State law so amended as to legalize this form of gambling.

This decision was stated to-day most emphatically by J. Reginald Burton, secretary and treasurer of the association. Said he: "The association is not in the gambling business. It was organized for the promotion of breeding and horse racing and obtained its charter to run here through August Belmont of the Jockey Club of New York. For the pool selling and gambling which may be carried on at the track the association is not responsible."

An official of the Grand Circuit stated that the prohibition of pool selling would not prevent the usual meet here because racing on the circuit has become a sport for millionaires who seldom make their wagers with the small bookmakers. "The Grand Circuit races will be held at Narragansett Park," he declared.

LYNCH STAR MAN IN MALDEN GAME

Malden, Jan. 20.—For the first time in two years the Malden High School basketball team met defeat in their home gymnasium, Holyoke High being the one to turn the trick, but this was accomplished only after the fastest and most fiercely contested game ever witnessed in the Malden Gym.

At the end of the first half the score stood 10 to 9 in favor of the home team. At the beginning of the second half Malden started to run away from the visitors, scoring five points in quick succession, but the pace set was too much for them and their much larger opponents wore them down, and in the last three minutes won the game, they making five baskets in quick order.

Lynch of the visitors was the star of the game, he making eight baskets, while Morton of the home team made four. Good for Malden and Dowd for Holyoke also played well. The summary:

HOLYOKE H. S.		MALDEN H. S.

LYNN DRIVERS WANT SPEEDWAY

Lynn, Jan. 20.—For more than two years now the owners of fast horses in this city have been promised by those in power that soon they would have a speedway, but so far as can be seen the promises were "hot air."

At the annual meeting of the Lynn Driving Club this matter was thoroughly discussed, and it was the opinion of the members that it was certainly time for the organization to do more strenuous work in the proper channel, if they were ever to be rewarded with a speedway.

It was finally decided that the president appoint a committee of hustlers in the political line to lay the project before the city authorities.

The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year: William LaCroix, president; Walter B. Moore, vice-president; S. Walter Symonds, second vice president; Clifton Colburn, treasurer; Elmer E. Bray, secretary, and for directors, [illegible] Fadden, George W. Belonga, Frank J. Linnehan, Charles C. Lawrence Waterbury, the racquet champion, made by far the best showing in the first match. This is racing week at Ormond, Florida, and the auto world will hear of some wonderful speed stunts in the whiz cars before the tests are over.

There are congregated on the Southern wave-washed racecourse the most skilful and daring drivers in the world, and with them are the finest and most powerful mechanical productions in the auto line ever turned out by the brains and machinery of experts.

Already indications of speed smashing and phenomenal time being made have come from the distant spot, as in tuning up the cars they have been found to develop remarkable speed.

Stanley Car Speedy.

Last week in a trial burst the Stanley steamer, the little racing "bug" shaped car representing the Hub, covered a mile in 30 3-5 seconds, which is 2 1-5 seconds better than the old mark, and it was only the second time that the car was out for a trial against the watch, and it gives evidence of what may be expected when the proper moment arrives to obtain all the possibilities out of the car.

Mr. Stanley is confident that the car can beat 30 seconds, and it may come to pass that the Hub car will beat out all the big foreigners with their high-rated juggernauts and keep in this country the best time for the mile distance which Herbert L. Bowden first established last year.

The Stanley car in the trial run was driven by Fred Marriott, and the pressure on the boiler was 700 pounds to the square inch, while 1000 pounds is a possibility.

Trial Over Rough Course.

The beach was a trifle rough, and the car labored against the wind, while a little defect caused the wheels to leave the ground so far that twice in the short run it was necessary to shut off the power.

Great things are expected of the Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt car of 250 horsepower which Paul Satori will drive. In the two-mile-a-minute race the Vanderbilt car ought to lead the field if power will do it.

There is hardly a doubt that every record from one to one hundred miles will be lowered, and for the first time in the history of the sport two miles a minute accomplished and this vehicle honor left to the auto.

"It is a case of expansion," said Manager Chester I. Campbell yesterday, when asked about the great automobile and power boat show to be held in Mechanics Building, March 10-17. "We have gone to the roof, have touched the cellar and bulged the walls in an endeavor to keep this great exposition under one roof, but it can't be done. We shall have to use Symphony Hall for the overflow."

Finest Cars to Be Seen.

Exhibition and Grand Halls, with the stage and front balcony in the latter hall, will be filled with the finest cars that man, machinery and brains can produce.

Many cars will be shown that were not finished in time for the New York show, and will make this Boston show much more complete than that at New York, for most of the exhibits of that show will be moved bodily to Boston.

Mr. Campbell being manager of the Philadelphia show also, has made arrangements for an invasion of Boston by the Keystone makers and dealers.

In the basement will be seen racing boats, rowing boats, launches and power boats of every description. Boats with world wide reputations, boats for cruising, boats for pleasure, boats for everything and everybody—and it will be a sight worth seeing.

The canoe display will be especially attractive to New Englanders, for the best canoes in the world are built in this section of the country and all the best makers will be there with their models. Then there will be the motors of many makes—and what boat or automobile owner is not interested in the latest developments in this line? Portable houses will occupy many spaces and the development of this industry as shown by the exhibitors will astonish the sight seers.

In the balconies will be the most complete display of automobile and boat parts and accessories ever shown in this section of the country.

Changes of interest to auto owners, such as the use of leather instead of basket work for the covering of luggage carriers, new devices for attaching extra tires to a machine, improved sparking plugs, etc., will be seen on every hand.

Symphony Hall will be used for foreign cars and late applicants for space at this show of shows.

AUTOISTS OFF FOR FLORIDA TOURNEY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Jan. 20.—The two automobile shows closed and the Automobile Club's annual banquet over, the rush is on for Florida. The midnight trains, reaching Ormond and Daytona next Monday forenoon, will carry a goodly crowd, but the main contingent of Southern circuit chasers will leave at noon to-morrow on the Seaboard Air Line Limited, which will bring them to Ormond in time for dinner on Monday.

Though the entries for the annual beach meet are not so numerous as in former years, there will be a round dozen cars and drivers, outclassing any previous group of competitors for the world's straightaway championships. The drivers include Lancia, Hemery, Earp, Ford, Stanley, Sartori, Fletcher, Cedrino, Guinness, Christie, Kulick, Wurgis, Holmes, Downey, Hilliard, Maxwell, Bristol and Harding.

Probable Winners.

The sextet first named seem to have the best chance of carrying off the speed honors of the tournament and have Florida's prettiest girl place the gold speed crown of 1906 on the brow as winner of the great two-miles-a-minute race, which is to be the star feature of the programme. The cars to be piloted by these experts will include special flyers of Darracq, Fiat, Napier, Ford, Stanley, Christie, Reo, Mercedes, Stoddard-Dayton, Maxwell and Wayne makes, in addition to the 250 horsepower special racer built by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt.

The racing will begin Tuesday and continue through the week with the possibility that some owners and drivers will remain over for special match racing on the following Monday.

The annual carnival of the Palm Beach Motor Boat Association will begin on Tuesday of week after next on Lake Worth and continue for four days. Among the fast craft entered are the Dixie, Simplex III., Allen Six Shooter and Mercedes, U. S. A. There will also be day and night parades of motor boats, pleasure launches, houseboats and yachts.

Go to Havana Next.

From Palm Beach the circuit chasers will hurry to Havana for the Floral Parade on Sunday, February 4, the Havana Cup race on the eleventh and the short distance contests on the thirteenth. Hemery, Lancia, Fletcher, Earp, Guinness, Cedrino, Ford, Maxwell and Barron will be among the competitors. The great Lancia will carry the colors of Senor Cenlli, whose car won the cup last year.

HARVARD TEAM WON VERY CLOSE GAME WITH TIGERS

New York, Jan. 20.—Harvard took a firmer hold on the intercollegiate hockey championship by defeating Princeton 3 to 2 in a fiercely played game before a big and enthusiastic crowd at the St. Nicholas rink to-night. The playing of the Tigers was a surprise, for no one thought that with the little practice they have had they could hold the Cambridge students down to a small score. In fact, the Tigers showed great improvement over previous games.

There was tripping and blocking of a rough kind galore in the first half. For tripping Pell, Levis, of Princeton, was sent to the bench for two minutes.

The Tigers hung up a score within ten seconds of the start of the game. It was the result of a clever dash by Chew. Harvard evened matters five minutes later with a hard side shot. Then Pell scored again during a scrimmage, taking two shots to make the goal. Team work gave Harvard another point, McLeod making the goal. The half ended 3 to 1 in favor of the Crimson.

Foul work characterized the second period. Pell and Dillon were both disciplined for tripping. Harvard proved too strong for the Tigers at the start, but the Skeeters kept at it and Chew finally put the puck in on a pass from Levis, near the end of the game. The line-up:

HARVARD.		PRINCETON.
Ivy	goal	Chislett
Willetts	point	Terry
D. Newhall	coverpoint	Zabriskie
M. Newhall	forward	Dillon
McLeod	forward	Levis
Townsend	forward	Cox
Pell	forward	Chew

Referee—K. Gordon, St. Nicholas. Umpires—R. Hardy, St. Nicholas and Bob Leake. Time—Two 20-minute periods. Goals—Pell 2, McLeod 1, Chew 2.

BIG SET OPEN GAMES.

Athletes are preparing for the third annual indoor open handicap games of the Lawrence Light Guard Athletic Association of Medford at the Armory, on February 24.

These games always attract the leading athletic timber and this year the events will be enhanced by the addition of team races between colleges, Y. M. C. A.'s and "prep." schools.

The open handicap events are 35-yd. dash, 7 ft. limit; 440-yd. dash, 15 yds. limit; 1,000 yd. run, 40 yds. limit; mile run, 60 yds. limit; putting 16-pound shot, 6 ft. limit; high jump, 6 in. limit; 35-yd. hurdle race, 9 ft. limit; 35-yd. dash for members of Company E. Entries will close on February 15 with Captain O. J. Whitney, Medford Armory, Medford.

COURT DECISION MAKES GOTHAM BOXERS HAPPY

New York, Jan. 20.—Magistrate Steinert in the West Side court to-day in discharging the principals in a boxing bout in Tom Sharkey's Athletic Club rendered a decision which leads to the belief that sparring may again become general here.

Commenting upon the arrest of prize fighters and members of the Sharkey Athletic Club, Magistrate Steinert said:

"It seems to me that the law in this case has been strictly complied with."

It was thought that the death of Nathan Rosenberg, an eighteen-year-old boy, caused by a knockout blow in the McFadden Club two days ago, would cast a damper on club bouts, but in view of Magistrate Steinert's decision it is probable that such contests will be much more frequent hereafter.

TROTTING NEW RULES SUGGESTED FOR NEXT SEASON RACING HOW THEY WERE PLACED AT THE NEW ORLEANS TRACKS FOOTBALL YALE MEN THINK GAME IS SAFE ATHLETICS

TROTTING HORSE RULES MAY BE CHANGED BY NATIONAL CONGRESS

By E. E. Cogswell.

From Hartford comes the call for the biennial congress of the National Trotting Association, to be held at the Murray Hill Hotel in New York on February 14. The rules committee will meet two days prior to the congress to go over the rules and receive any suggestions as to their improvement.

It is the needed alterations and new rules that are interesting horsemen. Every [illegible] of the race tracks fully realizes the vast importance of something in this line being done at the coming congress for the betterment of the sport.

New England being the hotbed of light harness horse racing, the ideas that its horsemen have on this question will no doubt be received with welcome by the congress. With this view in mind, and to assist in building up the sport, the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN has collected from prominent turfmen what they considered the most essential additions and changes for the new book of rules, as follows:

All horses not standing for money at the conclusion of the third heat may be ruled out of the race.

Not more than five heats of a race shall be decided in an afternoon, the same to be then postponed to the following day; except in the case of Saturday, the final day of a meeting, when the race must be declared finished and purse divided according to the standing of the horses in the summary.

Associations must absolutely close entries to races on the date advertised under the penalty of expulsion.

Any association placing on their list of entries a horse or horses not entered by the owner, driver or authorized agent shall be fined not less than $100 for each offence, or suspended not less than one year, or both.

Any and all fines imposed in or during the progress of a race must be added to the purse money, the same to be divided in accordance with the purse conditions of said race.

Here are some of the reasons that were given for the making of the rules mentioned: For several years there has been a general cry to shorten races, which has resulted in the public not caring for the long-drawn, split-hair affairs that tend to injure the horses.

Can't Lay Up Heats.

For three seasons now the New England Breeders' Association have sent all horses to the stable that did not stand for a piece of the purse at the end of the third heat, and it has worked to the satisfaction of all. There is no contradiction it has materially shortened the races, as in three heats the opportunity to lay up to the flag has been too dangerous for the drivers to attempt.

In a field of horses it is very liable to take the three heats to finish in a position for money, especially in close-matched events. If a horse cannot stand for a piece of the purse in three heats it is better for him to be in the stable, the spectators will not miss him, as he is not a factor, and the contending horses are yet to race till one gets the required three heats necessary to win.

This plan, too, leaves four horses to race it out, which is better than the plan tried by some associations of making all non heat winners go to the stable at the end of the third heat, thus, in many instances, only leaving two horses to start for the fourth heat.

Five Heats in One Day.

Then many experts favor not more than five heats in an afternoon. The long days are in the Spring and early Summer [illegible], when the horses are far from being in condition to go more than that number without knocking them out for the remainder of the season.

There is a cry that the racing season ought to begin earlier, but the trainers are afraid that if they start in these events and happen to get caught in one of the long split-up races results will be dangerous.

With five heats the limit, it will permit the racing to finish in time for the patrons to get home for their dinner at a seasonable hour.

Some associations have in their conditions of the races the clause: "Races not filling satisfactorily can be reopened without further notice."

Evil Too Apparent.

The evil of this is too apparent for detail. In some cases last year horses were added to events on the very afternoon that the latter were decided.

Many associations have a habit of padding their advertised entry list with horses never named. This is an injustice to the patrons of the sport who go to see certain horses which they have every reason are to race. It is easy to note the wrong done to those who have entered their horses regularly.

The idea of adding the fines to the purse has been agitated by horsemen for a long time. The National Trotting Association has funds enough stored away in its treasury to more than run its affairs. What can be the use of adding up more? What is taken from the drivers that have done wrong give to those travelling the straight and narrow path.

If the parent body cannot get along without the fines, then the cost of membership from the tracks should be increased. The horsemen pay enough in expenses to not have to settle the National Trotting Association's bills in this manner.

FOOTBALL IS SAFE YALE MEN THINK

New Haven, Jan. 20.—Yale lovers of football pointed out to-day that last evening the game was indorsed and pledges to support it under modified rules adopted by the rules committee by Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth and Brown Universities at annual banquets of the alumni of these institutions and by the "big nine" universities of the middle West.

This is regarded as establishing the future of the game under its improved form, as Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania have gone on record as favoring the game with only slight rule changes.

Law Abiding in Majority.

"The law-abiding people are in the majority everywhere. They are usually quiet, however, while the lawless are so vociferous as to [illegible] as to their number [illegible] noise, while [illegible] and unobtrusive [illegible] against [illegible] the law-abiding. Law breakers and the representatives of special interests [illegible] and bulldoze, but they are cowards and if resolutely fought can always be overcome.

"The greatest enemy to representative government, the root of all evil in public affairs, is lawlessness. In a republic the government rests entirely upon the law, which the people make for themselves.

"To many officials feel themselves more bound by what they think is public sentiment than by the law. Just the other day a mayor of a western city publicly stated that a law which was not supported by public sentiment is not binding on either the people or the officials. That is a dangerous doctrine. No official has the right to violate the oath he takes to enforce the law simply because some people do not want the law enforced. He cannot excuse non-enforcement on the ground that public sentiment is against the law. He does not swear to enforce public sentiment. His oath is to uphold the law.

May Be Lawless Clamor.

"What seems to be public sentiment may be and often is the clamor of the lawless and special interests that object to the law. The indifference of good citizens permitted bribery for a long time. At one time it was even argued that public sentiment was in favor of it. But the public conscience was at last aroused to the necessity of stamping out bribery.

"There is too little respect for the majesty of the law in America, and laws to be effective must be respected. The ignoring of laws eventually leads to corruption.

"If a dramshop is allowed to remain open at a time the law demands it to be closed, then the gambling laws cannot be consistently enforced; then other offences denounced by the law must be tolerated; then comes grafting by officials for overlooking their violations; then legislators imbued by the same spirit sell their votes for bribe money, and a reign of corruption follows.

"The perpetuity of government depends upon the manner in which the laws of that government are carried out. When any portion of the laws are not enforced the government is weakened to that extent.

How Laws Are Defied.

"The trust magnate defies the laws of the State against combinations and monopolies, and then calls for the protection of the State for his property. The dramshop keeper wants the law enforced against the man who robs his cash drawer, but thinks he has a right to break the law requiring his saloon to close on Sunday. The burglar detests the law-breaking of the trust, but considers the statute against housebreaking as an interference with his personal liberty. The boodler has no use for the pickpocket, but thinks the statute against bribery is a blue law. Every law looks blue to the man who wants to break it. No government could long exist where every man is his own lawmaker.

"Four years ago the laws against bribery in all of the States were considered as practically dead letters. Everywhere bribery was a crime, but the laws were not executed. Political parties denounced the offense, the press inveighed against corruptionists, but in vain. Up to that time for the hundred years preceding, there had only been about thirty-four cases of bribery reported in the books in all the United States, and there was not an instance in our later history of a successful prosecution and punishment of an offender.

"Bribery became the common and accepted thing. Men gave bribes and thought nothing of it; legislative halls became dens of thieves; the touch of the unclean dollar was over all; and the public conscience was asleep. We had reached that condition described by Demosthenes of Athens:

"'Corruption has introduced such manners as have proved the bane and destruction of our country. Is a man known to have received a bribe? People envy him. Does he own it? They laugh. Is he convicted in due form? They forgive him. So universally has this contagion diffused itself among us.'

Bribery Treason of Peace.

"This language would have described the indifference with which the people in this country looked on bribery four years ago. Then came the revelations, and the people awoke to the realization of the fact that bribery is treason, the treason of peace. They saw the offense in all its enormity, and from one end of the land to the other there was a civic awakening. Now everywhere officials are made to give account at the bar of public opinion for all official acts, and those who prostitute their trusts and sell the powers that belong not to them but to the people, are being made to answer for their offenses. Four years have wrought a wonderful change in the people's view on this question.

"Honesty Best Politics."

"Political parties are beginning to learn that honesty is, after all, the best politics. The people will no longer respond to the sounding brass of mere party names, but a party must stand for something and mean something. Corrupt men used to hide behind the party dress, and whenever its [illegible] would [illegible] out that the party was being assailed. The people have learned that a grafter is a grafter still, whether he calls himself a Democrat or a Republican.

"Grafters do not recognize allegiance to any party. They work with both sides. They shout party fealty to the multitude, and then make common traffic of party loyalty for their own profit. The private citizen often becomes a mere pawn in the game of the grafters. The time has come when good citizens put the welfare of the State above the mere advantage of any one party.

"The fight for four years has been against bribery and official grafting until they have been made infamous in the eyes of men. Now the people are going deeper into the subject and finding out some of the courses of graft, the special privileges and avarice of special interests. Some of these were brought to light in the insurance investigations. Missouri takes pride in the fact that her Insurance Commissioner has been in the forefront of the fight against insurance evils, and that her Attorney General is now engaged in exposing the methods and practices of one of the greatest trusts of the country.

"The word 'graft' is of such recent origin that it has not yet been incorporated in the dictionaries in the sense that it is now generally used. Some weeks ago I was asked to give a definition of the word 'grafter' by the publishers of one of the leading dictionaries.

"The definition is this: 'One who preys on the people, either against the law or under the law. The boodler sells his official vote or buys official acts contrary to law. He is a grafter, but a grafter is not necessarily a boodler. Grafting may or may not be unlawful. It is either a special privilege, exercised contrary to law, or one that the law itself may give.'

Nation's True Greatness.

"Here between the two great oceans on ground consecrated by the blood of the patriots to the principles of liberty and representative government, we have founded an empire such as the conquerors of old never dreamed of; but the greatness of a nation does not consist in mere acreage of territory nor in the strength of battleships alone, but in the purity of its ideals and in the intensity of its devotion to those principles that make for rights, for justice and for humanity. True to the principles of representative government, we shall have the most powerful of all nations of [illegible] earth. Forsaking these, with a government of special interests, national and private prosperity can only be temporary, [illegible] we must finally go as other nations have gone during the flight of time through the ages.

"Without these ideals and principles, the time will come when our strongest military engines and our most powerful naval armaments will be as impotent as the armies and navies of Russia against the victorious Japanese.

"In vain do we build battleships, fortify our coasts and man our guns, unless into every rampart and turret there be brought the ideals and the principles that constitute the foundation of representative government, for these make the men behind the guns.

"Our forefathers fought to give us this government whereby rights [illegible] secured which were never obtained or exercised by any other people. It is for us to preserve it as a government for and by the people. They fought against the enemies of war, we must combat the enemies of peace. They struggled against the enemies from without; we must battle against the enemies within. In the language of Whittier:

'Our fathers to their graves have gone,
Their strife is past, their triumph won,
But sterner trials wait the race
Which rises in their honored place,
A moral warfare with the crime
And folly of an evil time.

So let it be, In God's own might
We gird us for the coming fight
And, strong in Him whose cause is ours,
In conflict with unholy powers,
We grasp the weapons He hath given,
The Light, the Truth, [illegible] Love of Heaven.'"

STUDENTS OBJECT TO RULES TO RAISE THEIR MORAL TONE

SMOKING, THEATRES AND POOL ARE BARRED

Worcester Academy Boys are Chafing Under Additional Restrictions Placed Upon Them—Expect Chaperones

Worcester, Jan. 20.—The effort of Dr. Daniel W. Abercrombie, principal of the Worcester Academy, to elevate the moral tone of the student body by a set of new and strict rules is meeting with considerable opposition from the students themselves. Most of them think the old rules were strict enough but they were mild as a Summer's breeze compared to the wintry blast of the new ones.

Here are a few of them:

No smoking, either on or off the campus.
No theatres.
No pool playing.

By the first rule cigars, cigarettes and pipes all come under the ban. No student will be allowed to smoke anything, anywhere or at any time.

Theatrical performances also are barred. Any student who attends a performance will be haled before the principal and runs the risk of summary dismissal from the academy.

The pool table as a means to while away the hours is under the ban. Violations of this rule will meet with the same punishment as violations of the theatre rule.

And hearken to the students:

"We don't care so much about the rule against smoking," said one of them to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter, "because very few of the boys smoke anyway. But prohibiting us from playing pool or going to the theatre is the limit. What can we do and where can we go on our half holiday? We attend chapel every morning and we get all we want of that. What harm is there in going to a good theatrical performance? It doesn't cost the members of the faculty anything. We don't borrow the price of admission from them.

"The next thing we know we will be forbidden to go out after dark without a chaperon. Maybe they won't let us get up before 6 o'clock. If this keeps on the academy won't need any rules, for there won't be any students here to obey them."

Don'ts For Students At Worcester Academy

Don't smoke cigars.
Don't smoke cigarettes.
Don't smoke pipes.
Don't smoke on or off the campus.
Don't smoke anything, anywhere, any time.
Don't play pool.
Don't go to the theatre.

INDIA THREATENED WITH NEW FAMINE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Calcutta, Jan. 20.—A severe famine threatens a large part of Northern India during the next few months. Famine prices are prevailing in many districts, though famine is not yet prevalent. Common country corn is three times its usual price, while all the cheaper foodstuffs have risen greatly in cost.

There is every indication that a long season of depression and distress will set in all over the empire, and even now in a few isolated districts food is very scarce.

TEACHERS CAN'T PAD

IT IS PROVEN that no woman can teach school in Chicago without a plump form. Chicago Board of Education's edict says: School teachers must be of the proper size and weight and they shall be graded "by their development." Dr. Krauskopf, authority for the board, says: Beauty and brains go together; the tests prove, a fine mind goes with "a well-proportioned body." Thin, scrawny, scraggy, flat-chested women, with pale cheeks and no bosom, cannot pass the doctor there. Experiments and tests carefully conducted have proven there is no beauty so divinely "inspiring" as that of an entrancing bust; a full, plump bust, with the cheerful, helpful nature it brings, are valuable attributes for "the teacher," as well as the wife and sweetheart. A vigorous bust means affectionate, healthy, natural instincts, and only Dr. Conway's Bustoids can restore, enlarge and develop yours "vigorously" 4 to 10 inches or more, without injury or failure. We either do the work or sell you Dr. Conway's Bustoids for home treatment. No exposure. Safe, Sure, and Reliable. Instructions at office free. Sealed particulars, 4c. stamps. CONWAY SPECIFIC CO., 15 Temple Place, Boston.

LOST 8 YEARS, IS FOUND IN POORHOUSE

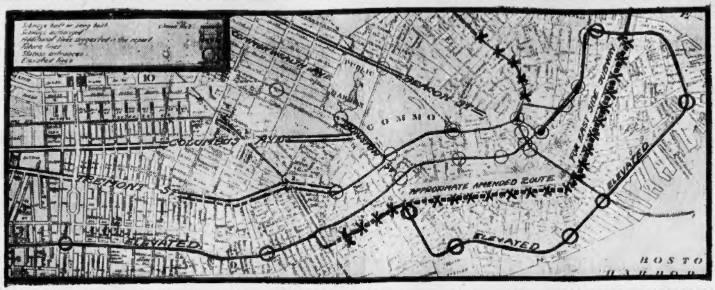
Daughter Reclaims Old Man After War Romance In Cuba.

FATHER HAD REVERSES

Pittsburg, Jan. 20.—Aged and disabled, James Giles will no longer write "poorhouse" as his place of abode. His daughter has found him. He had been lost eight years. There is all the pathos of the ballad "Over the Hills to the Poorhouse" in the seventy-nine years of Giles's life, while Cupid and a wartime romance under the balmy skies of Cuba played him the cruel turn of separating him from his daughter. He has erased ten of the score recorded by Father Times since "Julia is found." James H. Giles was a former well-known architect of Pittsburg.

Eight years ago his daughter, Julia Giles, went to Cuba. It was about the time of the American invasion of the island, and in the muddled condition of the postal service correspondence between father and daughter was interrupted. She did not learn of his reverse in fortune.

Diagram Showing Changes in Subway Commision Wants



This map shows the new lineolved for twenty years to come. Be Board of Subway Commissioners, and if their plans are carried out Boston's rapid transit problem will be ag a great saving of time to patrons oy this system all parts of the city will be brought nearer to the business and shopping sections, thus effectins and altered system suggested by thf the car lines.

EXTEND SUBWAY FROM PUBLIC GARDEN TO COPLEY SQUARE

Board of Commissioners Recommends Big Changes in Present System.

The Boston Transit Commission, in its report just sent to the Legislature, urges the immediate extension of the Boylston street subway to Copley square or some point farther west, the construction of a new subway from the junction of Commonwealth avenue and Beacon streets to Park street, a connection of the subway from Park street to the South Station and the connection of the East Boston tunnel with the new Cambridge subway.

The changes recommended by the commission entail the expenditure of millions and will result in great benefit to the public if they are adopted. With the changes they suggest the transit problem in Boston will have been solved for at least twenty years, they state.

It will be when completed the finest example of subway engineering probably in the world.

The Washington street tunnel, the commission states, will be completed in a year and a half, and, according to the act of the Legislature authorizing the east side subway running from Oak street to Causeway street, the latter cannot be commenced until a year after the completion of the tunnel, so that with the time necessary for construction it will be over five years before the new subway is completed.

The commission recommends that the act providing for the construction of the east side subway be amended so as to allow the subway to be built at a greater distance from Washington street that it may pass over, rather than under, the East Boston tunnel. As now provided for this subway will start at Oak street and run under Harrison avenue, Chauncy, Arch, Franklin, Devonshire, Milk, India, Commercial, Fulton, Cross and Endicott streets to Causeway street.

TO LIVE UNDER THE SEA.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Jan. 20.—A new diver's helmet was exhibited before the last meeting of the Academy of Medicine. It dispenses with air tubes and the inventors hold that the wearer can remain for ten hours under water without discomfort. The poisonous gases exhaled are absorbed by granulated potash, and oxygen is supplied by a reservoir of compressed oxygen.

IT WILL PAY YOU to look through this advertisement with care, as the most remarkable bargains are scattered throughout with a two-fold purpose in view: To give customers a veritable bargain feast and to close out the lots before Stock Day.
